To live in the land of that broadening freedom and liberty with the bounds of law is the privilege of Canadians, a fact that is one of the reasons for which Canadians are duly thankful.

Thanksgiving on Thursday will gather from far and near at the home fireside. And that is a reason for thanksgiving. The family hearth is not so much in prominence today as was but there are several seasons in the year when it still occupies its worthy place. These are thanksgiving and Christmastide. It is well that the tie, which binds the families to the homes of city, town, hamlet and countryside, is still a powerful band, which attracts across wide expanses. Those expanses of space is reduced today by excellent means of transportation. If sons and daughters have gone far away from home they can return quickly in these modern days for Thanksgiving.

A QUEER SIGHT

Some queer bags have followed the drive of Prohibition in rum running on New York. Somehow someone thought a screech owl was a disturber, she said its sounds terrified the inhabitants of one part of the big city, so Long Island Heights, a park for the Society of the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals donned his scaling irons and went up the tree and the bird fluttered to the clothesline pole. Up that Hennaberry went. The bird moved to the steeple of St. Stephens Church. Hennaberry went to the church, and was poked by the point of the steeple tower the bird fluttered to a tree. Finally the persistance of the anti-cruelty officer was rewarded as he caught "Mr. Owl" the screech owl and locked it up. The bird will be loosed outside the quiet zone.

While the warfare is proceeding against those men who permit or cause unnecessary noises, this incident of the humane society officer is something the public can think of. Hennaberry did what he did out of desire to save the creature, even if it meant a steeplechase up across the sky line. How many men would go out of their way, risk their limbs to save a creature?

A joker is near akin to a buffoon; and neither of these is the least related to wit. —Chesterfield.

Beware of biting jests; the more truth they carry with them, the greater the wounds that they give; the greater smarts they cause, the greater scars they leave behind.—Lavater.

RED WAR

War, war, war,
How the cannons roar!
Their crimson flames stretch far,
Death is an open door.

War, war, war!
Recklessly we fling
Thy manhood of the world
To feed this awful thing.

War, war, war!
Deep crimson is the sod,
The eve red shadows pour—
The red dawn cries to God.

War, war, war!
How the cannons sing,
Humanity to mow down—
War is a terrible thing.

IN ENGLAND A MAN LIVED FOUR YEARS ON A DIET OF POTATOES AND MILK, and thrived on it. An investigation into the value of the potato diet conducted recently in England disclosed the a number of observers had lived on a diet of potatoes, supplemented by a little fat and salt for periods of from 14 days. General conclusion is that men can support life in health and vigor on a restricted diet, at any rate for a time; and indefinitely when the potato the staple article in a slightly more varied diet." As to the potato being fattening the report disputes this and says that the starch is retained. It even a rigorously reducing diet, "provided that such things as sweets and pastries and excessive bread are banished". "Potatoes and milk could be boiled, baked or steamed, next comes frying and lastly boiling." So it seems that the best part of the potato lies next the skin and in the skin itself. The man who lived on such a diet of potatoes and milk sure had a swell time. He would have hard work making up for it the next four years.

HAVE YOU HEARD THESE?

A party was coming over in a liner, every member of the party with one exception—spun yarns, asked riddles, and generally enlivened the voyage. At last the silent one was told he must contribute, so he asked a riddle: "What is the difference between myself and a Christmas turkey?" They gave it up. "A Christmas turkey," he told them in biting tones, "is stuffed with chestnuts—but dread."

A reporter got a job on a small provincial paper. At every turn the editor stopped him; he could do nothing right.

"Well," said the reporter one day, "I suppose I'd better leave, I guess."

The only answer he got from the editor was "Ha!"

"Nothing I do seems to please you," the reporter went on, "I think I'll go back to my old business."

The editor looked up. "Oh, and what was your old business?" he asked.

"Newspaper work," came the departing shot.

Help Yourself, Easy Picking

On a big arterial road outside London there is a certain crossing which has acquired notoriety owing to the number of accidents there. One day a car drew in to a garage near this notorious spot and the driver said to the nearest mechanic: "Have you got any spare parts?"

"No," said the mechanic. "but just go forward half a mile to the cross-roads and help yourself."

The steamer North King which first entered this port many years ago under the name of the Dorcas, can still be taken from Kingston, today by a pilot on her last trip down the St. Lawrence River to Sorel where she will be used as a ferry boat. For a long time the Norseman was a mail boat between Toronto and Kingston, later the name was changed to the North King and her career was between Toronto and Charlotte with a run through the 1,000 Islands.

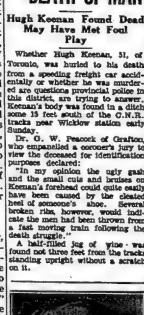
POLICE TO PROBE DEATH OF MAN



Hugh Keenan Found Dead May Have Met Foul Play

Whether Hugh Keenan, 51, of Tamworth, was hurled to his death from a speeding freight car accidentally or whether he was murdered during a drunken brawl, the police in this district, are trying to answer. Keenan's body was found on the track some 15 feet south of the C.N.R. tracks near Wickiow station early Sunday.

Dr. G. W. Peacock of Grafton, who was requested to examine the body, view the deceased for identification purposes, later declared:

"In my opinion the ugly gash and the small cuts and bruises on the deceased's forehead could easily have been caused by the closed fist of someone's else. Several bones in the forehead, would indicate that some blow had been thrown in a fast moving train before the death struggle."

A half-filled jug of wine was found not three feet from the tracks standing upright without a scratch on it.

Bessborough Pays Tribute to Wisdom Canadian People

London, Oct. 22 (CP Cable)—Tribute to the wisdom of the Canadian people in their choice of political leaders in the past 15 years and to those leaders themselves was paid by Sir Hamar Greenwood who a month ago relinquished the post of Governor-General of the Dominion, at a dinner tendered him by the Empire Club.

After mentioning the pleasant personal relations he had with Premier Mackenzie King, Premier Meighen and Premier Bennett, Sir Hamar Greenwood said: "I have the difference between myself and a Christmas turkey?" They gave it up. "A Christmas turkey," he told them in biting tones, "is stuffed with chestnuts—but dread."

Mackenzie King, the former Governor-General declared, "has a unique record of public service. Shortly before retiring from the premiership he had the satisfaction of entrusting leadership during the past 15 years to Mr. King and Mr. Bennett, leaders who have added to and leaders worthy of her trust."

Discussing the future of the position of the Governor-General, he said: "Whatever the effect may be of the change in the functions of the Governor-General may be, one thing is certain—the responsibilities will not diminish, the prestige of the Crown grows."

Bennett Hard Worker

The Earl of Bessborough described Mr. Bennett as a prodigious worker and a man of phenomenal memory and said his ability as a "staunch and loyal friend to whom you can always look for help in your friends. Considerations of health were never allowed to stand in the way of his duty to the State, he was a most hospitable and most delightful host and above all a most loyally devoted to the public service.

"His Majesty's Government has no more devoted servant and in the cause of Empire, no more devoted statesman."

Of Mackenzie King, the speaker said: "He has had to face difficulty and crisis the task of the leader of the Opposition could be easy." He declared the King played the distinguished part his record as a statesman and Prime Minister.

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner in London, and J. H. Thomas, Dominion Secretary, paid tribute to the Earl of Bessborough's public services as Governor-General.

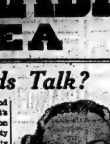
Do Hands Talk?



Do hands talk? They chatter and gesticulate, tell tales out of school. It's time we were to have your mind on your hands now and then, you lovely dollies who would make the beauty grade.

Put your hands on your hips and you're likely to look a bit bossy. If you stand do'll pick the figure backward, they look prettier that way. Let the hands repose gracefully in your laps and everybody will know that you're a nice restful person, sweet to talk with, walk with, do nothing at all with.

Keep smoothing your hair and the hands will tell the world you're vain or ill at ease. That won't do. Fiddle with a necklace, pull at an ear lobe said the observer will get the notion that you are nervous and fussy.

Extending the little finger when holding a tea cup is an affectation. Genuine ladies don't do it. Fingers with manicured nails, the long, fairy feature lunatics or beauty made.

Shy girls hide their hands, gawky ones think them on their knees. Prim ladies fold their mitts demurely on their laps. Sometimes one then one way of reading character by the hands.

CAROLE LOMBARD

Slimness of the nose is no beauty bargain. When the little beak is mirrorless don't use a heavy powder or grind it in. Use a cream base and it revitalizes.

At bed time apply a saturate solution of boric acid. In the morning use cold water, then with which bathed. Eat raw fruits and vegetables drink plenty of water. Cut down on pastries and fats.

Select powder with care, avoid-ing one that has any base.

We suspect that some girls don't use the double mirror as often as they should. Or else they have a hornety-handed girl with a valance of straight hair at the nape line. Wet permanent is an imitation of the natural wonder, but every lock should go up on the curling rod.

Letting the hair grow to a considerable length is all right if it is a trouble but must be done. If there is only a two-inch length the operator will be able to wind it on the rod.

The tall slender girl with a slumbing book was made for the tailored outfit. Short plump ones must consider it. Long lines are their sartorial dish.

Skirts that are full flattered by the bottom are flattering to the femme who kept on growing after she was through. She can wear short jacquettes, too, also picture hats with low crowns.

If she wears slinky evening robes her figure is improved by a wide girdle which clearly defines the waist. For an astringent nature, although such treatment may have to be repeated frequently.

Now that so many girls and women are smoking cigarettes, it might be well to pass on the information that salt-scourings with the brush will bleach and brighten the teeth. The fine crystals grind away the stains of nicotine. Salt is excellent for the gums, hardening them and keeping them of good color.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

Romance not dead when Lovers Wed like this

Did you happen to read in the newspaper the other day about the young couple who walked ninety miles to get married, accompanied by the bride's grandma, aged 80, and who believes in chaperones and propriety?

And if you didn't see the story here is the facts: Betsy Cody and Floyd Myers of Boil Creek, North Carolina, were married covering 90 miles on foot, with grandma making every step of the way and giving away the bride.

Young Cody, who is 21 years of age, produced a smelt-box from his pocket and counted the good folk-tants exactly $5.55 —on the clerk-of-the-court's desk, where the marriage license, and pocketed the nickel. County Judge M. W. Irvin married them and they started on the long trek home, grandma beaming.

The boy and girl accompanied by the highly respectable old lady set out, dressed in full-skirted homespuns, might have saved themselves many a weary mile if they had taken the occasional motor rides offered them, as they trudged along the highway. But grandma didn't think much of these new fangled contraptions known as motor cars. She'd heard folks got killed in them sometimes and the lovers suppressed an adventurous interest in the speeding vehicles in deference to grandma's fears.

After reading this simple saga of the North Carolina couple who took marriages so seriously that they walked ninety miles to have the knot tied with due formality, who says that romance is dead?

The marriage of Betsy Cody and Floyd Myers is distinctly heart-warming in this hard-boiled age, when young people announce they're willing to "try anything once," and jump in and out of marriage with the ease of clowns jumping through hoops in a circus.

And it's pleasant to think of the homey log cabin with hand-hewn beams in which this young couple will make their home. The wide open fireplace with the Dutch oven, in which huge loaves of bread made bread will be baked. And the peppers and herbs and onions will be hanging from the rafters in the living room. The loom where the bed-spreads and table runners will be woven by the bride and her grandmother. From such happy stock came the backbone of this country.

Perhaps these homespuns products will be bought by the agent of some swagger dress shop and in New York, Chicago and Washington to them the charms of the more prim-itive are displayed. These hand-made products have become fashionable in recent years, thanks to the first Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who filled up her husband's study in the White House with these hand-woven fabrics and gave momentum to the Berea College industries.

At any rate, when we read of one marriage in six going on the rocks and young people taking their engagements no more seriously than a date to see the latest movie, it's comforting to think of the North Carolina couple who walked ninety miles because they were sure they were in love and sure that their marriage was going to last.

HEALTH and PSYCHOLOGY

Chronic catarrh is a very prevalent condition. It may often follow several acute attacks of it may be the result of a generally debilitated state of health. Rheumatism may be a cause; overindulgence in tobacco and alcohol can bring about the condition. In some cases, hereditary seems to play a part.

It may be said that an absolutely normal mucous membrane lining of the nasal passage is not exactly rare, although rather uncommon. In other words, most people have a swollen membrane or a deviated septum in the nose, spurs on the cartilaginous division, or some other inflammatory process at work.

To operate on every case (unless real symptoms of actual danger of other resulting serious conditions or impairment of the health is an issue) is a practice to be deplored. Operation is probably advisable in cases where deviations or spurs press on the turbinated bones in this region. Also where the turbinated bones are enlarged and press on the floor of the nose or on the septum. Operation should also be considered where the swollen turbinated bones cut off proper and free breathing and in cases where all necessary local medical treatment for catarrh has failed.

I stress this question of operation because many persons who are sufferers from nasal obstruction or inflammation believe that only an operation can cure them. On the other hand, there are also others who have been operated on and have not found the hoped-for relief, and who, therefore, condemn all operative interference.

Often catarrhal changes have already taken hold further back in the nasal cavities, and the operation is really performed too late. Sometimes even the internal ear has become involved and always the seat of remedial treatment was begun.

Competent and reliable nose and throat specialists should always be consulted in all catarrhal cases. Often much can be done to relieve the symptoms and prevent the onset of an astringent nature, although such treatment may have to be repeated frequently.

Some of the symptoms of catarrh of the nose are embarrassed breathing, dull headache, disinclination or inability to taste or smell, foul smell, marked "running of the nose" and sneezing.

Any ordinary cold may give symptoms, but these soon pass. In chronic catarrh, on the other hand, the symptoms more or less persist, and if left untreated, are far from favorable.

The presence of polypi in the nasal passage may cause catarrhal reactions. These polypi are usually round, smooth, pear-shaped and of grayish-blue color. Usually they are attached to the middle turbinated bone. For polypi, surgery or the cautery treatment is the very best procedure.

Impressions of Europe Gleaned by Mr. Woodside Related at Club Meeting

Tag-bonding through Europe in by unconventional style, Mr. Wilson Woodside, well known journalist and lecturer, has collected first hand impressions of Central Europe and these uneasy days and a wealth of interesting anecdote, which he gave the members of the Women's Canadian Club last evening in an informal and delightful travel talk. Mr. Woodside was introduced to the audience by Mrs. H. Williams, who took the opportunity of welcoming to the first meeting of the season club members and visitors.

Mr. Woodside has come upon situations of which young men dream and hope, visiting Europe again and again and for months at a time following the life of tourist and a guide to a group of teachers an exacting position, working his way across on a cattle boat, and travelling in the owner's cabin as sole passenger on a Danish freighter brought the young traveller to Europe three times and plunged him into experiences encountered only by those, who seek the unusual and who follow unbeaten paths.

A bicycle trip through Europe three years ago was an adventure never to be forgotten. Mr. Woodside who speaks German, French, Danish and English with the people he met, avoiding tourists and tourist places. On his second trip he crossed the Atlantic from Copenhagen to London then bought a second Mast Germany living with young students, passed through Holland and Germany.

In Norway he was the guest of a Norwegian young man, who had made his home almost entirely within the Arctic Circle and was a small lumber baron. His third trip took him to France, Italy, Turkey and Russia.

Italy Organized

Italy he found organized, confident, disciplined. The nationalistic spirit dominates, and as in Germany the youth are dedicated to the state. The state possesses young men and their body and soul. He can have no ambitions, that cannot be realized within the state.

Mr. Woodside was in Rome only fifteen minutes before he was escorted to a police station. He had been standing before Mussolini's palace, his bags about him, consulting a map, when a police official came up and spoke to him, politely accompanying him. He was under suspicion. Not until he was in the court, his credentials scrutinized, a letter from Chief Draper, Toronto, clearly read and his bags thoroughly searched, did he realize, why he had been arrested. In one of his bags was an alarm clock, identical with the "infernal machine" said to be being a time bomb.

Russia, the young traveller found it, was entirely different from the countries he had left behind him. The streets were different, there was no starts, the sidewalks were flooded with pedestrians. All strangely garbed. The men were smocks, and their heads were shaved as clean as convicts. The women wore shoddy dresses, for which they paid enormous prices. There was no feeling of "service" such as one finds in this country and one makes one way in shops, cafes, by angrily demanding to be served. There was no tipping.

Young Russians Curious

The young Russians he met had an absorbing curiosity in the outside world, were greatly interested in pictures he had, but into them they read technical and class condition.

Mr. Woodside having an engineer's interest in architecture was amazed to find that buildings were not the most part poorly constructed. Hurriedly built of poor materials and roughly used they were flimsy. Existing examples of workmanship. Then when they did not stand, the contractors were liquidated, exiled or shot. Lately the Russians have been improving their methods.

Mr. Woodside did not agree with them, however, that things are fine in Russia. The spirit of the Soviet is that no price is too great to pay for their ends and Experience, no sacrifice too costly. From three to four million peasants were killed in a famine the government created to drive the people to collectivized farming. Then if the crops are poor not only the peasants but the heads of the Department of Agriculture are punished. This year the murder of an official in the government was avenged by the deaths of five to seven hundred people, who were dragged from their homes and shot in the streets.

Canada seemed very precious to the returning traveller in contrast. It lacks where there is no freedom of thought or speech, where there is no chance for a young man to live his own life. Mr. Woodside came home more than ever a convinced Canadian.

A vote of appreciation of the members was conveyed by Mrs. Williams for the very enjoyable speech of the evening.

AT THE BELLE

"Anna Karenina"

Garbo and Fredric March In a Picture Which Leads the Year's Movie Output

The new film, based chronologically on Leo Tolstoy's immortal classic, presents Miss Garbo in a famous drama against a true background of Imperialistic Russia at the height of that nation's glory fifty years ago.

Fredric March, acclaimed for his roles in "We Live Again" and "Les Miserables" is co-starred with Miss Garbo as the dashing Count Vronsky. At the top of the galaxy of stars such noted players as Freda Inescort (of "David Copperfield" fame), Maureen O'Sullivan, May Robson, Reginald Denny, Ralph Forbes, Basil Rathbone, Reginald Owen, Reginald Denny, Phoebe Foster, Joan Marsh, Cora Sue Collins and others.

Her Greatest Role

As evidenced by the first scenes in which Garbo appeared for "Anna Karenina," her new picture is the most dazzling, colorful and dramatic production or her entire career. The opening scenes are represented the St. Petersburg railway station, as it appeared fifty years ago. The construction program alone called for six stately mansions, one of the largest ballrooms ever built for a picture, the Opera House of St. Petersburg as it existed in 1880, the interior of a Cathedral; two large military clubs, two private clubhouses, a mile of railroad track, and three complete Russian trains, a stupendous course, a Venetian canal scene with stone structures having an 800 foot frontage.

Ballet and Masurka

Above it all there is a colorful Russian ballet, directed by the famous Viennese choreographer, Mme. Theresa Wallman. The Masurka, which takes place in the grand ballroom, was directed by Chester Hale. Manager Forhan of the Belle places his personal guarantee behind "Anna Karenina." A funny All-Star comedy, and a clever Pete Smith Topical will be exhibited on the same program.

Joan's Happiest Romance

Joan Crawford brings a new kind of picture as well as a new kind of woman to the Belle Theatre tonight at the 11.30 preview presentation frolic with her new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "I Live My Life."

The story is sweet, romantic and at times uproariously funny. The leading man is Brian Aherne, the distinguished English actor, who with this picture comes into his own as a leading man to be reckoned with.

Miss Crawford has never been more glamorous than in this sprightly, magnificently mounted production. Her Adrian-designed costumes are quieter yet more stunning than ever before.

AT THE CAPITOL

"DINKY"

Jackie Cooper and Vaudeville Stars Hoover on Program

Not only has the Capitol Theatre an excellent and rarely seen stage show in "Broadway Follies" with its dazzling array of organizations of twenty and some odd vaudeville specialties, but the screen is presenting that big-little-man Jackie Cooper in his latest feature picture, "Dinky."

With such an entertaining feature picture that stars Jackie Cooper along with "Broadway Follies" the Capitol will undoubtedly play host to most the population of Belleville on Thanksgiving Day holiday. Judging from the vast throngs that stormed the Capitol when they showed the last stage program, the management has prevailed upon the "Follies" company to give a special show starting as usual at 11.30 p.m.

BROADWAY FOLLIES AND BAILEY

To Messrs. Brown and Bailey, go the honors for the honors in presenting this fast-moving and snappy stage show. Long recognized as the two leading dancers in vaudeville stage, they have blended together an act which is called that has won acclaim wherever appearing.

These two clever young fellows are the producers and members of a clever group of performers who offer a real vaudeville entertainment. Foremost in the organization is the charming Miss Hester Bailey who has been featured in several hit-successes, notably the musical comedy "Hello Pop."

"PEPPER" KELLY AND—

Then there are "Pepper" Kelly and his wife who are often compared with the Rowell and Pickens Sisters and who were popular favorites of the KDKA radio station in Pittsburg.

Jack Farrell and Jimmy Jere Layne in another member of the troupe who need no introduction. She sings those torrid torch songs with a style all her own.

Dorce is the name of the lovely girl in all kinds of knots and still remain graceful. Her contortion act is a highlight of the performance.

Supporting the leading players in the Broadway Follies are Dailing MacMahon, and Frank Morgan is at his piano rambling best as the well-meaning father.

The genius which made Director Del Lord's name famous is apparent in every scene of "I Live My Life" . . . in its pace and its fast dramatic scene. You'll be sorry if you don't see "I Live My Life."

"Cure It With Music", a smart musical musical comedy with a host of screen, radio and night club entertainers, and "Mickey's Fire Brigade", an uproarious Walt Disney classic are announced for exhibition on the same program. Regular prices as will prevail. Tickets are now selling at the box office.

SUDBURY PLEASED WITH TALENT IN 'BROADWAY FOLLIES'

The revival of vaudeville at the Capitol Theatre, Belleville, has been marked by the hearty approval of the entertainment loving public as a welcome break in the continuous run of motion pictures. When a revival of vaudeville programs at the Capitol was first announced the Sudbury Star had this to say of previous experience with poor entertainers in this line: "Last night went on vaudeville in general. However, the Capitol management announced that a superior line of stage attraction has been booked, and presented the Sanley singing and variety organization as an earnest of as good and better things to come. The second stage show presented Wednesday and Thursday of this week, after which the company goes to Ottawa, for a lengthy engagement.

The "Broadway Follies" Company has just completed a very successful engagement in Sudbury, and in Sudbury Star of October 13, has this to say of the attraction:

"Stage shows and vaudeville are definitely making a come-back, and one of the reasons is the splendid attendance at the Grand Theatre last night, where Brown and Bailey's "Broadway Follies" are being presented in conjunction with the regular picture program.

"This is a fast-moving Variety Show, with four really outstanding acts, and the remainder good average vaudeville. Browne and Harris, with their dancing duties as master of ceremony, are well known on the Pantages Circuit, and their clever gags, and snappy singing and dancing numbers are novel and entertaining.

Hester Bailey, the clever little lady and star of the "Broadway Pink" company, is ably seconded in her entertainment efforts by the two male leads. Her stage appearance won the approval of the audience, even before her patter charmed them.

Three Radio Stars

"Three former radio stars of WGAR, Cleveland, Ohio, Pepper Kelly States stations, the Kelly Sisters, sang three selections and were one of the most popular features of the show. For many months they were on radio radio time each week.

"One of the finest acrobat dancers in vaudeville, Jack Farrell and Jimmy Kaelin, who offered something new in seemingly tireless energy. Her dancing ran from being the most contortionist exhibition of so many acrobatic dancers, for she combined gracefulness with an extremely pleasing figure.

Cornish and Love with an accordion and dancing offering, made a strong bid for public favor, and are well worth seeing. Dorce, Russian dancer, probably appeared with Pavlova.

Music was provided by the company's own band, "The Seven Aristocrats of Rhythm".

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Oct. 23 (AP)—Strength of the oil and food group industrials issues helped to offset heaviness of scattered rails and other groups.

Most of the carriers were slightly higher during the early stages and Haven issues coincident with the road's financial crisis. Here Haven common rose 3 points but later eased the preferred was off 2¾ to 5%.

Case got into the limelight with a rise about 2 each. Other gains of fractions to a point or so included Standards of New York and California, Montgomery Ward, American Tobacco "B", Johns Manville, Kroger Grocery, Steel. The late tone was a trifle irregular. Trading approximated 2,400,000 shares. The activity was pronounced in early dealings, but the pace slowed later.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Oct. 23—Bidding up of the prices of Hollinger and Teck Hughes imparted interest to the Toronto stock market today. Teck at 4.18 showed its best position in several weeks. Hollinger advanced to 13.95 on moderate turnover. Base metals turned stronger on the support of higher metal prices and were quiet and steady.

Most of the gainers in golds were inclined to recover the losses suffered in the last couple of days under a run on profit taking. Bullion cases was back around 2.90 this afternoon and Dome Extension, Central Patricia and Sicoe were steady to strong.

Action in the cheap oil group speeded up and price gains were general. Obemiska, however, declined its recovery and was holding around 1.00 cents late afternoon.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 23 (CP)—The advance was resisted quite easily by Fred Payne, farmer, and some of the oil and lumber issues on Toronto Industrial Market today. Ford registered a gain of nearly a point in heavy trading while the Spruce were featured by heavy action in brewers and distillers of Vancouver, blocks up to 1,000 shares changing hands at a price advance of 25 cents to $1.40. Metals were off slightly, the only market ignoring the advance of copper, lead and zinc prices in London. Buying from outside was reported in Canadian rails and Imperial as it and International Nickel advanced 1-8 and 3-8 cents respectively. Oils were fractionally higher.

Stirling—On Monday evening over four hundred people assembled to all ages and religious denominations in the community attended the chicken dinner provided by the ladies of St. Paul's United Church, in connection with their anniversary celebration. The dinner itself was up to the usual high standard of quality set by the ladies of this very active church and several years ago which cannot possibly be surpassed.

With the abundance of good things to eat, the tables were cleared, and sweet food dainties came, accomodating well over a hundred guests at each sitting. So great was the crowd that visitors wondered if the supply would run out. Fortunately the experienced ladies of the congregation had prepared well for the occasion, and their efficiency is based upon long experience. Everything to be desired in the way of choice and delicacy of dishes was available for the eating, and the waitresses executed their duty with marked precision and hurried about to fulfill every request of each guest. The four tables of invited visitors partook of one of the most sumptuous meals ever provided by the committee.

SHOWING HOUSE OF POISON PIN

Gory Relic of Borgias Displayed With Record of Many Crimes

London, Oct. 23—(CP)—The Cabinet of 1000 Crimes, a grim relic of the dark days of Renaissance poisoning "bumped off" their enemies with a simple dose of poison, cunningly administered, is the latest of the curiosities now in a department store in London. The box was once the treasured possession of one of the Borgias—a gift from Cesare to his sister Lucrezia, who later became the famous Duchess of Ferrara.

Known as a treasure and wine cabinet, but with dozens of secret hiding places in it, important documents were hidden, the cabinet would be unlocked only by the use of a poisoned key. Enemies and thieves, unfamiliar with the key, met a fate in addition as they turned the lock, a poisoned needle shot into the hand and death followed within a few hours.

The original key was shown with the cabinet—but without the poisoned needle. The secret of the hidden needle, however, is now comprising how many experiencers Borgias and others met their preliminary view.

Inside the cabinet, but still undiscovered, is the formula for the "Cantarella" poison which sent so many people to their death.

Three hundred years after Lucrezia's death the cabinet was given by Cardinal de Medici to the Grand Duke Alexander. It played in Russian till recently smuggled into Poland to become the property of Baron von Landauer.

Louis to Meet Schmeling, Winner to Take on Champion, Fistic Merger for Next Year

Both Fights Likely to be Held in Garden Bowl

LOUIS MAIN FACTOR

Brown Bomber to Fight Twice Before Meeting Schmeling

BY ALAN GOULD

Associated Press Sports Editor

New York, Oct. 23.—(AP)—A fistic merger involving Madison Square Garden and its No. 1 metropolitan rival in the promotion field, Michael Strauss Jacobs, removes any lingering doubt about the main heavyweight setup for 1936.

It means Joe Louis will fight Max Schmeling in June, the winner to be matched with champion James J. Braddock in September.

Both fights probably will be held in the Garden's Long Island City bowl. Jacobs has done some cozy dickering with Detroit and Chicago interests seeking the Louis-Schmeling bout. If it isn't held in New York, it will go to Chicago. The title fight, however, is a certainty for New York.

All this is based on the assumption, first, Louis will crack the uncrackable chin of Paulino Uzcudun in December, besides disposing of the second opponent selected to meet him in March in the Garden; second, the Garden's winter merger with Jacobs and Louis will pave the way for an extended agreement covering the 1936 outdoor season.

The main factor in the deal, of course, is neither Jacobs nor the garden. It can be identified easily as Louis. The Brown Bomber is under contract to fight for Jacobs in this country or abroad until 1940.

The Negro's three fights last summer in New York and Chicago, against Carnera, Levinsky and Baer grossed $1,500,000. The Garden's lone outdoor heavyweight offering, the Braddock-Baer title bout, grossed $305,000. There's no rebuttal to these figures.

The garden can't lose under the new agreement, with Jacobs. It will collect 12 1-2 per cent of the net receipts for each of the indoor bouts featuring Louis.

ABEL RELEASED

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 22.—Tally Abel, veteran of eight campaigns in the National Hockey League, was given his unconditional release today by Manager Clem Loughlin of Chicago Black Hawks. Abel, 33-year-old defenseman, failed to come to terms with the Hawk management last season, and ignored the invitation to report at the training camp here this year.

Loughlin gave the squad of 22 players its first ice scrimmage this morning. He said that there will be no until the league season opens the Hawks will have an hour and a half ice workout each day, with action taking up the afternoons.

In Hockey Training Camps

(By The Canadian Press)

Perhaps the fact the football and hockey seasons are over-lapping accounts for Chicago Black Hawks and Detroit Red Wing defencemen donning rugby helmet to protect them from injury. Forwards may wear the gear if they wish but defencemen must.

The orders yesterday for Clem Loughlin, Black Hawks' coach, and Jack Adams of Detroit recalled efforts made two years ago when Abel was injured to have all National League players equipped with the protection.

Boston Bruins were ordered then to wear the gear and they have retained it. Players on other teams found it too heavy and warm. They pleaded it made it harder to distinguish them and none of the clubs but Boston insisted.

Adams introduced another training gadget yesterday when he set up a canvas contraption about the size of a regular net with holes in the spots hardest to hit. Adams is offering prizes for the best marksmanship.

Some Montreal Maroons are trying another new stunt in their training at Winnipeg. Figuring it will strengthen their legs Lionel Conacher, Babe Siebert and Hooley Northcott started cycling yesterday. They spent two sessions on bicycles, a total of 30 miles.

Tommy Gorman sanctioned the the wheeling but also sent the world champions through a rough session of skinny, their second since they began training Tuesday. With 21 players on the roster and only 17 to be carried, every Maroon is fighting for his job and the practice sessions are lively.

Maroons have so many players in fact two may be sold to New York Rangers. Junior Patrick would not confirm a report he was angling for two unnamed forwards practicing with Gorman's team. The Montreal sector also may send Sammy McManus and Bill Macdonald to Wichaw Buildings.

Earl Seibert, big Ranger defenceman, and Cecil (Dit) Clarke, veteran Montreal Canadiens left wing, are early season's most prominent holdouts. Seibert did not come to terms yesterday but Rangers heard Bun Cook was on his way to camp at Winnipeg.

Manager Sylvio Mantha of Canadiens doesn't seem to be worrying about Joliat's absence. He is satisfied with Habitants' practices and the workouts by Harold Taylor, coached by Seattle who has been working out with the Montrealers. Bun Taber wouldn't replace Joliat. He is a right winger.

Another newcomer to the big league map is Roy Conacher, 17-year-old brother of Lionel of Maroons and Charlie, Toronto's star right winger. Art Ross said at the Boston Bruins' camp John came yesterday the Toronto youngster is headed for the big time.

Toronto Leafs seemed to have passed up young Conacher but signed five other amateurs yesterday at Kitchener. Brothers Bucko Howard and Norval Fitzgerald, Hamilton and George Parsons, Nipissing Miners and Jim Forster, Toronto. All probably will be seasoned with dyracuse.

With so many youngsters on the way up, some veterans are bound to be weakened. One of them is Ace Abel who was given his unconditional freedom yesterday by Chicago. The big defenceman stayed out of the game last season rather than play for the money offered him.

BIG GATE FOR BALMY BEACH

Game With Sarnia Will Decide All Title

Toronto, Oct. 23—(CP)—Rugby—men of Balmy Beach, who have played most of their Toronto games practically in secret during the past years, come into their own Thanksgiving Day when they give thanks for their first big gate since they captured the Dominion championship in 1920.

The once downtrodden O.R.F.U. Team, long victims of the carpetbagger guard here has something Toronto wants in tomorrow's game with Sarnia Imperials at Sarnia. Both teams are expected to pack Varsity Stadium to the rafters.

If grim determination to win and teamplay make a winner the impossible hurdle in Sunday's big gold and blue. Chances are the roaring hollow crowd will see the championship colors as the team, which fell before University of Toronto earlier in the season. That game was the only city championship; tomorrow's is for last prestige and a chance to tie the famed Imps for the league leadership.

Ex-Beach and Sarnia displays against the downtrodden Hamilton Cubs are considered. The latter will have an edge in scoring power. The imperials humiliated the Cubs 36-to-0 in Hamilton.

Beaches Expect to Win

Sarnia supporters point to a 1-0 Sarnia win over the Beaches as the start of the season and claim that is the closest Alex Ponton's men will get this fall. Others recall the Beach machine had not started rolling then as it has now and that the players from Toronto's east-end will topple the mighty Imperials and their undefeated record. If they do it will be the first Sarnia loss in league and playoff games since 1933.

No matter what the outcome, there is promise of the battle developing into the gridiron highlight of the 1935 season. From the stars to the last sub the clubs are evenly matched and a great kicking duel is expected between Eagle "Bummer" Stirling of the Imps and Beach's Ab Box. The high-powered backfield of Ormond Beach, the giant Kansan; Alex Hayes, Roy Petterson and young Arnie McWatters will be matched by Toronto's Art Upper, Bobby Foster, the quarterback, Jim Murchie and Armour Munro.

The Beaches will have no weaklings on the line with such stalwarts as Ernie Hempsey, from Montreal, Bas McNichol, Bobby Reid, Tubby Bell, Doug Wauch formerly of Queens and Syd Reynolds.

BAER REFUSES BOUT

Roseville, Cal., Oct. 22.—Max Baer, the pugilistic prodigal of Livermore, who was christened by Joe Louis that he should become a cattle-raiser, will turn down offers for a comeback fight in California next February, Ancil Hoffman, his manager, said today.

"Max is on the fence," Hoffman said, "Sometimes he wants to fight and sometimes he doesn't."

Leo Lavitt, Oakland promoter, then said he is ready to offer Baer $30,000 for a bout with "Butch" Rogers, Los Angeles slugger, Feb. 22, in Emeryville Ball Park.

STAGE ALL SET FOR BIG GAME

Lindsay O. R. F. U. Squad Has Visions of First Place

With longing and covetous eyes on first place in the Lake Shore group in the Rugby football league sponsored by the Rotary Club of that community, invade Belleville on Thanksgiving Day afternoon for a regular scheduled O.R.F.U. game. The Lindsay squad has lost only one game this season and boasts of a hard-hitting fast-traveling team of pigskin chasers. Coach Breese, who lotored the majority of the Lindsay squad during their period of playing interscholastic football, has taken over the reins as head-coach of the O.R.F.U. team and has a smooth working team with Kenney Cain assuming the placement kick duties, while Ted Grenelle does the majority of the plunging in the open field play. Both of these youths will have to be in the very best of form on Thursday, however, as they will be opposing the best pigskin lugging duo in the group in the person of Belleville's ace punter, Jimmie Poirest. On paper a torrid battle is anticipated for as both squads boast of a hard-hitting line with plenty of beef in each.

Coach Dr. Kennedy, although slightly disappointed over last Saturday's loss at Cobourg, refuses to charges and predicts their winning ways will open up on Thanksgiving versus Lindsay. "Our backfield has speed, while the line of scrimmage is not only husky as well, but carrying the ball for substantial gains in the scrimmage. Many fumbles have cost us more games than I care to think of, but once my boys start to hold on there is nothing to stop this group to match them. We'll win on Thanksgiving, you watch," predicted Coach Kennedy today.

Although the officials for the holiday game have not been named as yet, it is expected the teams will be handled by Referee Ernie Armstrong, Lucks; halves, Cain, Tripp and Campbell; quarter, Lamb; snap, Ringland; middles, Morden and Ringland; middles, Morden and Wakelin; subs, McKee, Kirley, Wilson, Gordon, Hodgson, Lee, Wright, Bell.

Belleville—Flying wing, Johnson; halves, Percival, Rinvee and Spring; quarter, Andrews; snap, Patchett; insides, White and Morgan; middles, Bigley and Sharpe; outsides, Ash and Black; subs, Simmings, Wilson, Hall, Bardell, Kelly, Skatcher and Forester.

CHIEF LYNX AND DUNLOP TO MEET

This Should be Outstanding Bout of The Season

LUCKY NUMBERS

With the stage all set for the second pro-wrestling bout, local fans are beginning to warm up to the event which will be staged at the Belleville Arena that features two of the more villainous types of the mat-squirming game as the star of the main bout. Following repeated and popular requests, Bunny Dunlop opponent to meet the pugnacious Chief Lynx the Rama Reserve Indian wrestler. The local promoter, Sigmund Al "Bunny" Dunlop, of Cleveland, has taken upon himself the arduous task of bringing him to Belleville to give the disliked Indian a sound thrashing in a finish. A rather strange atmosphere surrounds the main bout for Thursday in the fact that neither Chief Lynx nor Al Dunlop have ever tasted defeat in a local ring. Dunlop is a natural and carries the air of a metropolitan show-off while Thompson and Joseph of Jim London, the ex-world's champion grappler; in the person of Chief Lynx, appears in the semi-final bout of the evening versus Joe Katelmach, of Winnipeg. Katelmach is a great favourite locally and is noted as being a clean cut wrestling grappler while little is known of the Greek adonis, who recently came to Canada from the U.S.A. In the opening bout of the night Belleville's only professional wrestler, Irish Steve Taylor, will meet Jim Conkle, the Toronto lightweight, under that he may demand a return bout with Anderlo, the only lightweight to defeat the local grappler. The entire show has been arranged around the main go between Chief Lynx and Al Dunlop. "Just a holiday special in sport" is the term given the show by the matchmakers.

Incidentally 13 free ringside tickets will be given for the holders of the following lucky program numbers—

POLICE SEARCH ESCAPEE

Orillia, Ont., Oct. 23.—(CP)—Every available police officer of the district was pressed into action today as a wide area was searched for trace of 19-year-old Harvey Hagan of Orillia, who escaped from the county jail here Tuesday.

Scaling a 20-foot wall around the jail yard Monday by means of a rope made of sheets, Hagan was last seen by Chief Constable Harris, which made the award.

The peppery catcher, who was a factor in the Cubs' record-breaking drive to the league championship received 75 points against 56 for Bear.

Five of the committee named have been in the Cubs' employ and one selected Wally Berger, Boston Braves' outfielder.

First choice was worth 10 points, second choice nine and down to one point for tenth.

Hartnett won first place both for the final batting average and for clouting the bat. He was among the leading batters with an average of .345 for the season.

Arky Vaughan, Pittsburg Pirate shortstop, leading batsman in both leagues, was awarded third place with 45 points. Billy Herman, Chicago second-baseman, was fourth with 38 points.

ATTACKED BY LIONS

Johannesburg, (CP)—A trainer attacked by lions as a circus in Verenigingg escaped unhurt. Attendants drove off the beasts with pointed brooms and the trainer was able to continue the performance after a short delay.

JIM HUTCHINS

Attention of all-American selectors is directed toward Jim Hutchins, above, University of North Carolina Tar heels fullback, one of the real plungers in the south. Hutchins, a junior, is only 18 years old, weighs 203 pounds and is a sixfooter.

Chief Lynx

Following continued demands for a suitable opponent to meet the above befeathered Indian Chieftain Chief Lynx, local authorities signed Al "Bunny" Dunlop, the Cleveland bedman of the mat, to meet the Rama Reserve grappler at the Belleville Arena on Thursday night in the main bout of the evening. Neither of these two men have been defeated in a local ring, but one must go down Thursday. Two equally good supporting preliminaries have been arranged featuring Joe Katelmach versus Jack Pavlos while Steve Taylor meets Jim Conkle.

The main bout is the battle all local wrestling fans have been long waiting for, as it brings together two of the more pugnacious types of wrestlers.

GABBY HARTNETT MOST VALUABLE IN NATIONAL LOOP

Given Call Over The Great Dizzy Dean as Best in Senior League

Philadelphia, Oct. 22.—Charles (Gabby) Hartnett, catcher for the pennant-winning Chicago Cubs, yesterday was named the most valuable National League player for 1935.

Hartnett was given the nomination over Jerome (Dizzy) Dean, St. Louis Cardinal pitcher, by a committee of eight representing the Baseball Writers' Association of America, which made the award.

The peppery catcher, who was a factor in the Cubs' record-breaking drive to the league championship received 75 points against 56 for Dean.

Five of the committee named have been in the Cubs' employ and one selected Wally Berger, Boston Braves' outfielder.

First choice was worth 10 points, second choice nine and down to one point for tenth.

Hartnett won first place both for the final batting average and for clouting the bat. He was among the leading batters with an average of .345 for the season.

Arky Vaughan, Pittsburg Pirate shortstop, leading batsman in both leagues, was awarded third place with 45 points. Billy Herman, Chicago second-baseman, was fourth with 38 points.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Although Belleville is not exactly noted as a lacrosse centre the short fans of this district are to be given a provincial final box lacrosse game at the Belleville Arena on Saturday night. The contending clubs are from two of the hot-beds of lacrosse in Canada, Toronto Hamilton and Cornwall Midgets will battle it out for the Ontario lacrosse championship. Saturday night at the Arena Gardens. Although lacrosse did not flourish to any great extent locally doubtlessly a good crowd will take in this provincial final, as the game will see the more finished box players in action. The Cornwall kids defeated all comers in the east, while the Hamilton midgets cleaned up all and sundry in Western Ontario. Information from those tow towns is to the effect, that these clubs play a sturdy game of lacrosse and doubtless will be the class of their color and more experienced brothers in the game. At least it is more edification to have a provincial final in our midst than to travel and help yourself to a sport thrill at the Arena on Saturday eve.

"Through the promising channels I've been learned, that Al "Sunny" Dunlop, who takes on Chief Lynx the main bout of Belleville's night's wrestling show at the Arena has the stradegy of exactly 12 pounds over the pugnacious Rama Reserve Indian Chieftain. Both of these matchbeaters have proven their ability to "take it" in previous bouts and doubtless the fans will have a bad decision in a local ring, which makes the scrap all the more interesting. If previous appearances are any criterion he say criterion as to the calibre of Thursday night's main bout, it should be a lively contest as both grapplers are of the more pugnacious type and apply all the holds known to the mat-game to win. Incidentally about the only person we can't worry for is Referee Neri Wells, who will either need assistance or perhaps would be better advised to carry a "policeman's billy" in his hip pocket, just in case of accidents. And for the who faint at the sight of blood or whose hearts are in a weakened condition, we advise them to stay at home as the local ring is destined to be the most torrid and ferocious ever staged in a local ring. Incidentally, the rules and by-laws of the preliminaries is necessary to be made known at this time.

According to the Cahawa sport scribe the Belleville football squad last night defeated the Trenton Devils last Saturday simply because they refused to play for more than points when in position to score. "Too many efforts to garner major scoring punches was the complaint the squad a perfectly good football game but were defeated in a manner in which the Motor City sport scribe explained matters. He also lauded Mase Rigby and called him the most outstanding player on either side. "All through the tilt Rigby was predominate, both carrying the ball and defensive work included. Other sport notes penned by the Cahawa newsman read: "Boasting the best line to be seen on a gridiron for several seasons, the Belleville team started out well and looked to be headed places, until they met the Trenton Devils, coached by Jimmie Polevoli, their safe kicker, who did not play in the game against the "Blue Devils" down in Belleville but who seemed to be able to make up for it on the local field."

It has been said that "lightning never strikes in the same place twice" so therefore it is safe in assuming the local Kennedy-Arnold yields will not make the same mistake against Lindsay, the one Thursday afternoon, as they did versus the Oshawa twelve. Incidentally the local red and blue clad team are in a tough spot on the holiday game, as a reverse for them means certain elimination. Practically the same thing holds good for the visitors, although they have two games to play with the set-back they have met, but with two defeats already on the wrong side of the ledger, locals must handle the Lindsay squad with the holiday and the Cobourg team on Saturday, then the Kennedy-Arnold-Rigby-Ferguson aggregation will be right back in the thick of the battle. Rugby football is fast gaining in popularity locally so doubtlessly the crowd ever in attendance at a fall classic in Belleville will avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing this important struggle.

For the student body of Belleville in senior interscholastic O.R.F.U. group swings into action on Friday afternoon with St. Mikes meeting B.C.I. and Albert College journeying over to the O.S.D.

All managers of National League hockey clubs are commencing an air of optimism as they open their annual fall training periods. A host of youthful and ambitious amateurs are to be trying out for positions on the honored ranks in every camp from the lowly Amerks training in Buffalo to the mighty Montreal Maroons' camp in Winnipeg. Toronto Leafs have signed five almost pures to professional contracts this week, with Roy Conacher, little and scrappy brother of the famous Lionel and Charlie, the pick of the litter, is in jeopardy. In years past the competition for Canadian Olympic team has been more keen each time, but with so many amateurs turning pro, the chances of another Canadian Olympic hockey title are becoming lowered with the loss of better and more experienced players.

Roger Goulin, who drive in the run that gave Detroit the world's baseball championship, was admitted to the matrimonial "I can say I'm fond of lots of girls but I haven't found one yet. I'm going to marry," grins the Tigers' most eligible bachelor.

Tommy Armour Johnny Revolta Meet in Final

Oklahoma City, Oct 23—(AP)—Tommy Armour, two years ago a professional and Johnny Revolta would "go a long way" in golf, today was the last man between the blond Scotch Milwaukee pro and the goal of his player's championship pedigree.

The title match of the professional golfers' association promised to be a thriller with both Armour and Revolta after reaching the final by defeating Al Zimmerman, Portland, Ore., par breakers 4 and 2. "I'll simply play par and if he can beat it, then he will win."

Armour got his ticket to the title match by disposing of the perennially threatening Al Watrous 3 and 1.

AIMS, OBJECTIVES ARE REACHED

Devotional Address

The first session was opened on Tuesday afternoon with Rev. M. L. Hinton of Gananoque, chairman of the Cobourg presbytery officiating as chairman, following the opening hymn, Rev. W. E. G. Smith, Ph.D., of Selby led the gathering in prayer. Rev. Smith was formerly associated to the teaching staff of Albert College of this city and well known here.

Rev. David Wren, M.A., B.D., of Picton, delivered the devotional address. In his remarks he stated, "that the challenge uttered by King Gordon recently in an address delivered at the Metropolitan church in Toronto, (dare the church be Christian), was the challenge we must face and answer, and upon the church's answer to that challenge, depended her future." A ship at sea can be hindered by ill winds, and cross-currents" but only for a time, and then the captain orders the setting of more canvas and the ship proceeds to its destination safely and securely. The church is like that ship an excellent craft and a fine cargo but she is resting on the rough sea and cross-currents. She has to overcome the stormy weather and the cross-currents we encounter be the sayings four: "I shall go forward through the billows of those days of perplexity.

"Too much emphasis has been supposed on appeal for finance in the past" continued the speaker. "Of course finances form a great part in the work but it should be secondary. Prayer should be first to establish that much needed consensus to God. It is well to remember the sayings found in Zech. 4 and 6, "Not by might nor by power, but by My Spirit, sayeth the Lord of Hosts".

Greatest Need is Prayer

The greatest need of the church today is earnest prayer and a closer walk with God. It is true, that we are all present in the midst of these times awaiting with anxious eagerness for news from the war, every hourly war clouds hang low. But it is also true, church history proves that it is in such times as these that she accomplishes most. Trying times are the times when we begin and the church finds her self. Christ's mandate to the Disciples is still ringing out today with the same power. "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." Go ye therefore and teach all nations baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and low, I am with you always even unto the end of the world. There is the challenge that lived down through the years and is ringing in the very conference" said the speaker in conclusion.

Rev. G. Stanley Russell, D.D.,

The main speaker of the opening session, Rev. G. Stanley Russell, D.D., of Deer Park United Church, Toronto, was introduced to the assembly by Rev. A. J. Wilson of Napanee. Dealing with the topic of "Thine Is Unity" Dr. Russell delivered one of his most stirring messages, giving information on the wealth of thought he had devoted to this very timely subject. "We are celebrating the tenth anniversary of the first Canadian Church," stated the doctor, "and we are celebrating "The United Church of Canada born out of the union of three denominations, is the first church to claim Canadian soil as its birthplace. All eyes of the world are watching what it to observe its achievements of those ten years and the years to come. Let us examine it." he stated, and proceeded to describe the three churches which stepped into the newly formed denomination ten years ago, their backgrounds, traditions and traditions which made such a great power for God in their various ways.

Want Day To Come

"It has been said," continued the speaker, "that in the course of the next half century, the old denominational characteristics will disappear entirely. There is a tendency to speed that day from some quarters. That I think is not the aim of the great church and I hope the value of these fine old traditions would be a disaster. We must hold forever before us the old church traditions of all three groups, which have become very successfully one, and with their qualities in one great fold strive to be a greater power for the cause of Christ. Recognition of the United Church of Canada are all fine qualities that make for progress, and the strength is added to, by the union of them. We must not let the old tradition fall but rather keep them for encouragement in future days.

With the birth of the United Church ten years ago, came added responsibility for each one within it. Now, what of the future? There must be a paramount, passionate quest on the part of the great United Church of Canada for the souls of men and with that as our objective the work of the Lord will be forward in rapid strides. The gulf between those who entered the great union and those who remained out will not always be so wide. We in our willingness to put forth a united effort in the name of Christ, did not lose any of the individual backgrounds of the faith we were associated with. There was no sacrificing in this respect. We held fast to denomination and united with all the strength we could muster in the strongest to the cause of mankind. Let us therefore, grasp the responsibility which is ours.

Evening Program

The afternoon session was brought to a close as Rev. C. W. Barrett led the large gathering in prayer, and the following a short recess during when billeting arrangements for the visiting delegates were completed. The guests then retired to the banquet hall below where tables, gaily decorated in an artistic manner, by the ladies of the church, and heavily laden with choice dishes which made a delightful supper for all who were in attendance. After the supper, a carefully planned supper program was presented by Community singing under the leadership of Rev. R. O. Kitsmoff of Montreal. The presiding chairman over this part of the day's activities was Rev. A. E. Young chairman of the Conference Lay Association. Mr. Bannister, well known resident of Belleville, also offered two fine tenor solos. Rev. R. D. Payne brought greetings from the Belleville Ministerial Association.

Lines to Meet

In his short address he spoke of the parallel lines of the railroad track coming (apparently) together at the end of one line of vision. He likened the great Christian churches to these lines. Running the same way with the same object in view, and some where off in the distance, perhaps the Last Great Conference and co-operation they would meet, and become one great body of Christ. The speaker for the supper hour was introduced at this period by Rev. H. W. Ackerman of Belleville. Judge J. Arthur Jackson K.C. of Belleville, was the speaker of the district, where he was associated with the lay association of the Bay of Quinte Conference before his duties called him to the city of Toronto. He delivered a fine address on the theme of "Christianization of our Canadian Life". Among the other very interesting remarks made by this outstanding citizen he stated, "that in view of the fact, that home life was not up to its standard of the past great care and a heavy responsibility was greatly increased. The most important part of the building of our nation was the foundation laid in the home in days gone by, and if the home is not up to par, the church must restore it. Addressing the officials of the church he urged them to acquaint themselves with the honor that had been placed upon them. We regard our obligations in the church too lightly altogether. It is a great honor to be placed in an official capacity in an organization which has the highest aim of any group of people, that of furthering God's Kingdom on Earth.

Evening Session in Auditorium

At 8 p.m. the final session of the two days activities were opened with Dr. James Semple, S. T. D., D.Th., pastor of Bridge Street United Church presiding over the service. A short organ recital given by V. F. Hunt, A.G.O., organist and director of Bridge Street Church, which included the playing of that ever popular "Gloh' Home" from the (New World Symphony) was greatly appreciated. The first item of portion of this session was directed by the Belleville choir, which was followed by a tenor solo given by Rev. R. G. Mowbray of Montreal, who rendered "Lead Kindly Light" in a very fine manner. The speaker for the evening session was not a stranger to the majority of those present, Rev. R. B. Cooper, D.D., secretary of the Home Missions Department of the United Church, who spoke on the subject "Christianization of the United Church to the Dominion of Canada" with all the force and fire for which he is fa-mous. Ten years of the greatest fellowship he had ever known was his experience in the greatest enterprise ever attempted by a group of churches.

Overlapping Unchristian

"It has always been my belief," said the speaker, "that overlapping in small communities was unchristian. Towns throughout Canada with only a handful of people and churches to take care of them in practically every place, than those of the present day, and serve the needs of two or three of these tiny congregations that find it hard to make a go of it.

We observe the achievements of the past, ten years we have just reason to be proud of our church. But we must not stand admiring the work already finished, but rather turn our eyes on the future with all the obligations we have, and put our shoulders to the wheel in real service.

The days of the real hero have passed. We have them today within our church. Sacrificing their own pleasures, and in some cases the education of their children, our men are staying to their guns in far off places, that the work might go on.

The meeting was closed with the singing of another hymn and the first day of this great conference was drawn to a very successful close. The attendance at all sessions on the first day was larger than any such gathering held so far, according to those in authority.

No, I didn't but it gives me an idear, pop said. If I can get it through his thick pated hide that he's a nuisance around here maybe he'll take it into his head to take his self somewhere else, such as home, he said, and ma said, But Wilburn he's our guest.

You're telling me, pop said.

Meaning that was just a true-by and pritty soon Uncle Albi came down, saying, Good morning, everybody, I think there's some cream left for little old Albi's coffee haw haw haw.

I trust you haven't got a bad head ake, pop said, and Uncle Albi said, I haven't got any kind of a head ake, why should I?

Oh gods, if I had put in a nite of drinking such as you put in last nite, pop said, my head would be bursting with the reverberations, pop said. By golles you sounded like a symfiony orkester made up of a saw mill, a boiler factory and 5 riveting machines. I dont know how I got to sleep, I guess I was stunned, he said, and Uncle Albi said, imagine that. I always injoy a little evening of fun and frolic but naturelly I dont want to keep awake other people awake. However that makes us even, so please don't feel bad about it. I mean I have now coming home from the bankers or wherever you were, and I dont like to see pop forget a slam, we you must of forgotten to slam it, he said.

Bergers and and story men may creep into their own homes from force of habit but I'm not a berger, not yet, pop said, and Uncle Albi said, Haven't you got your bergling license yet, haw haw haw.

Making pop so mad he scribbled his newspaper just as Uncle Albi was trying to look at the headline and gave the front door a real slam on his way out.

PREMIER DEFERS CANCELLATION OF POWER CONTRACTS

Announcement Made After Conference With Quebec Interests

NEW OFFER EXPECTED

Bondholders Saw Issues Increase After Statement

Toronto, Oct. 23 (CP)—The Quebec Power contract question entered on anew phase today as Ontario's three-man Hydro Commission prepared to assemble in special session.

The meeting followed Premier Hepburn's announcement yesterday the Cabinet had deferred proclamation—recommended by the Commission—of the Power Commission Act, 1938, which provided for outright cancellation of power purchase contracts with four Quebec companies.

The Commission had previously determined to cut off all Quebec power at midnight, October 31, but Hydro Chairman T. Stewart Lyon declared last night: "I will neither reaffirm nor deny my statement that Quebec current would be cut off after October 31."

Postponement of cancellation was announced by the Premier after a conference between the Cabinet and representatives of Gatineau, Beauharnois, Maclaren-Quebec and Ontario Power, the four companies affected by the Cancellation Act.

Following the conference the power men conferred among themselves in a downtown hotel and then said Mr. Mitchell. They declined to speak of future developments.

Probably Concessions

Reason for postponement, the Premier said, was to give the companies an opportunity to make a concrete offer of concessions in the existing concessions" they are prepared to make.

Still determined to cancel the contracts, the Premier said, cancellation might be withheld pending the new agreements with the Quebec interests—if new agreements can be reached—and ratified by the Legislature.

Meanwhile the next step was a consultation between the companies and Hydro engineers during which the Premier expect to Cabinet but other than declaring the Government would insist if the companies were "stalling" the Premier did not indicate how long a period might be given before the report.

Mr. Hepburn reported a spirit of optimism at the conference and this brought from opposition leader Drew Thursday last night the retort if there was any such spirit it was because the Premier "changed his tune chiefly." The conservative attitude to the contracts had not changed, said Mr. Henry, during the past debates, when he urged modification rather than cancellation.

Power Bonds Increase

Prior to the meeting with the power interests, Mr. Hepburn conferred with Hon. Honore Mercier, Provincial Treasurer and Provincial Auditor Arthur Amos, director of Hydro-Electric power and Premier's department. Hon. J. L. Ralston of Montreal, former Cabinet Minister in the King Government, met the Premier but said power had not been brought up in their conversation.

Bondholders of the Quebec Power group saw their issues appreciate materially in value on the Montreal and Toronto market as the power interests conferred with the Cabinet.

"Installment Marriage"

by

Janet Doran

"Where are you going, Michael?" Her soft, blurred voice was a ragged whisper, and Michael stopped at the door.

"Out," he said briefly, a little grimly, defiantly.

Michael Judy ran across the room, flung open the kitchenette door and picked up the stack of bills. "Michael, you didn't forget these, simply because you're angry at me?"

"Don't worry," he said coldly, "I'll be able to pay my bills, Judy, even if I do spend one evening out of your sight." He snapped a glove into his hand, tucked, and his mouth twisted to an ironic grimace. "After all, managed to keep out of jail, and out of bankruptcy, you know, before we married."

The door closed after him with the finality, the irrefutable conclusion of a closed issue, and Judy stood staring at the blank door, a little tense line of anxiety between her eyes, as she listened intently, hopefully, for his footsteps to falter, to slow down, and turn back.

He did not pause. Silence fell over the little apartment, and after a long while, she moved stiffly, as if she were cold and numb, and began putting the room to rights.

The kitchen, the sink full of dishes, beat her heart a long time. She washed and dried, scoured and cleaned, until the kitchen room was shining, spick and span. She then cleaned the living room, put the fur coat away on a hanger in her closet, and carried out the exercise from the living room. Silence.

The chaste little bridge model, she placed on the top shelf of her closet, for back of her hats, and it became another white milestone along the highway of her marriage. She knew with the adult reasoning that Michael had taught her, that no amount of explanation, of self-abasement, would in the least deter him from his mental pattern of justification. She knew, with the aging, slow sureness that has its lure to learn, and can never be taught, that Michael had the justification completely built in his mind. He forgave he found, and built up, the excuse to follow it.

She made a mould of fruit gelatine for the next day's dessert, and opening the ice-box door, discovered the tiny, chaste little caterer's birthday cake, complete with sand-pail, that Michael had bought. Had bought, and quite forgotten, in his passionate quest for martyred vanity.

She carried it into the living room and lit the candles, one by one, crying softly, as each one burned, bravely, sadly.

When they had burned down to the holders, she blew them out, but did not cut the cake. She would never cut the cake. She would keep it, a living memento, a green tombstone on the grave of something beautiful and precious that had been killed. Destroyed, bartered in exchange for a wisdom, a knowledge she would give anything not to possess.

At two, Michael came back, unsteadily. A little drunk. He closed the door very carefully, and then walked across to the table, and laid his hat, gloves and scarf down.

Unwinking, owlishly, he stared at the little birthday cake, with the burned-out candles on it, and the defiance, the arrogance left him. He willed, and turned to face Judy, sitting in the corner of the divan.

"I—er—I forgot, Judy. I'm sorry. I was pretty mad. Pretty much of a sap." He sat down on the divan and lowered his head into his hands, resting his elbows on his knees as if his head hurt him. "Say, I'm sorry, Judy. It was your birthday, and I spoiled it."

"There's lipstick all over your chin, Michael," Judy said coldly, in a high little lady voice, "here's even some on one of your teeth!"

CHAPTER 14.

ALLISON MAHAR

Judy got up, walked into the bedroom and snapped on the light with far from steady fingers. She knew that if she stayed in the same room with Michael ten seconds longer, she would be crying bitterly. Crying and quarreling.

Michael said uneasily, "I'm sorry, Judy." She repeated it, and came to stand in the bedroom door, watching her, running her fingers into brown hands through his tumbled hair, noting that he had lost one of his eyes, face, as if to erase the blurred confusion in his mind, "I didn't mean to be such a heel. I—I love you so, Judy! Because I couldn't bear having you mad at me, Judy!"

Judy laid down her silver hairbrush very carefully; moved the comb an inch, as if it were very important that it lie next to the creamy linen dresser scarf.

"So you wanted straight out our quarrel, your quarrel with me, Michael, to another woman's arms!" Judy knew by the sudden pallor of that icy, brittle little cascade of crisp sounds that she was not conscious of speaking the words, "Because you loved me so much you couldn't stay straight to Allison Mahar's arms and kisses!"

Michael swayed slightly, and he leaned one shoulder against the door and his amber eyes darkened to velvet brown, and the flush slowly receded from his face, leaving it white, gray almost.

"It was Allison Mahar, wasn't it, Michael?" Judy pursued remorselessly. "The girl you know before me? The girl who wrote you those letters, and called you, here at the apartment, tonight?"

"Yes," Michael admitted wearily, "Yes. It was Allison Judy."

"How many times did you kiss her, Michael?" Judy knew that she was deliberately selecting the knife, deliberately aiming the goad that was to tear at her heart, her security, forever more, but nothing could stop her, now. She was locked tight in the grip of something stronger than self, than reason, stronger than love, even, and she knew deep down in her heart, that the answer was going to kill something. Destroy more of the precious dream that had been far dearer than life.

"Two or three times; several times, I guess. I don't know." Michael took out his handkerchief, and began, mechanically, instinctively, to remove the lipstick from his chin, his mouth, his teeth. "I had a couple of drinks and I guess they made a fool of me. I didn't want to kiss her, Judy! I swear I didn't. It—it just happened."

"Did you did?" Judy was bewildered, confused by the conflicting emotions raging through her mind. She wasn't angry at Michael for kissing Allison Mahar! She was only hurt that he had wanted to. That he had been waiting, watching his chance for an excuse, an opportunity to go to her. Renew their old romance!

"Judy," Michael began, sitting down on the end of his bed, and making no move to undress, apparently lost on contemplation of her mechanical preparations for retiring, "Judy, a kiss is Allison, isn't—isn't important. It isn't sacred. She's very sophisticated, worldly, and it's like a handclasp from any other woman. You——you wouldn't mind if I shook hands with another woman, Judy, if she were necessary to my business? If Allison knows all the right people; she belongs to the Linwood Country Club, and she throws a lot of tea sales my way through the years. You're grateful, Michael! You feel you should repay her with kisses?"

"I might have known it was impossible to trust any woman with honesty," Michael growled, shrugging out of his jacket, and flinging it onto a chair. "Wrenching cufflinks from his cuffs savagely. "I could have lied to you, Judy! If I didn't love you, I'd never have kept our past——to tell each other everything!"

"You could have lied to me, Michael," Judy said, her voice trailing, and thick, "because you know how to, well!"

"I shall in the future," Michael hissed, "you're giving me a matrimonial degree in falsehood. I shan't be likely to forget in a hurry!"

Judy crept into her bed, pulled the covers up, and turned her back to the room, to Michael, angrily yanking off clothes, flinging his shoes down, breathing in hard, angry gusts.

Michael snapped off the light, burrowed angrily down into his covers, and after a while, his angry breathing slowed down to a steady, even regularity, and Judy knew that he slept.

It must have been almost dawn, when she finally fought clear of the turmoil and came to in her weary mind, and slept. At least, it seemed but a matter of minutes between consciousness, and the shrill blare of the alarm clock.

Michael pushed open the door, and brought a bed-tray, laden with steaming coffee, crisp toast and shirred eggs, and a frosty glass of grapefruit and orange juice.

He set the tray down, brought his own pillows and gravely placed them behind Judy's head. His face was lined and tired, and his brown eyes had never been more humble, wistful, pleading, as he adjusted the tray over Judy's lap, and removed for the little quilted satin bed jacket, she wore.

"Forgive me, brute, Judy? Please?" he whispered, brushing her pale cheek with his lips. "I'm so sorry I could die. I love you so, Judy! It won't happen again!"

"No, Michael, it won't happen again," I was vile! I——. I acted just like a——. wife!" Judy took his big hands between her own, and held on to the tears, and Michael's arms held her close to the big rocky throbs of his heart for a long moment.

"Just try," he grinned at her soberly, very loving a moment later, "just try and be green-eyed jealous, and see what happens!"

He poured her coffee, added two lumps, and then a small amount of cream, and began buttering a roll, expertly.

"Would you like to see the Army-Navy game, Saturday? I've tickets. Or, would you like to go to the Beef Bill Somers of The Chronicle."

"Michael, darling! Judy was fascinated with excitement, with the hysterical relief that follows nerve strain, "Mike," she ended solemnly, "I've never, never seen one——. a football game, I mean! I'm always content to watch the game!"

"Michael," Judy gasped delightedly, "Michael, you did it! You got me that coat I want to the game!"

He kissed her soft apricot cheek, then her tiny pink ear, and then her soft, tremulous lips.

"Did you think it would be fun going to a doggy game like that, Sweetheart, wearing old duds? You'll knock their eyes out, you'll slay a few dragons, and score a touchdown or so all on your own! I hope you'll like it!"

Judy glanced at the clock. Hastily wriggled out from under the tray.

"Look at the time, Mike Swayne! I'll be late!" she gasped, dashing for the bath and shower in swift panic.

"Hope you get fired," Michael shouted after her cheerfully, "hope you get sent right home for good! I could stand it to have my wife just a plain hausfrau, Judy-mine!" He whistled softly, as he cleared away the breakfast things, began getting ready to go to work.

"But, Michael," Judy was back again, rosy and shining and fresh, "you're crazy! I can't get fired for years and years! Not until we're old dodos, and have some money saved, some bonds and insurance paid for!" She wriggled into a chic little soft blue wool suit, and began applying cream, powder, make-up. "We couldn't have married under any other circumstances! Don't let's be silly about it!"

"Silly or not," Michael observed soberly, "I'm not crazy over having my wife punch a time-clock every morning! And it won't be long before I'll have this racket licked, and change a few things!"

He felt of the bills he had jammed into his topcoat pocket, and brought them out.

"These, for Pantaloon, Mrs. Swayne," he concluded, "will be receipted pid, before night! I'll make you a present of them!"

Judy went to work with a lighter heart, and Michael was at last understanding the first principle of the credit system: meeting payments as they fall due.

She forgot to ask him about the couple that night, and the next day the big Army-Navy game exploded in much she found to do, and nothing else. She had recklessly treated herself to a new, smart little black velvet dress, and a bright scarf to go with the new coat, and snuggled down beside Michael in the ratish old roadster, she felt nearer to supreme happiness than ever before in her life.

Michael settled her in their seats, tucked a thick, heavy wool robe about her feet and knees, and turned to glance about him at the gala, high-hearted football throng.

"Look, Judy," he exclaimed suddenly, in a soft murmur of surprise, "there's Allison Mahar! Over there in that box with Bill Pierce, the sports editor!" He inhaled deeply several times, quickly, on his cigarette, and went on:

"I'll go and bring them over! I want you to meet her. You'll see what I mean——"

"I'll go and bring them over! I want you to meet her. You'll see what I mean——"

Judy watched Allison Mahar! Over there in that box with Bill Pierce, the sports editor!" He inhaled deeply several times, quickly, on his cigarette, and went on:

CARRYING PLACE.

Carrying Place, Oct. 23—Speaking before the Rotary audience over 50 crowd into Wooler Town Hall for an event of its kind, Lloyd Harrison, fourteen-old-son of Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Hennessey and pupil of the local school, on Monday evening won first award in public speaking along with the Whitney Fraser trophy emblematic of the township championship and the right to represent Murray township schools at the county finals in Cobourg on November 16th. Fourteen speakers appeared on the platform during the evening, two from the local school, the other one being Norma Cooper of Gardenville, Second place and the township cup was won by Margaret Genevoix of Mount Elon school while third place was awarded Eleanor Conghlan of Wooler.

Taking the somewhat unusual topic of "Why I Intend to Remain a Bachelor", Lloyd elaborated on the trials and tribulations of matrimony, interspersing a few verses from a song from the end of his address. The audience found the rendition and impromptu remarks interesting and entertaining and gave the young speaker hearty applause for his effort. Thirteen was not an unlucky number for him, for though he appeared in thirteenth place on the programme the judges refused to enter competition. Fraser won the same championship cup was won for the first time by Miss Norma Hennessey, a sister of the recent winner; and this is the first time since then that the local school has won the cup. The trophy will remain in the school for a year and then will be competed for again at Wooler next autumn.

An elimination contest among five young speakers was held in the senior room of the local school last Friday afternoon for the purpose of selecting two representatives, one for each room, to send to Wooler. The very fine speeches were made and the decision of the judges declared selection of winners difficult. The successful ones were Norma Cooper, Velma and Madeline Bertrand, Austin Clare and Lloyd Hennessey. Of the speakers Norma and Lloyd were chosen as winners to attend the contest at Wooler.

A day of perfect October weather was Sunday, and church-goers were not slow to appreciate it. Anniversary services were held both morning and evening in the United church. with Rev. Fred Horton of Foxboro as guest speaker for the day. The interior of the church was tastefully decorated with potted plants and foliage and a good congregation gathered at both services. In his morning address Rev. Mr. Horton chose as his topic the parable of the sower and the seed, and proceeded to deal with the topic under the various heads of the sower, the seed, the soil and the fruit. The seed, he pointed out, was the Word of Life, while the soil was the great mass of hearers. These he subdivided into four types, the wayside hearers who allow worldly cares and temptations to keep the good seed, the stony-ground hearers who are of too shallow a nature long to harbour the seed, the thorny-ground listeners who allow the forces of evil to grow up and choke out the good word, and the good-ground hearers who increase in grace and goodness as the good seed grows. Hymns sung during the morning service included "The Church's One Foundation" and "Rise up, ye men of God". Rev. Mr. Sanders was in Foxboro for the day, exchanging pulpits with Mr. Horton.

A general complaint of sore arms in the neighborhood of the school is in evidence as small-pox vaccine given to twenty-two scholars last week on Monday proves to be at work. However, the pupils have little fault to find as the dangers of small-pox has been well pointed out to them by the local Medical Officer of Health, Dr. E. A. McQuade of Tweed, and vaccination is free and parents have been invited to bring any children over the age of six months to the school on Monday days to receive the treatment. It is the aim of Dr. McQuade, who is one of the pioneer sponsors of this sort of work in Eastern Ontario, that the township should be rendered as nearly disease-proof as possible by the systematic and constant administration of toxoid and sera and vaccines. He points out with pride that for over three years since a house in the township has been placed under quarantine, and he urges that all children who did not receive the toxin against that disease two years ago take it now. Cyrrying Place school was the first of the township schools visited and in addition to the 22 who were vaccinated against small-pox a further fifteen smaller pupils were toxoided against diphtheria. Miss Maureen Coulley, R.N., of Trenton, accompanied Dr. McQuade, and very unofficial attention is given the children as they receive treatments.

Dr. McQuade may well be proud of the work which he has done, and of the way in which surrounding townships are starting to follow up the example set by this part of the county. Vaccination and inoculation are now offered free to pupils of nearly every township near and at a next step it is proposed to combat all pupils against the dreaded scarlet fever.

A jolly dance was held in St. John's Parish Hall on Friday evening last, sponsored again by Messrs. Stuart Chase and Frank Baker. With a Wellington orchestra supplying the music a merry crowd danced until the small hours.

Mr. and Mrs. John St. Pierre of Cobourg were guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hicks.

Rev. Fred Horton was a dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Le Feur on Sunday.

Sunday morning services at St. John's Anglican Church were well attended.

On Saturday, October 19th, Mrs. William D. Smith of Stirling, who is visiting Miss Hill and Mr. D. H. Howe, celebrated her eighty-sixth birthday. In the evening children and grandchildren of Mr. Howe gathered at the home in honour of the elderly lady and to offer congratulations. As a token of esteem she was presented with a number of gifts and two birthday cakes. A pleasant evening of visiting and games came to a close when shortly after midnight those present served with Mrs. Smith blowing out all the candles on the cakes, then cutting and serving them. Mrs. Smith expressed surprised and very much pleased at the good wishes and the party this offered her, and thanked one and all for their kind thoughts.

TARZAN THE INVINCIBLE

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service).

As the lion turned toward her, La realized what had happened. The lion had been stalking her, and seeing a leopard about to seize his prey, he had leaped to battle in his defense. She had been saved, but only to fall victim immediately to a more terrible beast.

She wondered why the lion did not charge. She did not know that within that little brain her secret had aroused the memory of another day, when Tarzan had also bound upon the sacrificial altar of Opar with Jad-bal-ja the golden lion, standing guard above him.

A woman had come, this same woman, and Tarzan, his master had told him not to harm her, and she had approached and cut the bonds that secured him. Jad-bal-ja remembered too, that if he was not to harm her, then nothing must harm her.

But all this La of Opar did not know. To her it was not yet recognized Jad-bal-ja. She still meant to fight, yet there was something in the lion's attitude she could not understand. He was not charging—he was merely walking toward her!

MAY REVISE TREATIES IN GERMANY'S FAVOR

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Oxford, O., Oct. 25 (CP)—Private Thomas Jefferson Hall, Miami University freshman from Hall City, Oklahoma, does with his name things.

The Rhodes Scholarship Journal, he wrote, is known a month for the National Youth Administration; puts in 24 hours as an assistant in the Department of Physics; spends five or six hours a week reading papers; acts as office boy for a local druggist; reveals himself as a night; carries 20 hours of academic work, making another 20 hours of courses; plays in the university band—and habitually smokes straight "A's."

Milwaukee, Oct. 25 (CP)— His first supplies have arrived but Raleigh Gabel, Superintendent of street construction, said he didn't know where to start a relief repair job.

At the outset of the government's program Gamble said he filed requisitions for sand, gravel, tools and other necessary supplies. The first shipment was delivered to him Thursday. I was a bit of a surprise.

BANNON FEARED GANG VENGEANCE

Says That Was Reason of Pleading Guilty to Charge

London, Ont., Oct. 25 (CP)—Fear of gang vengeance was Jack Bannon's reason for offering to plead guilty to a charge of conspiracy in the kidnapping of John S. Labatt, defence counsel A. S. Ferguson suggested in the jury in his address today. By pleading guilty the former gunman hoped the story of gang helping police in the case would not be known publicly, he said. Bannon is tried on charges of kidnapping and armed robbery of John S. Labatt is expected to end today.

Attacking the testimony of Michael McGrail, confessed abductor of the wealthy brewer a year ago last August, Mr. Ferguson said the witness was determined to free David Meisner, now serving a 15-year penitentiary term in jail Bannon's place.

Defence counsel branded McGrail's story as a "tissue of lies" and pointed to the variance of his evidence with that of Meisner.

"Who is McGrail? trying to leave out of the picture who is he trying to protect?" asked Mr. Ferguson, referring to the statement that three men were at the cottage the night before he was released while McGrail, Meisner and Russell Knowles were there.

The first Canadian treaty with a foreign country made independently of the United Kingdom, a fisheries agreement with the United States, bears the signature of Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice in the new government. Mr. Lapointe, parliamentary veteran, was first elected to the House of Commons, March, 1904. On the death of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1919 he was the chief's old seat of Quebec East, which he has held since. He was born in Ysamaska in Quebec County, Que., 58 years ago, educated at Laval University and practised law in Kamouraska and Quebec. He was appointed Minister of Marine and Fisheries in 1921, Minister of Justice in 1924. He represented Canada at two Imperial Conferences and at other international gatherings.

In 1902 Charles A. Dunning, once again Minister of Finance, left Regina to carve a home from the Canadian prairies. He became a hardman on a farm near Portelan, Sask., at $10 a month. Today he became Minister of Finance for the second time after being Premier of Saskatchewan and a leader for years among western grain growers.

He entered the Saskatchewan House in 1916, becoming Provincial Treasurer. In 1922 he became Premier and in 1926 moved to the Federal field as Minister of Railways. On the death of Hon. Charles H. Robb in 1929 he was appointed Minister of Trade and Commerce. In 1930 he was elected to the House of Commons and in 1932 moved to the Federal field as Minister of Railways. On the death of Hon. His public activities have encompassed a number of agricultural commissions and ments. In 1917 he became Minister of Agriculture in Sir Robert Borden's Union Government and resigned the Western Progressive Insurgents who backed Parliament 63 strong, and inspired their counsels for some years before handing the torch to the late Premier Robert Forke. In 1929 he re-entered politics, this time as the Minister of Railways under Mackenzie King.

Mr. Crerar grew up with Western Canada, having gone there 54 years ago, at the age of five.

Mr. Crerar, born in Perth County, Ont., 1876, resides in Winnipeg.

JAMES LORIMER ILSLEY is another of the younger members entering a Cabinet for the first time, representing Nova Scotia as Minister of National Revenue. For five years he was professor of civil engineering at Dalhousie University, Halifax, and from 1913 to 1918, chief engineer for the Board of Grain Commissioners at Fort William.

In 1918 he formed his own company, and has superintended construction of many large grain elevators. He also surveyed the situation in the Argentine for the Government of Canada.

IN KIND REMEMBRANCE OF OUR DOCTOR

(E. F. Ward, M.D., C.M.)
By Mrs. B. A. Clarke, Corbyville

Just a quiet country doctor,
Doling out the usual pills—
Hurrying here and there and yonder,
Ministering to our various ills.

Caring for a scattered practice,
Travelling over vales and hills,
Hoping for a "Thanksgiving",
Never worrying us with "bills".

Oft abrupt of speech and manner,
What his thoughts were no one knew
But he could speak the word of kindness
And it paid to heed him too.

Just a big kind faithful doctor,
Never pushing to the fore;
But now whenever was his presence
As he hastened to our door.

In their sports the boys will miss him,
He knew the game and loved it too,
Sitting on the side-lines watching,
Making nine plays at a time.

Called off from life's field of action,
Where good "players" are too few—
Let this message be your slogan—
"Be good to God and He is true.

(By George Hambleton)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
LONDON, Oct. 25. — (CP Cable) —Economic sanctions against Italy will be imposed early in November, it is accepted in British official circles.

The League sanctions Committee meets Oct. 31, to consider a definite date. Various soundings are under way for a peace settlement but foreign office authorities here frankly doubt whether they will be sufficiently advanced before the committee meets to justify a postponement of sanctions.

Opening Session Wednesday

The first session of the second day's activities began at 10 a.m. with Rev. C. V. Moore, B.D., Chairman of the Peterborough Presbytery, officiating as chairman. The devotional period for the service was conducted by Rev. George Brown, D.D., in a most splendid manner. The Educational branch of the church's activities was dealt with by Dr. G. I. Little, B.A., D.D., editor of the Sunday School publications of the United Church of Canada. In his address "Training for the Future."

REV. A. E. ARMSTRONG, D.D.

Dr. G. A. Little, B.A., D.D.

"We have just passed through one of the greatest training campaigns in the history of Canadian Parliament and from it we learn that if the same energy was expended in church work our situation would be greatly benefited within a few short months. What results would come if a man dared to state from a platform, "Elect me and I will serve God" and the speaker, if chosen without any doubt he would be elected. The church of today is suffering not from financial bankruptcy, but from spiritual bankruptcy." he stated forcefully. "Men in our church today, which has done so much great work in the past is at present just marking time for the lack of leadership. We, as a church must provide provision for the boys of adolescent years, these are men of tomorrow, let us develop their thinking and raise it to a higher standard. "The greatest problems of today are brought about by dull grown men possessing only boyhood minds," he continued. Intellect is not developed through the reading of comic strips, cheap sex publications, and boy racing forms. We have been resting on our laurels and the opposing forces are again gaining a foothold within our midst. "Think of it, we have two generations of men who will be open to and accept the "Hell and Damnation" morrow" Thanksgiving Day. What are we doing? We have become a little lazy-daisy in our temperance activity and the leaders are the judge of the ladies of various organizations in the district. The ladies are always willing to help in any line manner by a special speaker in the church service," Mrs. R. B. Hamilton Dominion President.. During the same hour Rev. Ralph Endicott had a gathering assembled in Bridge Street United Church for group conference, and this various groups were directed to different parts of the church, where successful results were obtained. Sections of the constructive type were carried out. The groups were as follows—Ministers, led by Rev. James Semple, D. Th. of Belleville and New, G. I. Little.

Laymen led by Mr. H. W. Acker, man and Mr. J. C. Young.

Young People's Union led by Rev. Roy Rickard, M.A., B.D., and Mr. Stanley Bagwell.

Sunday Schools led in discussion by Dr. G. I. Little and Rev. F. C. Langford D.D.

All groups discussed freely the problems faced in the various branches of the work and in many cases remedies were put forth. There was a great deal of interest shown by the groups and each one was intelligent.

During the recess periods of the Conference days large numbers of the delegates visited the display in the church parlour which contained a wide and varied number of interesting exhibits. The Indian display arranged by Rev. Ralph and Mrs. Collins included, Indian curios, maps, charts and curios, giving a practical insight into the every day life of the African people. The New Canadian display in charge of Rev. S. H. Eggleston included maps, charts, graphs, charts, and handicrafts of the various groups of New Canadian societies in charge of Rev. Mr. Eggleston. Exhibits from the Home Missions, Social Service, Hungarian, Polish, Ukrainian, and Italian.

Returned Missionaries Heard

The afternoon session continued after the Group Conferences with Rev. H. W. Foley, B.A., B.D., acting as chairman and the remaining portion of the afternoon was devoted to the many addresses addressed by returned Missionaries who have been working in the fields and being carried on in the fields from which they had recently returned. The messages brought were encouraging and given to the Conference by those who have actually engaged in the work, made it even more interesting. Those who spoke during this period were—Mrs. S. R. Collins, M.A., of Africa; Mrs. Hooper, G. C. Brown B.A., West China; Dr. J. A. Scrimgeour, Trinidad; Rev. J. G. A. Reid, B.A., Trinidad; Rev. A. R. Graham, India.

At 4.30 the session was dismissed for a few moments to permit the delegates to go down to the Sunday School room, where an illustrated Travelogue: "The New Africa in the Making" was given by Rev. Donald O. Ridout. Mr. Ridout is widely known throughout Canada as an amateur photography. During his stay in Africa took hundreds of photographs and upon his return had the most interesting of the collection made into lantern slides and in this result is a lecture of unusual interest.

During the supper hour at Talbot Street Church, where the ladies of the congregation had made splendid provision for the large number of delegates, an address was addressed briefly by Rev. S. R. Collins, B.A., recently returned from Africa. This address dealt with the work in Africa and was given in a very fine manner.

Final Session

At 8 p.m. the great auditorium of Bridge Street United Church was a sea of faces as over a thousand people gathered for the final and closing session of one of the largest conferences held in the city of Belleville for some time. The main part of the auditorium was packed and others filled a large portion of the seats in the gallery. Judge G. E. Deroche officiated as chairman for the evening, and introduced the various numbers in the pleasant manner for which he is well known.

The first number on the evening program was one that will be long remembered by those privileged to be present, "The International Pageant," which was enacted by the members and friends of the Belleville Presbytery of the United Church in Canada, with a cast of over 100 characters. The gorgeous spectacle with its vast array of colour created by the many lovely and picturesque costumes against the nearly every nation of the world, was a wonderful sight and one long to be remembered. The pageant was in reality a pageant of nations, each one filing on to the platform in small groups the characters representing branches and departments of the organizations. They presented a picture of the early beginnings of the Three great churches from which the United Church was formed and when now they are United in the great work of Love and Sacrifice for humanity mimicks the first part of the vesties on both sides of the platform. colourful and varied costumes of China; India; Korea; Formosa; Trinidad; Africa; Japan; West China and the Canadian Indian; Women in the flowing dress of the 19th Century symbolizing the efforts of the first W.M.S. and every Canadian branch of the home organization. All departments were represented. The W.M.S. Mission Circle. C.G.I.T. marched down from the back of the church in fine form even little children representing the Cradle Roll and the Mission Band. Deaconesses, Preachers, Social Workers, all took their part marching in procession to the platform. The fifty foot banner stretched across the church "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name."

This wonderful display of talent and beauty enacted by the members of the Women's Missionary Societies within the Belleville Presbytery was very appropriate prelude to the closing address of the Conference which was delivered by Dr. A. E. Armstrong D.D., one of the three acting General Secretaries of Foreign Missions, who delivered a splendid message on the World Obligations of the United Church.

"The world has become a neighborhood through use great effort put forth by science," he stated. "Distance is no longer a barrier, good or there will always be chaos and confusion," he said, and went on, "In the title of my address is the word obligation. I think opportunity better for the word Privilege here. We of the United Church have the opportunity to be of great service to the world because of our membership in the organization that has continued. The great problem of Christianity is the world lies just at the foreign field but at home. Race is the greatest obstruction to Christianity it is easy to say "we are not." But if a family of another birth or color moves next door to you it is, are we still as Christian about it—? The people of other races look upon the white race and the Christian code life as 44-hour week, that's all, and the reason is obvious: in all Eastern countries the English press flaunt full page advertisements of excellent varieties of Old English whiskey; American censors condemn a picture produced in Hollywood and immediately it is sent to the east and the Orientals say, that is western civilization, that is Christian. That is how the Missionary acts, while on leave. We must continue the fight to Christianize our own land, as well as other lands. I won't say heathen lands for some of our own behavior is no better than theirs.

As I travel up and down the country I hear of the millions we have spent on foreign fields; let me say we have spent nothing; we have very securely invested those millions in the safest, surest kind of way; some of the returns are coming in right now and there is no doubt; that we are at work building and it is a fruitful labour. It is pitiful that now at the very time of harvest we must call back some of the great workers in the field. Men who have offered their lives for the cause of Christ in the midst of the forthcoming reduced grant they must return, but they will go next to France and we stood behind them in every way they could count on us. But these boys and girls who are out there must come home because of lack of funds to give the price of a postage stamp to maintain them. The sacrificing of one penny from each family at home would permit the work to go forward. Are we going to undo the work established or are we going on to greater—?

Greatest Need is Prayer

It is going to be hard for the one who has to say to these students who are true to the call and will, that God's will doesn't matter to the folks back home I am going for a quit and God's will can wait.

The greatest need for the world today is prayer for God. Not for things and sufficient supplies to be brought upon ourselves. But a prayer for God to abide with us and the blessing will follow.

Dr. Armstrong told of his recent trip to Palestine and the impression that it left. He avoided the much capitalized church of Holy Sepulchre, but he visited Gordon's Calvary and was impressed with the recent discoveries made there. The place of the skull is quite evident, the new sepulchre and the garden near the spot as described in the Scripture and the other observations revealed a tomb within the garden and there cut out of the stone were two graves. It is quite possible, that it was in one of these I looked into the grave where once they laid my Lord, continued the great orator and there flashed to my mind the words, "He is not here, He is risen." Christ is not dead, He is risen from the dead. He is here among us today. Let us get closer contact with Him and strive to be like Him, remembering His command, "go ye therefore into all the world and preach the gospel." We can't all go to the far east and support those who are willing to make the great sacrifice. With totis splendid evangelistic address. the great two day conference, which marks the tenth year since the birth of Canada's first church in the Canadian soil, was brought to a close.

CODE FOR CLOAK-MAKING

Toronto—(CP)—The minimum ninety per cent of the cloak-making industry in Canada is covered under new regulations on Nov. 15 for the first time. The governments of Ontario and Quebec have joined in a plan to govern the industry, just as they did in July to place the millinery industry under a code.

The Ontario government announced yesterday that about 3,500 workers in Ontario and Quebec will be affected—not virtually the entire industry since only 10 per cent operates outside of the two provinces. The code calls for a 44-hour week, that's all, and the reason is obvious: in all Eastern countries the English

NIMRODS PRAISED IN ISLAND SHOOT

More Than 3,000 Pheasants Taken in Two Day Hunt

Pelee Island, Ont., Oct. 23—(CP)—Pheasant hunting in this Lake Erie Island has ended for another year with police supervisors of the hunt praising the knowledge for safe cautions and he hunters themselves satisfied after shooting more than 3,000 birds.

The hunt which wound up last night resulted in only one injury and that was not of a serious nature. James Konrad, an island resident, suffered a slight skin wound over the left temple when struck by a single pellet.

Two members of the Ontario Provincial Police, Sergeant W. A. Page and Constable A. J. Oliver, who helped supervise the hunt paid tribute to the sportsmen experts. In no case was there a breach of regulations by the 200 hunters who thronged to the island.

LONG LIFE IN FUNNY STORIES

Fountain of youth is to be found in laughter, a story from a Mohawk Indian, 105 years old the other day, telling of the secret of long life. Newspapers all over the countryside carried the story of his reactions to life.

He says a good fund of funny stories will make man live long.

He does not believe in three meals a day but rather eating as often as one likes, even to seven times a day as long as one is hungry.

His advice on bedding is novel —no mattress, but straw, wood or buffalo hide or a deer skin. He sleeps on a board of brown wood on his mattress.

He uses a pillow with brown leaves in it.

He advises one to bandage the legs to keep the strength in them, the bandages to be taken off at night.

He is a foe of physic, he rubs his stomach night and morning.

He smokes three or four pipes and puts them in the sun when he is not using them.

He rolls his tobacco with a little vaseline in the palm of his hand to eliminate nicotine and prevent sore throat.

He eats little meat and lots of spinach.

No good Indian marries again he says. His wife died in 1861.

He believes in sunshine as the cure of all ills. He hangs his towels out of the window every day. He calls himself a medicine man but he does not believe in doctors. He uses a little liquor only as medicine.

Of interest to the householder is his advice—Oilcloth on floor is unhealthy. Wood floor is much better, has more electricity.

INVENTORS AND NEW JOBS

The tap-root of the unemployment problem that is puzzling mankind today is the amazing spurt human intelligence has taken in the past two centuries. Often we call it science, or simply the machine. But in consideration of its social effects, either characterization is inadequate and often misleading, says Rotary Magazine.

This the English economist, Ravenshear, has pointed out, has created a breach between inventions which, like the automobile, make many jobs where few were before, and those which refine and perfect processes, rendering the number of men employed. Recent years have been relatively sterile in development of "new things" which create employment, but highly productive in inventions which reduce it.

A recent survey of the automobile industry, once a creator of new jobs, brings to light facts cited by Fortune, reported in "The New York Times":

"A new photoelectric inspecting machine dispenses with ten to twenty human inspectors. . . .

"A device operated by liquid air puts ring-inserts in cylinder blocks and reduces labor costs 60 per cent.

"In 1929 the labor cost of one manufacturer's door was $4. In 1935 it is 15 cents.

"If used full time, an automatic buffer in a hardware plant can displace fifty men.

"Welding machines enabled three men to do what nineteen did six years ago."

These statistics foreshadow doubtless reflect a similar condition in other industries. That being so, is it correct to assume that inventors who eliminate jobs are to conduct more productive than those who create jobs? Or is the slack of technological unemployment to be taken up by new job-making industries, such as Diesel engines and air conditioning? If not, is society to have a steadily increasing army of the permanently unemployed? Or will lagging social science discover better ways to distribute work and leisure than —among the many for the benefit of the many?

ITALIAN MEDAL RETURNED

Amelia Earhart Putnam has returned the Italo-Balbo medal presented to her with suitable flourishes in Chicago last spring by Dr. Giuseppe Castruccio, former Italian consul-general in that city.

Miss Earhart's action is not intended as a rebuke to the Italian government for its war on Ethiopia, as might be readily assumed. Instead, the medal's feelings on that subject, return of the medal is inspired by what is euphemistically called a "misunderstanding."

The medal was inscribed: "Conferred on Amelia Earhart by the Italian government, May 25, 1935". Miss Earhart felt justified in assuming, from the reading of the inscription, that the medal was a tribute from the Italian government to her exploits as a flyer. . . .

But Dr. Castruccio has informed her that the award was not "official" but was personal on his part, a token of his personal admiration and friendship. The stylish flier thereupon decided to return the medal.

The explanation of this rather awkward incident is said to be the belated discovery that the presentation violated one of the cardinal principles of Fascism. The Fascist ideology, as a newspaper dispatch expresses it, subordinates the position of women in the state. Conferring a medal on a woman flyer, it was felt, involved an inconsistency, and might set up a wrong precedent at home.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

O for a bit of heather bloom,
Fras the land that is my ain!
My bonnie, bonnie Heiland hills,
That I'll never see again.

I dreamed I saw my mither stand,
In the gloamin' at the door,
An' the roses at the window,
Threw their shadows on the floor.

I thought I heard her call me hame,
For the mirk was fallin' doon,
An' say that I was no' to greet,
For the morn wad come sae soon.

They tell me I'm no far fras hame,
But there's been nae hame for me,
Since the purple braes o' Athol
Have faded fras ma e'e.

I canna walk the gowden streets,
I wad weary o' the place,
An, what are pearlin' gates to me,
When my hert's sae sad an' sair?

It's O, for the bonnie hills, I cry,
An' the caller Heiland air,
And syne to close my weary e'en,
An' then to wauk nae mair.

WHAT IS THE DUCE TO DO?

THE STATE KEEPS YOU IN GOOD HEALTH

regardless of your financial condition. It provides comfort for your old age—a state of advanced communism of the right kind—a fact pointed out by Dr. Harold Holbrook, of Hamilton, in his address before the service clubs of Belleville on Public Health, as indicative of the great social services rendered by the provincial government to democracy. The state also sees that folks have enough to eat and a clean place to sleep and is not too fussy about folks working for their state-provided meals and beds. Even the old Adam and the heel which bruised the serpent's head was doomed to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow, but perspiration has been supplanted by inspiration, judging by the ingenuity by which so many people avoid labor of the sweat-producing kind.

UP WHERE THE NORTH BEGINS

and the pit at the foot of the rainbow is not silver but gold, and there's a 15-carat golden lining to every cloud is a mining camp called Porcupine. A young married couple were trying their luck in the camp which includes the ambitious young city of Timmins whose expensive and permanent buildings would seem to indicate the belief that Porcupine sits serenely on the Mother Lode, so long sought for by sourdoughs and '49ers. The husband took a chance on a book of Belleville Kiwanis tickets on the grand drawing. He put one ticket in his wife's name but she did not know it until news came that her ticket had won the car. Both came to Belleville to claim the car and Mrs. Oliver Proulx says that the car will play a big part in her career for the husband-the penalty for playing tricks on her. Belleville gasoline distributor filled the tanks of the car with gas free of charge and the wedding couple were left on their return to the land of gold, huskies and muskies, delighted no doubt with their trip to the Front before the long winter of the northland shuts them in.

DOWN IN BUENOS AIRES THERE IS RISING OVERLAPPING WITH THE CLOCK

—just as there is up here where the days are cooler and the nights are colder. Buenos Aires Herald has a columnist who does "Fragments, Found in Mulberry Bush," and in this column he publishes a letter from a correspondent at Mendoza who asks the columnist "Can you manage to do anything to prevent the powers that be who control our TIME from advancing the clocks this year?" In Mendoza, says the puzzled correspondent, owing to climatic conditions the banks open at 8 o'clock and close at midnight in summer, while the shops open from 8 to 12 and from 16 to 20 o'clock. As that is with a four-hour break during the hottest part of the day. Mendoza is about forty-five minutes behind Buenos Aires time and when the clocks are advanced one hour, the correspondent see himself getting up at four in the morning, sun time. Seemsif down below the equator daylight saving begins about the time it ends up north.

BRITAIN AVOIDS IMPRESSION THAT BARGAIN STRUCK

Appreciate Italy's Decision to Reduce Strength in Libya

TROOPS ON MOVE

Mussolini Puts Next Move For Peace up to Britain

London, Oct. 25—(AP)—British official sources today avoided any impression a bargain was being struck with Mussolini in the Anglo-Italo-French negotiations for peace in East Africa and an end to European tension.

While Italy's decision to reduce its troop strength in Libya by one division was received with satisfaction, British officials emphasized no decision has been made concerning rejection of British sanctions in the Mediterranean. Although some sort of reciprocal gesture was anticipated, observers believed it might not be made for some time.

British sources nevertheless expected further talks between Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador at Rome, and Italian government officials, touching possibly on the general situation arising from Italy's war on Ethiopia.

Other sources today ruled out, however, there was no indication Italy was yet prepared to agree on peace terms, which would necessarily be advanced by the League of Nations Committee of five for International development of Ethiopia.

Labor and Liberal circles have been suggesting the British government had abandoned its policy of wholehearted co-operation with the League and all eyes were watching behind the scenes with Italy and France.

Such statements led Sir John Simon, Home Secretary and former Foreign Secretary, first government speaker in the foreign affairs debate in the House last night in the House of Commons:

"There is no truth at all to this wild accusation."

11,000 For Southern Front
(By James A. Mills

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press)

HARAR, Ethiopia, Oct. 25—(AP)—Twelve thousand well-equipped Ethiopian infantry, cavalry and anti-aircraft troops, main body of the Harar Regulars, started for the southern front today after being reviewed by Ras Mashu, who will command them in battle against the Italians.

Led by 2,000 heavily-laden camels the soldiers rumbled southward in motor trucks toward Dire Dawa, the forces led by General Rasdolo Ematiadi.

Almost fanatical Galla women, weeping, singing, shrieking and inciting to battle, accompanied the Harar Oriental touch to the scene—the most colorful ever witnessed here.

Ras Nasibu, Governor of Harar and a principal Ethiopian Commander in the South, said today the latest Press Jijiga, 30 miles to the east, would be one of the decisive points of defence on the southeastern front. He expressed confidence he had sufficient men and munitions to hold the City of Jijiga successfully. He thought at most Ethiopians had suffered heavy casualties on the Quiha front either from Italian gas or bombs.

"The total casualties resulting from Italian air bombing at Gorrahei and points along the Webbi Shibeli River were but little three wounded at Gorrahei and one Somali killed at Dagahbur," he said.

Nasibu said he had adequate leadership at Jijiga, asserting the famous Turkish General Wehib Pasha, former general of the Turkish army in Syria, was among his commanders.

Next Move To Britain

(By George Jordan, Copyright, 1935, By The Associated Press)

Rome, Oct. 25—Premier Mussolini put up to Great Britain today the next move in diplomatic negotiations for peace in Ethiopia and tranquility in Europe.

The Italian Government sent the Steamship Sannio to Libya to bring back the first of the 12,000 soldiers ordered withdrawn from North Africa posts where they had looked across the border into Italian or Egypt.

Mussolini's spokesmen called this unilateral action but diplomats saw an implied invitation to Britain to respond by removing some of his warships from their strategic posts in the African area.

A government spokesman said it was Duce's decision to withdraw almost one-fifth of his Italian forces in Libya represented a "major contribution" to the cause of the restoration of peace, not only in Europe but also in the East Africa.

The Sannio, dispatched from Naples, can transport 2,000 men. The Italian Libyan garrison is normally estimated at 80,000 Italian and native soldiers.

The men to be withdrawn are members of the Metadare Regiment, the Colonial Expeditionary force which sailed from naples—its departure never announced officially—after British warships began to concentrate in the Mediterranean.

Italian officials emphasized Italy's gesture as "particularly generous," insisting the Libyan reinforcements were sent only to preserve internal security.

"We have not sent soldiers to Libya to fight British battleships, they explained."

By Stuart Mowrey, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Oct. 25 (AP)—Premier Laval, anxious to avoid application of sanctions against Italy for his warfare on Ethiopia, was reported today to have made three possible concessions toward peace negotiations.

The commentator Genevieve Tabouis, writing in the Liberal newspaper L'Oeuvre, said he had learned of these moves:

1. If Duce would undertake to suspend actual military operations and discontinue sending troops to Africa until Great Britain replies to his suggestions.

2. If Britain finds these suggestions acceptable as a basis for negotiations, Il Duce would be willing to allow Italy to return to the League of Nations.

3. If Italy was punished patiently in his own search for a way to end the warfare if Britain first accepts the withdrawal of Italy from the League, seeking a more secret diplomatic atmosphere.

Italy's order of withdrawal of one division of troops from its North African possession of Libya was described officially as the "first step toward conciliation."

NAPANEE YOUTH DIES IN CRASH

Douglas Roe, Son of Governor of County Jail is Victim

Napanee, Oct. 25—Injured so severely that he died later, by his left cheek north of the village of Newburgh on the highway tonight, Douglas Roe, 18 years of age, son of W. H. Roe, Governor of the county jail here, was the victim of a motor accident after the accident occurred. The body was brought to the Undertaking Parlors of Vanluven & Wartman, Napanee. W. T. M. Galbraith, coroner, and Provincial Officer Barrington, called to Newburgh, and an inquest will be held at Newburgh on Monday, Oct. 28.

Young Roe and Ross Embury had gone to Newburgh to attend a dance. About 11 o'clock the two got in the car and, with Embury driving, started for the hill north of the village, where Roe got out and Embury turned the car around. Roe told that he would stay on the side of the car on the return to the village, a short distance.

After crossing the railway track Embury, coming out to pass another car, turned to the right side, and in a moment the car went in the ditch, striking a telephone pole. Roe was crushed against the pole, and his left side was crushed in, and a broken leg. He was taken as soon as possible to the home of Mr. Monroe of Newburgh, but died just before reaching the place.

A native of Campbellford, Roe was in the fourth form at the Campbellford Collegiate. He was vice-president of the Athletic Club at the school, and was also a keen member in the collegiate cadet corps, playing hockey for the school team and captain of the rugby team. He was also interested in dramatics, and last winter assisted the Napanee Drama Club in a successful production.

Besides his father, he leaves a step-brother, Jack of Campbellford, and a sister, Peggy at home.

Unidentified Man Found at Tamworth

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 25.—(CP)—Body of unidentified man of about 50 years, found apparently a foreigner, was found today in Beaver Lake, near Tamworth, about 35 miles north of here by Earl Bradshaw. It was estimated the body had been in the water two weeks. Bruises on head and body and the fact the man could not swim definitely cut indicated possibility of foul play. It was learned one of men working on Campbell Construction Company's job near Kaladar, some miles north of Tamworth, had been missing for two weeks.

PARTRIDGE, FAGS ASSITS HUNTER

Man Lost in Bush For Four Days Walks Into Camp

Port Arthur Oct. 25—(CP)— Lost in the bush from Sunday morning until late Wednesday while fourteen Indian guides and scores of hunters searched for him, Joseph Babcock of Antigo, Wisconsin, subsisted on a small partridge, fags and a goodly supply of cigarettes, which helped him keep his nerve as he climbed hill after hill trying to get his bearings.

Returning to camp near Hogarth eighty-five miles east of here, after he finally came across railway tracks and followed them, Babcock told some of the men who searched for him of his experiences. With four hunting companions, he had gone to Wisconsin Saturday.

The cigarettes kept him going until Tuesday, when he shot the partridge. He slept in the open two nights and one night in unoccupied trapper's cabin.

"I spent Sunday night in the open with a small fire to keep me warm," he said. "I had no meat of my hunting things were stolen and heavy shoes, so I did not feel particularly cold.

"On Monday I climbed more hills than I ever thought could be in one country, trying to get my bearings. While there was no rain or snow, low clouds kept the sun covered all the time and I could not give a direction from it. Monday night I found a deserted trapper's cabin and slept in it. It was a relief to have my head. a shelter over my "Full Hunger.

"I was pretty hungry, but I had enough cigarettes, so by spacing them out they lasted me until Wednesday noon. I got one partridge Tuesday with my rifle and he tasted pretty good. Then on Wednesday I got another partridge with a club and he tasted pretty good. Then on Wednesday afternoon I struck across railway tracks and followed them, Hanock told some of the men who searched for him of his experiences. With four hunting companions, he had gone to Wisconsin Saturday.

The cigarettes kept him going until Tuesday, when he shot the partridge. He slept in the open two

Widow 15 Held

(By B. Gregory Hewlett)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Newark, N.J., Oct. 25.—(AP)— Newark police held the young widow of Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer today in the boys she had named as co-respondents in her search for the assassins of the gang chieftain and three henchmen.

Mrs. Frances Flegenheimer, was booked as a material witness last night, less than three hours after Schultz died of wounds inflicted by rival gang bullets.

Bernard Rosenkrantz, Schultz's counsel, who had been with the widow moved down in a cafe gun battle Wednesday night, died early today.

Otto Berman and Abraham Wellman, two of the three remaining members of Schultz's party, pounded their leader to death.

Max Lurie, another who met a hail of bullets in a New York barber shop about two hours after the Schultz shooting, was in a critical condition in a New York Hospital.

New York detectives pressed their search for Albert Stern, silent sixth of the Schultz party who escaped several recent attempts at the underworld leader's life in the shooting.

JURY ACQUITS PORT HOPE MAN

Ralph Portsmith Released From Custody After Verdict at Cobourg

Cobourg, Oct. 26 (CP)—The jury has been moved by sympathy for your position in spite of themselves", Mr. Justice J. C. Makins observed Wednesday as he discharged Ralph Portsmith from custody a few minutes after an assize court jury acquitted him of a charge of murdering Noel Blake, his former hired man.

Blake was shot to death June 8, two days after he had been discharged by the 35-year-old Bethany farmer on discovery he had had intimate relations with Mrs. Portsmith.

Portsmith declared from the witness box he had accidentally shot Blake through the forehead as the latter crouched to spring at him after being ordered by the hired man to leave the farm.

The young farmer was calm as he heard the jury return its verdict after two hours of deliberation.

"They might have been brought in a verdict of guilty, if not murder, of manslaughter," said Mr. Justice Makins, sternly, "but they were no doubt moved by sympathy. Henceforth refrain from taking the law into your own hands."

Brenda Dora Laier

Freed in time for a Thanksgiving dinner at home with his wife and children, Portsmith stepped down from the prisoner's dock with little show of emotion, but he broke down a few minutes after rejoining his wife and family.

JACKIE COOGAN BECOMES OF AGE

Fortune of Child Film Star Over One Million

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 25—(AP)—Jackie Coogan became of age tomorrow and into his control will pass the fortune which grew from his earnings as the greatest United States juvenile star of the silent motion picture era.

What the fortune amounts to, exactly, no one knows except Jackie, his mother and their business manager. A movie colony consensus placed the figure as nearly $1,000,000.

The Coogans have assiduously denied themselves to interview since their return from New York and the business manager, Arthur Bernstein, flatly refused to discuss Jackie's financial status.

"He's going to be the target for every brand of shark, slip-artist and chiseler, anyway," Bernstein said.

"And I don't mind telling you we're afraid of kidnappers, that's all I can say about it."

"Discovered" by Charles Chaplin, Coogan entered pictures when 3½ his four years old.

At one time, he received $500,000 from a film studio as a "bonus". Actually, it was reliably reported, this was an advance on four pictures Jackie was contracting to make.

He was born here, Oct. 26, 1918.

MANY OBTAIN QUOTA OF BIRDS

Partridge Said To Be Quite Plentiful in The North

Gunfire echoed through the quiet woods and clearings around and north of the city on Tuesday as hunters of varying ages and carrying all manner of firearms took the field on the first of the three open days on squirrels and partridge. Farmlands, particularly in the immediate area of the city were invaded by scores of youthful hunters for the most part carrying .22 rifles who were out full force after elusive squirrels.

For the most part, however, the day was devoted by the older and more experienced to a full day's partridge shoot in the northern sections of the county, where partridge were being found in fairly plentiful numbers. More experienced hunters were able to get their bag full of four birds with little difficulty.

In many instances farmers had posted no trespassing signs on their property, determined to ward off any invasion of their land by squirrel hunters. These signs, however, in many cases were cheerfully ignored.

Despite the number of hunters who were in the woods and bush and the concentrated fire of the guns, accidents as yet have been received today of any accidents directly attributable to hunting.

Young man, apparently you have no regard for those who befriend you The sentence of this court is this you be imprisoned for a period of two months in the common jail" concluded His Worship.

'GOLDIE' PRODGER IS HEART VICTIM

Former Manager of London Hockey Teams And Noted Player

FIVE DEVIL ISLE CONVICTS ESCAPE

Reach Haven After Tortuous Journey of Nine Hundred Miles in Small Boat

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Oct. 25—(CP)—Five convicts of the Devil's Island detatives, who had watched a companion die as they sailed an open boat over the blazing tropical seas, found a temporary haven here today in the first flight from the French Guiana penal colony at Cayenne.

Half starved, exhausted and fevered after their 900 mile journey by sea, the five brought their tiny craft to land here yesterday at the end of the 39-day voyage. They were near death.

"They had set out—Misse Demunyers, Jules Morelli, Jose Duran, Gimino Morelli and Gregorio Hernandes—with food and water for only eight days. With them was Antonio Aliar, who was delirious when the provisions ran out.

Night and day as the five more hardy prisoners fought death from the sea and sky, Aliar's anguished cries filled the air. Finally he died and was buried at sea.

"The convicts have said when they reached here, they were so far gone they could not navigate. And they were grifted at first by fear of the sea, finally striking the shore of Trinidad, a welcome sight.

Rather than risk capture there, they put to sea again and this time they struck part of Spain which permits French convicts to rest a few days. They had travelled 900 in all.

Magazine Accepts Illustrations by Belleville Girl

Miss Alice I. Evans, talented daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Evans, had in the September "St. Nicholas", leading American magazine for children, illustrations for a fascinating poem by Robert Ross Parker, "Mary Ann Myrtle and the Wise Old Turtle". Miss Evans was commissioned to present the illustrations in colour.

There are Myrtle, her aunt, Mac-Ingall, and her cousin, Hyall, and her daughter Elizabeth Mary, all of whom are cleverly and deftly introduced by the illustrations. The most amusing is the drawing of MacDougall, the cat. The likeness of a turtle killed is something that only a fertile imagination could have conceived. Miss Evans' illustrations for Mr. Parker's poem, this magazine said "are full of charm" ah silhouettes and has accepted others for future publication.

Baptist Young People Hold Thanksgiving Rally Here

Victoria Avenue Baptist Church of this city was the focal point on the Thanksgiving Day of Baptist Young People from Peterborough, Port Hope, Cobourg, Sidney, Picton and Campbellford who gathered to hold the fall rally of the Baptist Young People's Unions in the Peterborough Association.

The church auditorium was beautifully decorated for the occasion with the fruits of the harvest, the windows were adorned with leaves banked the full red flush of early autumn. The pulpit was artistically surrounded with grain, apples and pumpkins giving a real Thanksgiving atmosphere.

There were two sessions, afternoon and evening. Music and song played a prominent part during both sessions and at the banquet a real old time sing song was greatly enjoyed. Song services were under the capable leadership of Fred Johns, choir master. During the supper hour, Miss Phylis May rendered a solo, Albert Westcott contributed a trumpet solo, Mr. Johnson joined with Mr. Wonnacott in a pleasing trumpet duet. During the evening session Mr. Albert Gifford of Campbellford contributed a solo.

The election of new officers for the ensuing year proved an honour to the Belleville Society when Bert Orr was elected vice-president. The new officers for the year are:

President—D. Cogh, of Port Hope. Vice-President—Bert Orr, Belleville.

Secretary—M. Armstrong, Peterborough.

Counsellors—Rev. E. Smith, Campbellford; Rev. G. E. Downing, Norwood; Associational representative—H. Cawthorn, Cobourg.

The banner for the largest attendance at the rally will be taken to Port Hope this year. Belleville won last year. The banner for the largest average attendance at meetings throughout the year was won by Gilmour Memorial with a splendid average of 93 per cent. Picton was second with 90 per cent. and Bellville third with 87 per cent.

The main portion of the afternoon session was devoted to a debate, "Resolved, that the gospel of Jesus Christ provides for a Christian going to war". The affirmative side was taken by Mr. Grant Palmer and Miss William Stanley of Murray Street Baptist Church, Peterboro, and the negative side by Mr. Fred Ough and Miss Josephine Curzon of Port Hope. Port Hope won the debate which was very well presented and eloquently delivered.

Addresses of welcome to the visiting Unions were given by Mr. Lorne Andrews, President of the Belleville Society on behalf of the Belleville Society and by Rev. A. G. Sinclair on behalf of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

Rev. Harold Lang of Park Road Baptist, Toronto, was the main speaker of the evening session and delivered a special Thanksgiving address, "Are we thankful enough on this day?" The origin of Thanksgiving Day was dealt with. How the Pilgrim Fathers landed in the New World and gave thanks to God for their deliverance from danger. A comparison was pictured by the Rev. Mr. Lang between these brave people and the people of the present time. They had to go to another country to have religious freedom. They did not come to a land of plenty such as we live in now. Yet they rendered thanks unto God. We have liberty, prosperity and security that they did not have, therefore are we giving thanks unto God for His plentiful and abundant gifts? concluded the speaker.

City Employee Brings Down Owl Not a Partridge

A well-known city employee today is seriously considering the advisability of taking some out of the country back to nature course, or at least the possibility of a short course in the habits and appearance of Ontario's wild life.

The local man accompanied party of friends on a partridge shooting expedition to a northern township. Birds were thick in the air and gun fire rolled from all corners of the woods.

Toward sunset the party again gathered at the car. Each man of the party lugged his own bag of four birds, golden for the most part with little difficulty. The city employee toted along one less bird. In being dejectedly, a tattered mass of feathers and claws and beak.

"Well, I got one of them, anyhow," he exulted as he rest displayed their prize. "It's a big one, much larger than any one of yours."

Closer inspection by the rest of the party disclosed that the "big partridge", was a genuine brown owl, shot on the fly.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 28 (CP)—The dictionary says an owlet is a baby owl. But it may not be in the definition says it can be had by a Harvard University student's room in the university authorities ruled.

So the six baby downy owls that that came all the way from Ecuador for transfer aboard the steamer of Malcolm C. Vestergrin, a supervisors of Lima, Peru, was referred of "departed."

Vestergrin's bear cub was sent back to New York by the same student decision it developed an expensive habit of tipping over lamps and furniture while its owner was absent.

"Top Hat"

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in Hilarious Musical Mirth-Provoker

When Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers accord three successive musical film triumphs with "Flying Down To Rio", The 'Gay Divorcee' and 'Roberta' they set a terrific goal for themselves. Each picture proved more entertaining and successful than its predecessor, which left it strictly up to Astaire and Miss Rogers to maintain their record of topping their last effort.

In "Top Hat", their new RKO Radio musical comedy, which features a complete score of lyrics and melodies by Irving Berlin, the co-stars have not the least by managed out what rates as their best picture to date; clay colorful, tuneful and romantic. "Top Hat" is a receiving acclaim everywhere as the perfect screen musical.

Astaire and Miss Rogers do a number of sensational new dances, climaxed by the Italian Farandole "Piccolino" which is their completely satisfying answer to public demand for a successor to the "Carioca" and the "Continental." They also sing and dance through their characterizations with delightful verve and vitality. They also sing or dance to "Isn't This a Lovely Day?" 'Top Hat,' 'No Strings' and 'Cheek to Cheek.'

"Top Hat" is an intriguing and plausible story of a romance which gets away to a "love-at-first-sight" start but encounters hilarious and near fatal complications. London, England and the Lido, Italy are the backgrounds for the romance and the settings are among the most lavish and colorful ever brought to the screen.

Strong support is accorded the stars by a featured cast which includes Helen Broderick, stellar comedienne of the New York stage, Edward Everett Horton, Eric Blore and Eric Blore. Horton and Blore, it will be recalled, appeared with Astaire and Miss Rogers in "The Gay Divorcee', Mark Sandrich, who directed "The Gay Divorcee" was at the helm of the new picture.

On Ice', an uproarious hockey Movie Karloff and Boris Lugosi in Belle latest News of the World including scenes from the Munich crisis and other important events gathered the world over. At the Saturday matinee performance the first "Adventures of Tarzan" will be exhibited.

Two complete shows will be presented Saturday afternoon the first performance at 1.30 p.m. and the second at 3.00 p.m.

Garbo's Best Picture

Greta Garbo, Fredric March and Freddie Bartholomew (of "David Copperfield") are appearing at the Belle Tonight for the last times in Tolstoy's immortal romance "Anna Karenina" considered by many as Garbo's best picture. A funny Tom Howard comedy and a clever Pete Smith topical complete a splendid program of screen entertainment.

"West of the Pecos"

Two-Feature Program Packed With Laughs and Romantic Thrills

Two excellent feature pictures are presented by the Capitol theatre today and Saturday and each contains an appeal that is bound to hold favor with the most discriminating.

For those who like the virile quick-action screen stories, "West of the Pecos" is recommended. Coming from the pen of Zane Grey, it has sweep, grandeur and faithfully portrays the vivid days of the old West. And, in addition it gives Richard Dix the role of his long career.

"West of the Pecos" shows Dix as Pecos Smith, a two-gun cowboy who was born under a covered wagon and has never known any law but that of a clear conscience and a quick draw.

Terrill Lambeth, the girl, played by Martha Sleeper, is the daughter who perfers to be the "son" of Colonel Lambeth, a cattle baron. When Pecos and the girl meet she is a young cowboy helping her father drive a herd of cattle to the Pecos River range.

The girl's disguise forms the basis for numerous misunderstandings that lead laughable at times and tragic at others.

Martha Sleeper gives a splendid performance as the girl and Hugh Kohler turns in a grand portrayal as the typical bad-man of the plains. The outdoor back ground of the picture lends a breath-taking beauty and the photography magnificent.

"Mr. Dynamite"

The second feature shown on this week end bargain program provides an excellent vehicle for the antics and sophisticated Edmund Lowe. It is called "Mr. Dynamite" and is a thrilling murder mystery story of romance by the author of "The Thin Man," Dashiell Hammett.

Lowe plays the role of "Dynamite" Dunne, a hick from the mid-states who is given a police escort out of every town he enters.

He is called in by private interests to solve the mysterious murder of a young boy who is shot down as he is leaving the grounds of the Claims gambling joint.

How Lowe solves the mystery together with his wise-cracking secretary, a part played by Jean Dixon is thrilling, laugh provoking entertainment.

A Fox Movietone Newsreel completes the program.

Chicago, Oct. 22 (CP)—Eugene Nelson, paroled from the Illinois state penitentiary, resented it when Deputy Chief of Detectives Walter Storms at a police showup pointed him out to robbery victims as a man who had been arrested "about 200 times."

"You're kidding," said Nelson, "not more than 30 times."

Chief Storms glared at him.

"Well, maybe 40 times, but not any more."

Toronto Mining Markets

Toronto, Oct. 25—(CP)—The mining market showed a few narrow gains but there were more declines than gains skowing an early afternoon tendency to ease off. Golds and silvers were all represented on the losing side.

Base Metals Mining Corporation was subjected to heavy selling from the floor broke by 13 cents and the mill would close down in order to permit a more intensive search for ore. The price broke to 1.70 and was holding around 17 this afternoon, off 19 cents for the day. About 65,000 shares changed hands in the first hour. Noranda and Hudson Bay were other soft spots in the Base Metals group.

The silver share market was slow with issues of a cent or two showing for the leaders. Cobalts changed hands at a small volume.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, Oct. 25.—(CP)—At the opening today gold activated theirselves to the rise of the intertitled issues on the New York Board on Wednesday and then turned soft in early afternoon the liquor, metal and textile issues holding fractional gains and a few active issues of other groups, particularly Ford A. did better. There was no attempt however to approximate fully the heavy buying of yesterday's session only having the month-end settlement in mind.

Some rather timellers sold up to 193 1-4, a new high mark for the year and Steel Co. of Can. sold up 1-4. Brewing Corporation stocks eased down, influenced perhaps by the report that an investigation is pending held by the Ontario Liquor Control Board into the company's hoped in. terests.

NEW YORK MARKET

New York, Oct. 25.— (AP) — A stock market which had kept the stock market on a firm foundation during the late trading today.

Old line leaders in Motors, Oils, and Utilities got up 1 to more than 2 points with a few specialties making wider swings. Oil stocks, a feature of the market yesterday, were quiet but steady.

At the beginning of the final hour advances of ½ to 2 1-2 points had been made by Studebaker, Steel, U.S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Sears-Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Collins and Aikman, Johns-Manville J. I. Case, American Telephone, Union Pacific and Westinghouse. Coca Cola got up 12 points to a new high since 1930 at 178 but fell back to 176. Sales approximated 2,300,000 shares.

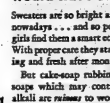
QUEBEC ELECTIONS
ON NOVEMBER 18?

Montreal, Oct. 25 (CP)—The Star says today it has learned from authoritative sources that the Quebec legislature will be dissolved Oct. 30 and elections announced for Nov. 4, with nominations Nov. 18.

"Measures of strong action may be taken in Quebec and the parties in the field expect election battle to centre in their ranks for the first time," the paper says.

And ½ cent would have saved it!



Sweaters are so bright and colourful nowadays . . . and so popular. Wise girls find them a smart economy, too. With proper care they stay new-looking and fresh after months of wear!

But cake-soap rubbing, or harsh soaps which may contain harmful alkali are ruinous to woollens. They so often cause shrinkage and matting . . . make colours run.

There's no harmful alkali in Lux. Lux is specially made to protect woollens. It's gentle suds remove all dirt quickly and easily. Sweaters look like new! For real economy . . . always wash sweaters with Lux. Remember, Lux won't shrink woollens.

Baby's Woollens, Too!

It's so important to keep baby's clothes fluffy and fresh. Rough, matted woollens irritate his delicate skin. Lux protects baby clothes from fresh and new-looking!

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

Spend heartily, but never on the Girl Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Archie is an only child and very much spoiled. He finished high school, but didn't make the grade in college because studying bored him, and he left at the end of his second year. He has no job, lives at home, and his parents supply him generously with pocket money.

He's always telling me about the shows he has seen, how he takes the boys and treats them to supper after the show. He always has money for cigarettes, candy and to buy gasoline in the family car, but he never does anything for me.

I'm no gold digger, but I like a fellow to take me out. I am alive and show grounds. I used to be very much in love with Archie but I find him irritating. If I go out with any other boy he get furiously jealous. My parents are old-fashioned and want me to go with one boy only.

Simple theme.

You gave yourself that name, my dear girl, and I think if you continue your friendship with Archie you must realize it's not altogether a match.

Why should this thoroughly selfish young man be the one when you go out with boys who realize that a girl expects an occasional outing. And if a boy has money, he's supposed to treat sometimes. It seems to me the sensible thing would be to declare a moratorium on Archie till he learns what to be expected of a "courting gentleman," as old mammies say in the South.

His "Dad" (supposed to have Money

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Dad has a wholesale grocery business and is supposed to be rolling in wealth. This has not spoiled my popularity with the girls even though "the rumor is greatly exaggerated", as the man remarked by I fail in love with a girl we became engage. She shared the delusion about dad's means.

When I wanted to be married, my father offered me $1,000 for emergencies, for which I was to give him a note and pay at interest - bearing periods, as any stranger would do. At the end of my business is $30.00 a week.

When I explained all this to my girl, she turned me down flat. She thought she should have the same kind of a home that dad has, though mother helped dad to make his money. And she felt she should live on the same scale as my parents.

Dad was disgusted and said, "You gold-digger in the family." I'm very much broken up, want to stop in a sailing ship and take long voyage. Dad says I'm a fool. Do you think so?

Stephen W.

If you were my son, I'd be glad to let you take the sea voyage. A broken engagement and a spell of pain in a girl are pretty serious things, and one doesn't recover from these twin blows immediately. You're likely to come back a better man, and that will make forgiving the unruly head.

If dad will consent and let you take this voyage, you will be more useful "round a ship" than you are when you return. If he won't, remember that grand old motto "She who hesitates is lost," and get the interest in someone else.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Here are some little things that bother me most when I am eating in the company of other people.

1. Who is supposed to do the suggesting as where to spend the evening?

2. If the young man whom you are with asks you to have a bite to eat after, say a show, what is the gracious way to accept?

3. When one invariably comes to call on you and gives you a box of candy, what should you do?

4. I have been going about with a young man for over a year. Is it still necessary for me to wait for him to get out of the car and go around to the door to let me out?

Is it proper to hand your boy friend your key to the door when leaving your home so that he can unlock your door for you when you return?

Perilous

1. Since the boy is to be the host, it is he who should make the suggestion about the evening's entertainment. He knows what his budget will stand.

2. Probably the natural thing the gracious way to say is, "Thank you, I love to have a bite to eat" or "Thank you, I'd love it," or "Thank you, that would be delightful." Then some such spontaneous answer.

3. To the thoughtful young gentleman, the girl would say, "How very kind of you . . . thank you so much." or "It was sweet of you to bring me candy — how I love it." or "How thoughtful of you . . ."

4. Mrs. Florence Walker gave a paper on the life of John Morrison, missionary in Trinidad. The Bible lesson was read by Mr. John Scott, a reading "By Way of a Garden" was given by Miss Grace Robinson, and a short poem by Miss Bernie Hoag. The Scripture Memory Contest was rendered by Misses Iva and Bernie McCann and Ruth Andrews. The topic was taken by Mrs. Allen Segar. Convener for the evening had charge of the program.

Yes, or you may open the key until time for him to use it.

Wedding Anniversary Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Here's my problem: We have been married five years this month and would like to celebrate. Will you please tell me just how I should word the invitations? It seems like a grafter's game to say, "Come to my house to our anniversary", because people feel they must bring gifts. But it would not be correct not to tell them, as a few of this group already know it.

2. Can you tell me what we can do for entertainment?

1. Many people feel just as you do about mentioning the fact in an invitation to a party given to celebrate a wedding anniversary or a birthday, that this mention would too definitely to suggest that gifts are in order. So, if you want to avoid this, don't mention it, simply "for a party"—and let the guests discover when they arrive that it is an anniversary party. The fact that some of your friends know that it is your anniversary does not make any difference in the wording of the invitations.

2. How about bridge or any other card game popular with you and your friends? Or backgammon? Or chop in your department store or book-seller's store. Games are they are thrilling and of infinite variety.

SARNIA WINS OVER BEACHES BY 16-8 SCORE

Too Much Power in Back-field For East Enders

McGILL FAVORITE

Queens Must Defeat Western to Remain in The Running

By Ernest Dunlop Canadian Press Staff Writer

It isn't as great a team, perhaps, with the old great Jeffrey Perry on the bench instead of the back-field, but the football work had it written on the cuff that Sarnia's Imperials remain the most formidable force on the Canadian gridiron until somebody comes along and proves that isn't the case by 1939.

Maybee Lou Hayman's Toronto Argonauts, unbeaten leaders of the Big Four, will come along later and upset the Imperials, 1934 Canadian champions and winners in the east since December 1933, when the Argos turned the trick in the Dominion final.

It is possible that the intelligence staffs of Toronto McGill or Queen's would have sufficient power to knock over the Imperials led by Art Massucci.

Imperial Goals Feted

But you can't bank those possibilities. Imperials showed a crowd of 12,000 in "Toronto" that they took potent they can be when occasion arises by defeating Balmy Beach 16-8 in a scheduled O.R.P.U. game. The victory left Sarnia two games ahead of Beaches in the standings.

Led by little Rocky Parsons and the backfield giants, Ormond Beach and Bommer Stirling, the Imperials crushed Toronto's east-end team in the fourth quarter with a field goal by Parsons and a touchdown by Beach. The latter counted in the single point behind after facing a strong wind and the rain of a blinding sleet, leaving the intercollegiate and Big Four to put on... the second show of the week Saturday. Argos entertain Montreal Wheelers and Hamilton Tigers invade Ottawa in the Big Four twinBill and Sarnia finish at Montreal and Queen's and Western at Kingston in the Intercollegiate.

Chief among these is the McGill-Toronto struggle with the college leadership at stake. Warren Stevens' blueshirts upset the Redmen 11-6 last Saturday in Toronto, but they barely held off McGill's fourth-period assault. Playing before a Molson Stadium crowd, the Redmen will be slight favorites to win this time.

Queen's Must Win

Queen's who must win to keep in striking distance of the leaders, is expected to defeat the improved Western Mustangs, and ...so be ready for crucial engagement with McGill and Varsity. In the Rowe's presbyterian may yet repeat their 1934 triumph.

The Hamilton-Ottawa contest will decide whether Tigers are to retain a real chance to overtake the leading Argos. The Rengals are two games behind the Boilermakers but they have twice upset the Rough-riders. Argos hope to run their string of wins to six at the expense of the Wheelers, still without a victory.

But the Thanksgiving Day spotlight should rest on Sarnia and Beach, bidding these teams, who are likely to meet in a playoff series anyway, before the greatest crowd that ever watched an O. R.P.U. game. The battle will be on hand as any Toronto is likely to see this season.

For three periods, Alex Foster's sad and lonely dad little team battled it out with the National champions. It started the last stanza, leading 8-7, having scored a single touchdown on the right arm of Al Ab-bott and a field goal by Parsons. However, Box had fielded three singles and he had outdistanced Stirling Bommer in the punting duel any better than the big Sarnia son.

Was In One Play

Then in one dramatic drive the Imperials showed why they still are to be classed with the best in the land. They hustled over 60 yards of territory with Beach, Stirling and Parsons leading the way, until Parsons was ready to punch in his six-point field goal that put Sarnia ahead Thanksgiving Day contest in the 10-2.

A few minutes later, backs against their own goal line Beaches committed their one serious plunger against Montreal Wheelers and the touchdown. A snapped ball went through Ben's kangaroo kick and on it behind the Toronto line.

That was Sarnia's answer to the question of their strength that soon came. The last period drive, that the outplayed Beaches threw against it the heels of a grand 30-minute defensive struggle against the Tigers, established the fact that Imperials remain the country's No. 1 force and that Saturday's victory is the contrary that Beaches can show.

10 MILE RACE TO J. YEAMAN

Pavement Pounding Fraternity Has New Star

Guelph, Ont., Oct. 25 (CP)—The pavement-pounding fraternity had a new star today in Guelph's Jack Gall, Ont., a newcomer to international competition. Yeaman won his first big event here yesterday, defeated a brilliant field in the 10-mile championship event, a feature of Guelph's Thanksgiving Day road-running meeting.

Hailing from the same city that gave distance racing such stars as Willie Sheppard, Billy Reynolds, the youthful yeaman defeated Will McCluskey of Toronto, one of the country's most noted performers and Harold Webster of Hamilton, British Empire games marathon champion, to win his spurs.

Yeaman caught McCluskey, who had made the pace just before they came into the city to finish and Gall joy gained all the way home. Webster, competing at a distance a little too short for him, finished strong three yards behind McCluskey.

The five-mile event was won by Scotty Rankine of Preston in 26 minutes, 55 seconds. Rankine, Canada's greatest distance runner under the full marathon, does really in this race. Walter Hornby of Hamilton, was second.

CAPTURES BIG FISH

In Hockey Training Camps

(By The Canadian Press)

Convinced the amount of good hockey usually on the market makes this no season for hoisting out, National League players are signing contracts with little or no alacrity. Though there is still two weeks left for the Flyers and Canadiens to get in their camps very little haggling as they look over the squirrels anxious to wear their sweaters.

o o o o

Earl Seibert, whose name has been turned over to league President Calder by New York Rangers, is the only star who hasn't been able to agree with the club owners on the important figures in his agreement. Arvel Jolliat, Montreal Canadiens left wing, and Sieur Jean, Montreal Maroons defenceman, came to terms yesterday.

o o o o

Jolliat, who has been arguing with the new Canadiens owners for more than a week, joins the Habitant camp at Quebec today under Manager Sylvio Mantha, who already has 18 signed players under his wing.

o o o o

Evans has been in Winnipeg with Maroons but has not worked with them. Today he will break into the battle for defence positions with Lionel Conacher, Allan Shields, Cy Wentworth and Andy Mulligan. Conacher thinks none of them will oust him. The big Torontonian came to camp after two knee operations he believes cured the trouble that kept him on the sick list most of last season. He has given his stick knee every test and is confident it is cured.

o o o o

Perhaps it's just as well the rearguars are flocking to their jobs. Some managers like the new rules they have uncovered so well they balk at letting it out of their hands. Boston Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks are particularly sweet on their youngsters.

o o o o

Manager Clem Loughlin of the Hawks works up a daily headache trying to decide, why Mackell rookies will go and who will stay. He will probably send a few down to minor league teams for seasoning.

o o o o

Though they are still banking on the old timers like Eddie Shore, who reported yesterday at Spring-ston, Bruins feel the added strength they need will come from new players like Roger Jenkins, Bobby Graham, Jack Riley, Bill Cowley and Cooney Weiland.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Had the local O.R.F.U. football squad had Jimmie Folwell at his usual position of kicking half during the early part of the season, when Oshawa won here, the local end result would have been different. Seen sitting safely perched on the top rung of the Lake Shore grandstand Saturday, Yesterday it's victory over the Lindsay Rotary team clearly demonstrated the local team has everything desired. For instance Folwell's punting was perfect and backed up by stellar efforts, while the line of scrimmage was a veritable stone wall, backed up of Lindsay's offensive plays personally assisting in the local's win. Of course when the news broke that Oshawa had defeated Peterboro 6-2 right in the Liftlock City it made yesterday's hard-fought local win all the better. Belleville and Lindsay now have won two and lost two, while Oshawa has yet to take a reverse in four starts. On the field we cannot see where the Blue Devils have proved any worse than the locals, but the mere fact that Oshawa defeated Peterboro twice has given the Motor City over a certain edge they are determined to nail down.

Getting back to yesterday's game, it was a thriller, as both squads battled to the final whistle. Before the game Coach Sreene, of the Lindsay squad, announced the fact that his star halfback, Jack Bennett was forced out in the first minute of play. Without Bennett in the line-up there was not the same end we were not surprised, to see the Rotarians frequently break twisted his right knee in the very first play. After Belleville Lindsay had a field day for the rest of the game. We doubt very much if Bennett's absence was the difference between defeat and victory for the Lindsay squad, for the Oshawa Motormen and the Belleville team played better ball than the Rotarians in every department that presented itself. True enough the Lindsay squad outplayed the Belleville team in the first half, but was that Lessks' or Belleville's fault? We remember the time when Jack Ellis, the Kingston star who robbed the Kennedy-ites of the Big Four crown, played the same brand of football they showed here versus the Oshawa team on Saturday.

Owing to holidays the Albert College O.R.F.U. championship football game today has been postponed until Tuesday, but the St. Denis-R.C.I. game will be run off as scheduled this afternoon. If you haven't a collection of local youths about town who may soon resemble the House of David in a hall, it becomes alarmed as there is a reason for the sudden growth of hair about the faces of some local B.C.I. students. The whole thing happened following a needless football game between the B.C.I. juniors and the seniors on the former's campus, in which the juniors took the measure of their seniors contemporaries. They threw forward passes until the seniors were dizzy and then turned around and out distanced the seniors on each exchange of punts. So chagrined were the members of the senior squad, that they vowed they would not shave until they could boast a game won by defeating the juniors at some future date. After all it would be rather embarrassing if the juniors took the vow seriously and refused to play the seniors for a month or so. In the meantime the barbers will have to suffer, we suppose.

With so much talk around the country recently regarding the famous Golden Gloves tourney, Canada's premier lacrosse team, which doubtlessly will establish itself as the attendance at the Arena on Saturday night, when the Cornwall Midgets meet the Belleville Mimico team in the provincial O.A.L.A. final game. Coach Belleville tried hard to increase last year and the game was nearly ruined by public confidence, the locals were frozen out of competition this spring, so the game should be really natural fans, but with a final championship game being played at the Arena on Saturday night, it will give local sport lovers an opportunity to see the better and class in competition.

Although the baseball season is a thing of the past, here's one that remains unforgotten.

"Tim Hurst, now deceased, was for years an umpire in the big league. He was behind the bat one day when the catcher took exception to Tim's judgment of plate balls.

One came whizzing over. The catcher thought it should have been called a strike.

"Ball!" shouted Tim.

"Look here, Mr. Umpire," snarled the catcher, "that plate has got corners on it."

"Yes son," said Tim, "but it ain't got 'em big enough."

Local wrestling fans are at last satisfied, the ferocious Chief Lynx has at last been defeated, but not before he made matters rather interesting for Al "Sanny" Dunlop, Hamilton wrestler, who was thoroughly startled, when the entire populace at the Arena had taken up with him, but when he indubitably lost night's main wrestling bout was the most bitterly fought and most heroic ever witnessed in a local ring. Although the fans were happy to see Ch' ! Lynx defeated, there still remains an air of unsettledness in the Indian was disqualified in defeat, when robbing Danley of a clean-cut victory, when the Chief Lynx realized that Dunlop could absorb the continued punishment handed out by him or not, we'll never know, but it is safe to stating, that the Sarnia Reserve Indian bedamned to the sway of the mat, when he saw Danley could take it. Although the referee turned thumbs down on the disposition, he ordered the bout to be resumed and under the new limit, but it is finish

All in all last night's card was one of the best seen locally in quite some time. For instance Irish Steve Taylor, local matman, earned a return bout with Mike Anderlo after his clean-cut victory over Jim Conkie last night. As for the semi-final bout the best said the better as Joe Kaidzanski actually captured Jack Paliwo for some time before he loosed the Bulgarian cobra hand-ily. Incidentally the promoters would be well advised to procure better opponents for the Winnipeg grappler. Those to witness the main bout between Dunlop and Chief Lynx today realize it was a battle of strength and ability to stand up under punishment. It was probably the greatest wrestling thrill ever seen in a local ring. Incidentally we understand that Steve Taylor's amateur wrestlers are looking for the Arena on Tuesday night next.

OSHAWA MAINTAINS UNBEATEN RECORD

Easley Game Peaghi Retreat the 35-Yard Line

Peterboro, Oct. 28—Oshawa "Blue Devils" won fourth straight O.R.F.U. game and maintained their lead in the O.R.F.U. Eastern section here when they defeated the Peterboro Orfuns, 6 to 3, in a battle that was fought almost entirely between the 35-yard lines.

Their only scoring chance of the game gave the Blue Devils their victory. Jimmy Easley booted a long breaking through at midfield to block Dinsmore's kick, caught the ball on the 35-yard line and ran fifty-five yards for a touchdown, which Phillis converted.

Outside of that one play, Oshawa never ever came enough to the Peterboro line even to kick over scrimmage point. The Orfuns had the edge on plays from scrimmage, but the Blue Devils' defence tightened in their own territory. Oshawa led by 6 to 0 at half time, but in the third period a penalty against the Blue Devils followed by a long plunge by Magee put the Orfuns in position for a placement, and Dinsmore booted a neat goal from the twenty-five yard line. Early in the last period, the Peterboro team had a similar chance, but this time Dinsmore's kick was blocked. Phillis' kicking for Oshawa was a feature, while Magee, Richardson and Kearns were the chief Peterboro ground gainers.

Oshawa — Flying wing, Armour; halves, Phillis, May and Gulliman; quarter, Hare; snap, Grey; inside wings, T. Brown and Bulmer; middles, J. Gulliman and Cutler; outsides, McDonald and Lewis; subs, Bryant, McGuigan, Bagnall, Pellitt, Morrison, Daniel, Farley, Sabler, Fraser, Kaduk, Hew, L. Brown.

Intermediate Football Squad Score 15 - 2 Win Over Lindsay To Take Second Place in Loop

Folwell's Kicking And Well-Covered Line Smart

TWO TOUCHDOWNS

Lindsay Suffers By Fumbled Balls in Line Play

Taking full advantage of the opportunities presented them, Belleville football squad romped home to a 15 to 2 victory over the Lindsay Rotary round before some 500 fans at the local Exhibition Park, in a scheduled Lake Shore group O.R.F.U. game, played on the hoil. Jay, Sinclar punting on the part of Jimmie Folwell, their ace kicking half, coupled with splendid defensive work along the line and the broken field running of Hilton and Schrieder, gave the Kennedy-coached squad the advantage. Facing a team that presented numerous power plays along the line, the veteran line of scrimmage repeatedly broke through to break up the Lindsay attack before it got under way.

Folwell's superb punting materially assisted the locals in their ex-ond O.R.F.U. victory as he repeatedly gained yards on each exchange of punts. Folwell was materially assisted in the backfield by Hilton, Schrieder and Andrews, with Hilton standing out and playing his best game of the season, more particularly with his brazen field running. Along the line of scrimmage the Kennedy-coached aggregation showed ability to stop the crushing plays of the Bressa-led team from Lindsay as the game progressed. Sid White, Rigby, Morgan and Clare repeatedly broke through to smere the Lindsay plays in their tracks, while the work of Ted Lee at out-side was little less than miraculous as the diminutive outside wing turned in a marvelous game for the homeners with his deadly tackling. For Lindsay "Red" Wakelin stood out and was the centre of attack in the hands of the local. Campbell carried the ball well, while Ringland, Bagley, McKee all turned in fine efforts as did Lamb, their pivot-sized quarter. Too many fumbles, while accepting the ball behind the line wrought havoc in the Lindsay ranks as they lost possession of the pigskin repeatedly through these channels.

Tried Two Forwards

Belleville only tried two forwards, completing one for a substantial gain of yardage. Lindsay tried eight forwards and completed two. Belleville moved the yardstick forward five times while Lindsay advanced them six times. The line plunges of Campbell, Bagley and Ringland proved most powerful as these three players carried the burden of the gold and purple's offensive attacks. Lindsay presented a powerful squad but could not counter-act the up-to-the-kicking of Folwell and also fumbled much too often for their own advantage as the local line held them in the pinches.

The Play

Belleville kicked off on a field that saw the mid-section literally a sea of mud which made broken field running practically impossible at this point. Although both squads tried power plays and end runs, no damage was in evidence in the first quarter, Campbell's completed forward pass for a 20 yard gain being one of the features. Both lines were holding well and no score was registered. To open the second quarter Folwell punted 65 yards and Campbell fumbled on his own 20 yard line. Folwell then put the homesters in the lead with a perfect placement kick that sailed between the stand, ards. Following exchanges of punts Belleville worked the ball to Lindsay's ten yard line On a second down Sid White evaded through to break up a Lindsay kick and block it. Ted Lee fell on the ball for a touchdown that was converted and the score stood 9 to 0 for Belleville at the halfway mark.

A strong wind faced Folwell's kicking in the third period and saw Ringland punting behind the wind as every opportunity. After kicks Campbell ran the ball back to Belleville's 40 yard line and as Ringland punted over the Belleville goal, Tripp rouged Schrieder making the score 9 to 1 for the home team. Lindsay was working feverishly and carried the ball back to Belleville's 25 yard line as the quarter whistle blew. On the second play in the final quarter, Campbell tried a placement, that missed the bars, but Hilton was rouged and the count then stood 9 to 2 for Belleville. Folwell then took advantage of an easterly wind and repeatedly kicked for long gain of yardage as Lee, White, Rigby and Faulkner were tackling deadly. Begley fumbled and Burdett recovered, giving Belleville the ball in mid-field. Folwell then kicked over the Lindsay line for a point. Campbell made yards, but Belleville held and as Folwell intercepted a Lindsay forward, he later kicked to the opposing ten yard line. A fumble by Belleville gave the ball to Lindsay on the identical spot. Kelly to Hilton, saw Hilton race over for a touchdown. Schrieder and Andrews made excellent lateral passes to Hilton for a gain of yardage. The last Belleville touchdown was not converted and the final score stood 15 to 2 for the red and blue clad Belleville team.

As the Oshawa "Blue Devils" defeated Peterboro Orfuns 6 to 3 yesterday's local win advanced the Belleville squad into second place as they meet Cobourg here on Saturday afternoon.

The line-ups:

Lindsay—Flying wing, Loucks; halves, Wakelin, Tripp and Campbell; quarter, J. Lamb; snap, McFarmoyle; inside, Begley, Ringland; middles, Gordon, Morden; outsides, Greenlie, McKee; subs, Wilson; J. Gordon; Hodgson; Lee, Wright, Bacon; D. Lamb and Kirley.

Belleville—Flying wing, Forster; halves, Folwell, Hilton and Schrieder; quarter, Andrews; snap, Faulkner; inside, White, Morgan; outsides, Rigby, Burden; outsides, Lee, Clarke; subs, Mountenay, Wilson, Pardella; Kelly; Johnston; Cook; Black and Clare.

Referee—Townsend, Belleville; Umpire—L. Bigley, Lindsay; Head Linesman, Beach, Belleville.

"Bunny" Dunlop is Winner When Indian Disqualified In Main Wrestling Bout

Bout One of the Roughest Seen in This City

The undefeated reign of Chief Lynx, the Rama Reserve Indian badman of the wrestling ring, was terminated at the Belleville Arena last night, when "Bunny" Dunlop was declared victor and winner over the Indian as Referee Bert Wells was forced to rule Dunlop landed in token of victory after continued ferocious and unlawful attacks on the part of the vanquished Indian. Chief Lynx was disqualified following repeated roughness after each contestant had won a fall and Dunlop declared winner before 900 blood-thirsty fans, who called for the Indian's scalp and his defeat. The main bout of last night's wrestling card was easily the most terrific ever witnessed locally with no quarter being asked or given. Chief Lynx left the ring outwardly marked as a result of the beating handed him by Dunlop, the Indian sported a black eye and a badly injured ear, the result of elbow smashes at the hands of the Cleveland madman. In the opening bout of the night, Irish Steve Taylor, local salesman absorbed considerable punishment before he finally defeated Jim Conkle the pugnacious Toronto grappler, while Joe Kalchmach easily downed Jack Pavlos in the semi-final scrap.

Main Bout Good

The main bout was doubtlessly the best bout ever staged in local ring as Dunlop and Chief Lynx staged a scrap, that was truly of champion-ship atmosphere, no quarter being given or asked by either contestant. The grappling holds of every conceivable method of procuring victory and repeatedly crashed each other to the floor with well-placed kicks and elbow smashes, while on the mat they applied their entire knowledge of the mat art to all but maim each other as hammer-lock, full Nelsons, arm and toe holds flying marers, scissors holds and subsequently the contestants were hurled bodily from the ring, only to return and retaliate with more punch and kick for kick. As the main bout opened the fans were into a frenzy realizing the bout was a battle of brute strength coupled with general ring ability. After ring to defeat Pavlos in successive some 20 minutes of torrid battle Dunlop ferociously attacked the Indian with fists, elbows and knees to soften him and subsequently procured a full toe hold, that forced the Indian to concede the fall rather than absorb the terrific punishment at the hands of Dunlop. Referee Wells declared Dunlop the winner amid cheers of public approval.

Chief Lynx, following a rest period returned to the ring to exchange more for more with Dunlop in a round so bitterly fought, that even Referee Wells fell victim to a head scissors at the hands of Dunlop, who toured the official across the ring believing him to be the Indian. No actual falls were registered in the entire bout as the Indian procured a full arm lock and forced Dunlop to concede the second fall rather than take the punishment of the unbreakable hold applied by the Indian. Again Referee Wells was forced to award the fall as the defeated grappler conceded the round. Dunlop returned to the ring to ferociously attack the Indian, who in turn repeatedly fouled the Cleveland grappler in self-defence. After being continually warned regarding his shady tactics and illegal attacks against Dunlop, Referee Wells was forced to disqualify Chief Lynx and declare Al Dunlop the winner of the feature bout of the night.

Local Boy Wins

In the opening bout Irish Steve Taylor, local grappler absorbed considerable punishment at the hands of Jim Conkle, the Toronto rough-house artist, before the local youth managed to soften Conkle with a punishing leg split and then apply his famous Irish wrist hold and subsequently pin Conkle's shoulders to the mat. This bout was far more interesting than the semi-final that saw Joe Kalchmach, 210 pound Winnipeg youth, literally carry Jack Pavlos, the Bulgarian exponent of the mat game, before Kalchmach won the first round with an aeroplane spin and press in 12 minutes. Kalchmach returned to the fray with a Japanese arm-lock followed by a body press, that left the Bulgarian defeated and helpless. Prior to the return of the professional wrestlers next Thursday night, Steve Taylor's school of amateur wrestlers will stage six bouts at the Arena on Tuesday night next.

THREE RECORDS FALL IN INTERCOLLEGIATE MEET

McGill University, defending champions, came out on top of the intercollegiate athletic meet at the University of Toronto Stadium in opposition to four other western colleges, but the rival schools took a fair share of the honors. Three intercollegiate records fell before the onslaught of crack track and field men. High spots from the day's activities are shown above. Top left, John Loaring finishes the 440-yard race in 50.8 seconds, to take the event for University of Western Ontario, London. At the right, Larry O'Connor of Toronto Varsity, comes over the barrier to clip 3.10 seconds from the record, and take the 120-yard high hurdles. The new mark is 15 seconds flat. Claude Moore, McMaster javelin thrower, is seen below hurling the spear 177 feet 10½ inches. The Hamilton collegian boosted the record almost 15 feet by his throw.

ARGO AND McGILL HALF-CARRIERS MAKE YARDS THROUGH THE LINE

Two very similar plays, though on widely separated Canadian football fronts, both gaining yards through the line, are shown above as week-end games cleared the standings to a considerable degree in the east, and left Toronto Argos still on top of the Big Four standing with their fifth straight win. View of a play as Argos beat Montreal in the Quebec metropolis is given at the top. By a clever fake the Scullers have drawn Ryan (30), Johns (16) and Murray (30) out of position, leaving a gaping hole in the Montreal line. Darbyshire is seen plunging through for a seven-yard gain. Youthful Tommy Riddell, only Montrealer still in position, is about to tackle. He finally brought the Argo ball-carrier down. Red Vail of Argos is the man following the ball and Perry of Montreal the player with feet entangled in the legs of fallen linemen. Argos won by the narrow margin of one point, 7-6. Below, in an intercollegiate struggle in Toronto, a McGill plunger is making yards through Toronto Varsity line as the backfirts fight to hold their lead as the top of the Intercollegiate standing. A fighting McGill brigade, after posting up a terrific struggle, went down, 11-7, to the Varsity eleven, however, and the Toronto collegians became leaders of the league.

CHAPTER 15.

JUDY'S DISCOVERY.

Judy's pride and poise fled before the cool, sophisticated amusement of Allison Maher's long, narrowed green eyes; in the faintly indulgent kindness she bent upon her. It was all if Allison said, "poor little Judy..... poor Michael's little wife, it was as if there were a million years of culture, of worldliness between Michael's friend, Allison, and his wife, Judy.

The game became a confusion of colorful charge by opponents that lashed into Judy's mind like long, slim daggers. The players, at first—rather, in succession, before they had reached the grounds—had been Judy's main interest. They, and the game.

She had become intensely interested in the contrast between the two great teams. Yet from the moment Allison Maher's name was mentioned, the game receded into unimportance and even the colorful display of bands, of marching, cheering, and other showmanship to entertain the crowd, failed to reach through the fog, chilling her mind.

Judy became intensely aware of Allison's clothes. Of the expensively simple tweed suit that shouted "Bond Street" and the tailored, mannish tweed topcoat topped with a cavalierly flung on fur scarf of such sleek, luxurious simplicity, that the wife of the athletic coach's little robin'snest felt hat, with a pheasant feather stuck jauntily through the tweed crown, the hand-sewned gloves of the pigskin, and the alligator satchel, obviously moulded, designed especially to compliment it.

Instead of a big chilly chrysanthemum, like the crimson bloom Michael had fastened in the collar of her brand new raccoon coat, Allison wore a bouquet of deep, royal blue violets, fastened into the rich pile of her fur scarf with a long, platinum and diamond clasp.

Everything about Her, from the hauntingly sophisticated perfume, to the soft, musical voice, smashed Judy's pride until she felt bruised, battered and very helpless and frightened.

"She's crazy about you," she kept telling herself. "So can't keep his eyes off her. Everything he says, he directs to her..... not to me!"

"It's a good thing you happened along, Mike." Allison commented once, flashing a long, oblique glance at Judy, huddled down into her fur coat with only her wide gray eyes fixed intently on the gridiron that she was not seeing in the least. "Bill never sees anything but yardage, fumbles, and touchdowns. He's an ad-libbing machine beating scores until after the game."

Bill Pierce did not look up, did not remove his cigarette from the corner of his mouth. But he spoke, seemingly without opening his lips:

"Wish he said something, that I wouldn't know an Army rammed from a Navy. Go back to your love song where's it's appreciated, Al."

Judy was amazed that Allison did not flinch, not flush. She seemed only faintly, indulgently amused, as if Bill and his abhorrence were a common occurrence. It dawned on her, slowly, that Allison was unaware of the picture of rapt absorption he and Allison presented.

The game finally ended, with Judy aware only, that Navy had won, and they began their slow, laborious way from the stadium. Allison knew a way out, to avoid the crush, but before they reached the back exit ..... which some hundred others had also decided to "escape" also .....Judy had lost her chrysanthemum.

She felt it strike her hand, holding tight to her purse, and touching the place where it had been, on her collar, she found it missing.

"Michael!" she began, frantically ..... and looking down, Judy saw Allison's trim oxford come down with appalling finality, flat on the lovely crimson bloom.

"We can't find it in the crush, Mrs. Swayne," Allison began, "it would take hours. Besides, it must be trampled to nothingness. Mike can get you another on the way out."

Judy said nothing. She knew that the mob had crowded, and insulted Allison, jostled all of them, and that it was quite by accident that it had been her hand that had crushed the souvenir of her first big football game.

"Come up to my place for a few minutes," Allison said warmly, as Judy forgot some of her personal problems in anxiety over the money overdue.

"I tell you I'll pay it. Don't crab, Judy! I want to get a commission overdue me, and it will clear that whole batch up! It won't hurt them to wait." Michael had been very convincing in his explanations, and Judy tried not to worry too much, tried to believe he would take care of the delinquent payments soon.

That was on Monday. On Wednesday there was a second note. And then one letter from Michael which hadn't known that Michael had failed to make last month's payment!"

At noon she went to the bank, drew out the money from her own savings account and paid the bills in spite of the deep gouge it had made in her savings, she felt almost happy as she hurried home that night.

Michael was cooking supper. He had got through early, due to a prospect not showing up for an appointment, and his industry was heart-touching.

"Back in the bank—what money, Judy?" His amber eyes were twin suns of surprise as he held Judy. "This cooking after working hours isn't so hot."

"But we can't afford to, Michael," she hurried on uneasily, "they highended me so. Three letters and two telephone calls! They called the office and threatened to take action unless we paid. So.... so I took some money out of my account and paid them."

"You paid my bills, Judy?" Michael's voice was chilled, brittle with accusation. "You made me out a nice little pet trained gigolo before those Shylocks?"

"Don't be angry, please, Michael," she pleaded. "It's our home. Why shouldn't I help out—in a while? The coffee boiled over, and Judy turned it off mechanically, her heart burning upside down as Michael wrenched off the apron around his waist and rushed down his coat and hat.

"Where are you going, Michael?" Judy faltered, remembering his other absences, his other hungers. "Please don't do this, Michael. We will only both be sorry."

World's Series Division Sees Cubs' Cheques Held up by Landis

Chicago, Oct. 23—Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Landis yesterday sifted up the biggest World series player melon in the history of baseball, giving each of the world's championship Detroit Tigers a cut worth $6,844.76 but he withheld the losers' shares belonging to the Chicago Cubs.

Although many observers suspected the Cubs end would be worth $4,196.52 to each player, we held back for the keying purposes becomes of their arguments and better with American League Umpire George Moriarty, the commissioner explained the delay by saying, "We haven't had time yet to mail those cheques out."

"Do you mean to fine any of the Cubs for their battles with Moriarty?" he was asked.

"If anything is to be announced along that line, you'll hear about it in plenty of time," he parried.

Meanwhile, rumors were current that Manager Charlie Grimm, Captain Elwood English and shortstop Bill Jurges of the Cubs would be fined $500 each for their outbursts against Moriarty during the series. English, as the ranny north, was almost certain to receive a fine as he was one of the leaders in roasting Moriarty and Detroit players.

In receiving $6,844.76 apiece the Tigers beat the former high individual mit obtained by New York Giants as winners of the 1923 series over New York Yankees. Each of 1923 Giants received $6,141.69.

Money was distributed to other players on second third and fourth place club as follows.

New York Yankees and St. Louis Cardinals, each club $29,801. 03; Cleveland Indians and New York Giants, each $19,988.01; Boston Red Sox and Pittsburg Pirates, each $9984.

DESPERATE BATTLE TO HALT BLAZE

Forestry Forces Place Damage to Timber at Ten Millions

Los Angeles, Oct 26—(AP)—Two thousand weary fighters continued their desperate battle today to halt a forest fire raging inland toward the Malibu Lake resort on the crest of Malibu Mountain.

Ostimated in a number conflagrations in spotted areas of Los Angeles county during the hot, dry weather forces as the damage of the major fire neared the $10,000,000 mark.

Concern was felt for the safety of four members of a county fire department panning over. The quartette together with another crew was rushed from the Malibu relief camp to the endangered saddle rock ledge near Malibu Lake. The second crew returned reporting the four might have been trapped between Lake and their retreat.

Young ahead of the Malibu mountain fire, in the lake resort community, were the $50,000 home of Sir Guy Standing, noted English film actor, several beautiful mountain lodges and a number of cabins.

Unofficial estimates placed the total devastated area, ranging from the Ventura county line to the Malibu along the ocean front, and from there to eight miles inland, at 150,000 acres of brush and timberland.

BANNON IS GIVEN 15 YEARS AS PART IN LABATT CASE

Verdict Fresh Obstacle in Way of Final Solution

MAY FREE MEISNER

Counsel Claims His Client Absolved by Verdict

London, Oct. 26.—(CP)—The Labatt kidnap clean-up went forward today with preparations for taking John Basil Bannon to Kingston penitentiary to serve a 15-year sentence for the crime, and a plea to Minister of Justice Lapointe to release David Meisner, also serving 15-year term.

Bannon, former Windsor, Ont., beer-runner, was found guilty last night of kidnapping John S. Labatt, wealthy London brewer, but insisted on further appeal of the case, that has puzzled police since August, 1934, the strict penalty threw a fresh obstacle in the way of final solution.

This was because the testimony of Michael McCardell, who had confessed to being one of the kidnap gang, was largely responsible for the verdict against Bannon. Another part of McCardell's testimony was Meisner had nothing go do with the Labatt plot or abduction.

In charging the jury yesterday, Mr. Justice McFarland said the case "stands or falls" on the evidence of McCardell.

Move To Free Meisner

"The jury might well consider," he said, "where McCardell could have got the details of the crime if he had not actually participated in it. His honesty said he confessed because he knew an innocent man was suffering for him.

Scarcely had the verdict been read, when Charles W. Bell, K.C., solicitor for Bannon, who defended Meisner in his trial here last February, announced he would appeal to the Minister of Justice at Ottawa to have Meisner freed.

Meisner will be released from Portsmouth Penitentiary within the next 24 hours," Mr. Bell declared, contending the verdict against Bannon cleared his client of all responsibility for the crime.

"I trust that the Minister of Justice will take immediate action to free my client, wrongly convicted for a part in the kidnapping," he said.

Verdict Accepted Calmly

Bannon, who had been charged by Detective Sergt. Newton with "trying to keep Meisner in prison" accepted the jury's verdict calmly.

"Well, that's that," he muttered after Mr. Justice McFarland ordered him to be taken to jail to serve the year sentence.

Mr. Bell, trying to deliver a lecture to you," the presiding Judge said. "You have had a fair trial and you have been found guilty by your peers."

Mr. Justice McFarland based an appeal for leniency for Bannon on half by A. S. Ferguson, defence counsel, who said the prisoner had a wife and three children living at Windsor.

ITALIANS MOVE TO OBJECTIVE

Junction of Three Armies to be in Centre of Ethiopia

By JOHN EVANS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Rome, Oct. 26 (AP)—A campaign of air bombs to the south and propaganda to the north accompanied Mussolini's armies slowly today toward their hoped-for junction in Ethiopia.

The air raiders of General Ruitalio Graziani, noted as a hardened colonial campaigner, who cleaned up Libya, bombed the interior 200 miles south to Dire Dawa.

They have reached north to Mojale, half-way to Addis Ababa and to Sasa Haile, where Graziani has the site designated for the meeting of the two armies a job Italy's East African colonies of Eritrea and Somaliland.

On the northern front, a stream of Ethiopian chieftains and their followers were reported by the Italian military commanders to be still coming into the Italian camps, clearing out the territory immediately ahead for a new push.

EFFORTS TOWARDS PEACE REACH STALEMATE TODAY

Negotiations Between Premier Laval and Mussolini Break Down

NO WEAKENING

Proposals Advanced by The Italians Are Unacceptable to France

(By O. K. Anderson)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Authoritative sources said today a stalemate had been reached in efforts to end the Italo-Ethiopian war and there were no hopes for an early resumption of negotiations.

At the same time the Treasury Department ordered Great Britain's gold embargo against Italy put in effect in operation next Tuesday.

The Treasury order explaining said financial sanctions were being applied under Article III of the league covenant and refers to loans and credits to or for the benefit of the Italian government or any Italian territory; 2. And a person (wherever a resident) and a body corporate incorporated under the laws of any Italian territory."

The Treasury Department explained Italian banks and branches of Italian territory are excluded from the provisions of these sanctions, but branches of banks (incorporations) in other countries of corporations incorporated in Italian territory were included.

Conversely, other nationals including British which are resident in Italian territory are included under the provisions of the branches of Italian territory of corporations incorporated in other countries are excluded.

Unofficial sources said the progress of the peace negotiations of Premier Mussolini of Italy and Premier Pierre Laval have had virtually broken down and there was little hope for them unless the Italians came forward with new proposals, which is unlikely at the meeting of the League of Nations and Ethiopia.

These authorities viewpoint was that the proposals for settlement by the Italians are unacceptable to the League, but "not entirely unsatisfactory by Great Britain, which Government has asked the League's plans for sanctions against Italy would be carried on "absolutely as outlined" when the League met today with no delay.

Simultaneously, it was officially announced, the munitions of war embargo against Italy became operative yesterday.

In addition to the financial sanctions, which are the most drastic economic sanctions are to be levied against Italy, Council meeting orders them, presumably early in November.

All the British legal machinery for making sanctions effective was approved by Parliament through Orders in Council and the official Treasury announcement relates to the detailed clearing of a certain character with Italians after Tuesday.

Last Diplomatic Thread Binding Two Countries Is Broken by Departure

Locked in Coach And Guarded Closely Until Reaching Border

EMPEROR RELIEVED

Feared Minister Would Again Resist Departure.

By JAMES A. MILLS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

By The Associated Press

Addis Ababa, Oct. 26.—Italy's Minister to Ethiopia, Count Luigi Vinci-Gigliucci, left Addis Ababa today ending the last diplomatic thread having defied for 16 days a government ultimatum to depart. With the departure followed departure, the last diplomatic thread here binding Italy and Ethiopia was broken.

His military attache, Major Calderini, accompanied the Minister on a train to Djibouti, French Somaliland. They will be joined en route by the Italian consul general Alessio Mogallo for whom Count Vinci-Gigliucci insisted on waiting.

The Minister departed secretly from the home of Ras Desta Demtu, son-in-law of Haile Selassie. Haile Selassie, where he had been a virtual prisoner for a fortnight. He was locked in a separate coach attached to the train outside the capital.

Ras Desta's guards will accompany Vinci-Gigliucci the Emperor sent a large contingent of soldiers armed with machine guns and rifles to guard the diplomat as far as the Franco-Ethiopian frontier.

Emperor Relieved

Selassie expressed great relief after the Italian Minister's departure. Until the train leaving Vinci-Gigliucci might resist departure again at the last moment and create another international incident.

After arriving in Ethiopia with what appeared to be triumph in 1932, Vinci-Gigliucci left in what his colleagues described as defeat, disappointment and despair.

Premier Mussolini had invested his Minister with full authority to settle the Italo-Ethiopian dispute but the Count himself conceded to friends he had failed completely.

This writer was told by a correspondent present when Vinci-Gigliucci left Addis Ababa he was taken as little ceremony as a bale of hay.

Locked in Coach

After the Italian nationmaster said goodbye to the diplomat, an Ethiopian officer locked the door of Vinci-Gigliucci's coach and the train pulled out.

In another coach, carefully secluded from the Minister, were two Italian officers and their wives and sisters leaving Ethiopia.

Unofficial advisors said the troops at Gerahai, 200 miles south of Addis Ababa, were the nucleus of Ethiopia's southern line, were being reinforced by the friendly descendation of a new drive by the Fascist forces under General Rudolfo Graziani.

If Gorahai should fall, the Italian drive to the south would almost 110 miles to Sasa Banch. This important caravan route junction, once held by Ethiopians, is the main base of operations for the Italian forces under General Rudolfo Graziani.

Although government officials declined to comment it was believed generally supplies of arms and munitions were entering the country continually.

CANCEL SECOND TWO-DAY SHOOT

Pelee Island Pheasants in No Further Danger

Toronto, Oct. 26.—The second two-day pheasant shoot on Pelee Island, set for the December week-end by Game and Fisheries for November 1 and 2, has been cancelled, Deputy Minister Lewis Evans announced Friday.

This action, which means there will be no further shooting of pheasants on Pelee Island this year," explained Mr. Evans, was taken because of the excessive number of hunters who availed themselves of the hunting privileges on the Island on October 23 and 24.

Mr. Evans estimates that in the neighborhood of 7,000 pheasants were killed these two days. "Operations," he said, "have resulted in reducing the number of birds to a point beyond which it would be undesirable to proceed." Only enough birds, in his opinion, are left for propagation purposes.

HANDBOOKS OPERATING IN WINDSOR, CHARGE

Aldermen Says Lesser Charge is Laid When Apprehended

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 26—(CP)—Driven out of Detroit following a campaign against them by Mayor Frank Couzens, many of the handbooks are now operating in Windsor, it was charged by Ald. Frank Begley before the Windsor Citizenship committee of the city council last night. Ald. Begley argued the city should support the Ontario government to amend the Municipal Act which would legalize and permit the acting of handbooks.

The alderman said whereas formerly persons apprehended in police court on handbook charges were charged with "operating a gaming house" and fined upwards to $500 the rule now was to press a charge for "unlawfully gambling in a public place," entailing a maximum fine of only $50. He said he would like to know who was responsible for the change.

Picton and District

Picton, Oct. 26—The annual meeting and banquet of the Women's Missionary Association of the Anglican Church for the Hastings and Prince Edward Deanery was held in the Parish Hall, Bloomfield, on Wednesday evening. Tables had been arranged for the banquet, but owing to the large attendance by representatives of the various parishes of the two counties, the committee of the hall and ladies decided to have the banquet served at one time and very most attractive, and laden with every delicacy.

Welcome Extended

Mr. J. A. Maher, the toastmaster, welcomed the members to the historic parish of Picton, which has served for a century and a quarter with credit to two counties, two of whose sons were present on this occasion. He referred to famous men who had gone forth from this parish, including Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor whose picture hangs on the wall of the Parish Hall and is also on Bank of Montreal notes. The enthusiastic gathering proved the point made by Rev. A. J. Armitage at his induction service at St. Mary Magdalene, who said that many men would make a success of what they had only the incentive to get started.

Toronto Paid

Preceding the program of addresses, Rev. A. J. McConnell was called upon to say words of appreciation to the memory of the late Mrs. Kitchener of Toronto, president of the Association, who had passed away a few months ago. A capable, good-natured, kindly woman, her reverence his memory also as one of our loyal churchmen, a great leader and a perfect gentleman, said Rev. Mr. McConnell.

Rev. Cecil Winter paid similar tribute to the memory of Major W. A. Jones who had passed away very suddenly and very courageously. At a time when many think of retiring, he had taken on the extra load of the Mayoralty, and met his harness. He had been one of the committee in charge for the previous get gathering.

Both tributes were responded to by a brief period of silence, which seemed during the evening reinforced as the theme of the two gentlemen.

Churchwarden, Colin Carter was called upon to officially welcome the gathering, as he did in his usual manner, considering it a blessing to be able to say, in attendance, including the visitors, 100 present. A great distance."

J. T. Baker of Bonarlaw, secretary, made an appeal for membership, reaching in nearly 300 members.

Most Officers

President: John A. Maher.
Vice-Presidents: A. W. V. Yates, Bakon.

Sec.-Treas.: J. F. Baker.

"It is probable that the next annual meeting will be held in Picton in response to the invitation of the rector of that Parish, Rev. McConnell.

Toasts Given

The toast to "The Church and the Clergy" was proposed by Lieut.-Col. A. W. Ponton, M.C., and the singing of a verse of "The Church's One Foundation."

The Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, Dr. Clarke, was then called to the toast. He felt that the formation of such an association was developing the natural resources of the laity—drawing out men who are willing to give opportunity to serve. He referred briefly to the recent Synod meeting in Calgary where he had attended sessions of the Provincial Synod of the Synod and where it had been decided to have a fresh realization of the great work of the church in the manner in which it was ministering to the needs of changed conditions. Interests and needs of the present day are not the least of their nature. Each section of this vast Dominion has its own peculiar problem. The Church must respond in good to reconcile and to together the whole.

Rev. Lordship looked back with happiness on his period of service in Picton. The spirit of the congregation was magnificent. The Church still the same spirit existent throughout the diocese and that no Bishop had a more loyal and devoted body of clergy than the Bishop of Ontario. He was a diocese with many difficult problems. The clergy looked to him for help and leadership which the people depended on him for sympathy and understanding. Sympathy and co-operation, as between clergy and laity.

In conclusion, Bishop Lyons congratulated the ladies on the splendid form success of the gathering. He said tribute to the late president, Mr. Ketchenon, giving to the church, beyond his province, to the late Bishop Jones, willing to serve wherever he was placed, and who showed in his life the power evoked with his Page.

He had been pleased very much to have laymen express themselves as they had that evening, and hoped the same words from a clergyman

BRITAIN'S NEW TORPEDO 'PLANE

The British royal air force recently completed tests in which speedy two-seater scouting aeroplanes were used to carry huge torpedoes. night sound professional. I hope you will take the message of the evening in the way of going home as missionaries to organize laymen's associations; each of some particular. You also remember the Scripture—"Go ye," in which no one is exempt to endeavor to interest those not now attending church. Then ready to contribute more to building up a strong citizenship than the church. We are all "witnesses" in this matter to get together and build up another to carry on, to cultivate in men a desire to draw near to God, and know more of Him.

Your greatest work is in the home, as a regular worshipper. Begin in the right place, in worship. Then ready from there to serve in special ways. Surely when so many people are in a distracted mood from God, it's up to us to throw our weight behind the Christian movement. Some follow-ups. There is no greater return for your investment, said Bishop Lyons.

Judge E. H. McLean

His Honor Judge McLean was responded to the toast to The Laymen's Association. He welcome you, my Lord Bishop, not as Bishop of the Diocese, but as our beloved rector for our dear friend.

Touching briefly on sessions of the Provincial Synod, of which the speaker said that a motion of condolence was passed there by a vote of 11 to 8 endorsed Britain's attitude in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute. There was unanimity in the matter of moral responsibility to support Britain in her endeavor to keep the peace from her attitude.

As to the realm of service of the Laymen's Association, Judge McLean reminded the audience that the records of the past checked all forms of social service to have been undertaken by the church, which was the only organization to take any responsibility in social matters. Today in church we have a prayer for those in sorrow, need, sickness or adversity, but if we stop with prayers, we are not accomplishing our purpose. Service clubs have formed because most men are desirous of looking for an opportunity to take part in social service work—and they don't come to church because the church doesn't give them that kind of work to do. If through organization of such bodies as this, we can get a man to church then he becomes interested in the church. And in doing that we do not set out only to our Lord man, but to ourselves, asserted His Lordship. Men will be attracted by not more of themselves behind the church. Example has furnished such a great example and opportunity to all Christianity.

Those not on the program who were called upon for brief addresses included Hon. Peter Smith, M.P. for Ireland of Trenton, Rev. S. M. Reed and Professor Ira Martin.

SUSPECT OF MASS MURDER ARRESTED

Woman's Confession Implicates Partner in Killing of Six Persons

Seattle, Oct. 26 (AP)—Defiant and close-lipped, Lee Hall, 38, realized questioning concerning a mass murder mystery today after authorities said he had been implicated in the crime by the confession of a woman.

Sheriff William B. Severyns said Mrs. Larry Poulos, 35-year-old beer parlor waitress, had signed a confession accusing the former sailor and dry dock worker of slaying six persons at a gay house party on Scotland's Point in March, 1934.

The alleged confession said Mrs. Poulos and Hall, masked and wearing gloves, entered the Frank Plieder home in quest of "easy money" and after the six people in the house were robbed the victims were killed so "they couldn't talk."

"We have quite a lot on his hand," said Detective Captain Ernest Yoris of the Seattle Homicide squad. "We have a lot of corroborative evidence for Mrs. Poulos' statement."

Earlier in the evening O. K. Bodla, chief criminal deputy sheriff, had declared: "We have the man beyond a doubt and we don't care if he never confesses."

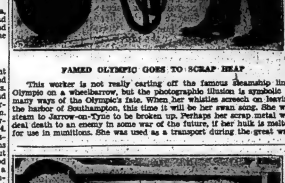
Victims Shot and Stabbed.

The victims in the Erland's Point tragedy, some beaten, some shot and some killed, were Mr. and Mrs. Plieder and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Chenevert, Magnus Jorstad and Ezra M. (Fred) Silcox. The statement put the robbery-slaying on the night of March 28, 1934.

Mrs. Poulos, in her alleged confession, said she trussed up the victims but fled after she saw Hall come out of Mrs. Plieder's bedroom with blood on his clothes and armed with a knife—take one of the men into another room. She said Hall shot at her as she fled.

At one point in the statement the waitress said she had seen Hall two or three days after the robbery and that Hall "told me he had killed them all".

In another point the woman was quoted as saying Hall had threatened to kill her if she disclosed any information and "he would prove that I killed one of them".



Wife Talked in Sleep.

Deputy Sheriff O. K. Bodla said today Mrs. Poulos, husband of the woman whose story reopened investigation of the Erland's Point mass slaying, told police recently he certainly his wife talked in her sleep and that Mrs. Poulos had been held for trial on grand larceny charges in connection with a burglary here on September 2.

FAMED OLYMPIC GOES TO SCRAP HEAP

This worker is not really carting off the famous steamship liner Olympic on a wheelbarrow, but the photographic illusion is symbolic in many ways of the Olympic's fate. When her whistles scream on leaving the harbor of Southampton, this time it will be her swan song. She will steam to Jarrow-on-Tyne to be broken up. Perhaps her strong metal will deal death to an enemy in some war of the future, if her hulk is melted for use in munitions. She was used as a transport during the great war.

DRIVING SUSPENSIONS

Early this year the Honourable T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways announced his intention of making the fullest possible use of the power to suspend driving licenses as a means of checking the rapidly increasing accident toll. As a result of the adoption of this policy the month of September saw put into effect the greatest number of suspensions ever imposed in this Province in a single month. There were 624 suspensions made effective during this month, or approximately one for each thousand drivers' licenses issued, and on the first of October there were in effect, under the provisions of the Financial Responsibility Law, 5140 suspensions. In other words one out of every 150 drivers in Ontario was denied the privilege of operating a motor vehicle.

During the first nine months of this year 4200 persons have suffered suspension of driving licenses. This was 100 less than during the same period of 1931 but during that year there were almost 1000 suspensions for driving without a license. Since that time the Traffic Act has been amended so that a great many of these cases do not now come under the provisions which require suspension so that, on a comparative basis, there were about 700 more suspensions made effective during the first three quarters of 1935 than during the same period in 1931, the year in which the highest previous total was recorded.

That these suspensions are the result of better enforcement of the Highway Traffic Act and not of increased dangerous driving is shown by the fact that during the first three months of this year there has been a sharp drop in the number of deaths resulting from motor vehicle accidents. The exact figures are not yet available as the compilation of the accident statistics requires receipt of reports from all sections of the Province and the study of a much greater number of details. It is certain, however, that the figures for the months of July, August and September of this year will be about 25 per cent. below the total for the same months of 1934.

One of the most satisfactory aspects of the suspension report for September is the evidence it affords of a splendid spirit of co-operation which is being displayed by Magistrates of the Province in the campaign for greater safety. The increased power with which the Department is now employing the suspension provisions of the Highway Traffic Act is also evident in the decisions of most Magistrates who are heartily supporting the contention of the Minister that the most effective safety work which can be accomplished in the field of enforcement is the banning of dangerous drivers from the highways.

The statistics for September and for the first nine months of the year contain some interesting features.

Of the 624 suspensions imposed during September, 345, or more than half, were for reckless driving.

The number of suspensions for driving while intoxicated set a new high record for any month. Nevertheless the total for the first nine months of the year was almost ten per cent. below the total for the same months of 1931.

Despite the fact that many men are quite prepared to express the opinion that no woman should be permitted to drive a car, the suspension figures show that during September only 25 women lost their driving privileges while 599 males were deprived of driving licenses.

Of the September suspensions 8 affected residents of other Provinces, 23 residents of the United States and 588 Ontario drivers. Two of the suspensions for driving while intoxicated were for offences committed by Ontario drivers while in the United States.

It might be pointed out that under the provisions of the Financial Responsibility Law a suspension involves not only loss of driving rights but also the confiscation of motor vehicle permits and markers. At the present time, there are hundreds of markers being held in the vaults of the Motor Vehicles Branch, markers which have been confiscated from motorists whose licenses and permits have been suspended this year, and which will not be returned until the suspension is lifted and proof of financial responsibility filed.

THE MEEK BRITISH

"The meek shall inherit the earth." Mark Twain noticed that the meek must be the English out of the earth—or such a lot of it—the British Empire. And what a puzzling Empire it is! A threatening crisis exists for Great Britain, and the very future of her inheritance, is facing it and facing it alone, for the parts, the dominions, are making it clear that they will have nothing to do with Britain's quarrels. What those dominions ignore is that they, those very dominions, are a—slightly disguised perhaps—bone of contention themselves; that it is the great spare spaces within their borders—room in themselves for empires and closed even to the Motherland herself—that provoke the envy of other nations who prefer elbowroom and that, should Britain come a cropper, those proud parts of the British Empire, now so self-sufficient, will simply dissolve into helpless fragments. The question is: Must Britain fight the battle—bloodless or bloody—all alone while they hold those empty spaces and more, can she?—Kamloops B.C. Sentinel.

THE PREACHER

Lead us, brother, where the light is;
Cast no shadow on our way;
Lead us where the path is—
Lead us to the open day!

Not to grope, or guess, thy mission;
Not to falter in thy speech;
Thine the supra-sensual vision,
Thine the more than mental reach!

We, who fare through toil and sorrow,
Come with hearts of sin and care;
We would know about the morrow—
Is there satisfaction there?

Lead us, brother, bravely daring
Thou thyself the narrow road;
Our diurnal trials sharing—
Show us how to bear thy God!

WHEN YOU'RE LISTENING IN TO A CANADIAN RADIO STATION to an interesting program and a burst of jazz or worse from a Yankee station mingles with your program, don't blame the set. No wonder who presented the Yanks with all the best air channels. With WLW, the Nation Station at Cincinnati, adding power all the time it's way toward the position of the most powerful station on the continent, blanking out CFRB, Toronto, and WABC, New York City, Columbia's key station, making O.K. Then the young woman refused to take the coat, said she had been insulted and left the store in a huff. The clerk felt what she was being the $500 sale. He chased up later, however, when the young woman returned and said that nothwithstanding the treatment accorded her, she liked the coat and would buy it. "Now, young lady," Grandame, where can we send it for you?" Never mind sending it, I'll put it in the car. Out came the thousand-dollar bill again, and $500 in change was handed over—the end of a perfect day. But the next day was different, the bank branded the bill as counterfeit and Mabel was hauled to court on a charge. The first bill was genuine, and the racket was perfect.

Gladys George Remembers Napanee

NAPANEE AND BROADWAY WOULD SEEM TO BE QUITE A STEP APART, but that's all in the way you look at it. One of Broadway's most popular actresses of the moment is Gladys George, playing the lead in Brock Pemberton's dramatic hit "Personal Appearance," which has been running a year.

Miss George played in stock companies from coast to coast and as a child was starred with her father and mother in "The Child's Dream".

Her most vivid recollection of her childhood barnstorming days is of being stranded in Napanee, Ontario, "up where the cold begins". "The Child's Dream" advertising matter ran into a nightmare for Canadians would not pay good money to see it, hence the members of the family were stranded many weary miles from Broadway. Mother and father ended up going on a very restricted diet. They were saved by the fortunate appearance of the Johnston Brothers medicine show, which they joined and there they stuck until Toronto was reached when Lady Luck smiled on the family in a big way again and vaudeville welcomed them.

Miss George says that the medicine show was the berries, all you had to do was step through a flap in the wagon on to the stage and do your stuff under the flaring lights of acetylene torches. They never stayed longer than three hours in any one town, according to Miss George, the reason being that purchasers of Johnson's Magic Elixir usually were looking for the professor about that time after taking the first dose, and with blood in their eyes.

One time the family was stranded in New York and the youthful actress took a job in a candy shop for a time and also posed as an artist's model for nine dollars per week.

She has a contract at Hollywood but does not know when she will find time to fulfill it for when New York gets tired of "Personal Appearance" the play will be taken on a tour of the principal cities.

Mrs. C. J. Bowell left today to spend some time at Mount Clemens and Chicago.

Mr. Fred D. Deroe has decided to enter business on his own account in Calgary, Alberta, and left for that city yesterday. We join with numerous citizens in wishing him success.

The Hon. George W. Ross, Provincial Minister of Education, although in the city unofficially, is having a busy time. Thursday afternoon he visited the D. and D. Institute and Albert College. In the evening he enjoyed a quiet time with a few gentlemen at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Cameron Brown, editor of the Belleville Daily Ontario. Friday morning he visited the convent on John street, the separate school, the central school and the high school. He was given a right royal welcome at all points and will carry away pleasant remembrances of his visit to the city of the Bay.

Mr. Will Matheson is home from Montreal on a short visit to his parents, Bursar and Mrs. Matheson at the D. and D.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Carson of Belleville recently visited friends in Picton.

Mr. R. P. Hamilton has moved into the handsome residence at the corner of Bridge Street west and Cedar avenue, which he has enlarged and filled with all modern conveniences.

50 Years Ago

OCT. 26th, 1885.

A dense fog hung over the city this morning.

Lovefeast will be held at Bridge Street Methodist Church on Sunday.

Mr. John Lingham is removing every second tree from around our lot.

The steamers on the bay were belated time this morning owing to the severe fog.

The new bridge was closed to traffic for a time while repairs were being made to the supporting stringers.

Fishermen report whitefish more numerous in the bay this season. At the first cast of the net at Zwick's Island this morning the catch was 40 whitefish. The largest weighed 4 pounds; the smallest were well grown. There can be no doubt that this great increase in the number of whitefish in the bay has been caused by the action of Overseer Wilkie in having the nets removed from the Upper Gap.

The Young People's Association in connection with St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church will meet on Wednesday evening after prayer meeting to organize for the winter's work.

PREMIER BALDWIN GIVES KEYNOTE

Says Navy Must Bear Brunt If Sanctions Are Applied

London, Oct. 26.—(CP)—With the government emphasizing the need for building up the British naval and air defences and the Labor opposition stressing economic and social reforms, the campaign for next month's general elections was under way today.

Prime Minister Baldwin set the keynote for the government's stand in a broadcast from his home at Chequers, country residence of the Prime Ministers of Britain. Discussing the possibility of a blockade in the course of enforcing sanctions, he said: "the brunt of any trouble that may result must fall in the beginning on the British Navy — in conjunction with others if we are fortunate; possibly alone if we are not."

Meanwhile labor issued its manifesto which included a plan for eventual abolition of the House of Lords. The manifesto said Labor would "seek the power to abolish the House of Lords and improve procedure in the House of Commons."

After four years of the National Government, it said, the country faced 2,000,000 unemployed, more than 1,500,000 on the poor law "and a deepening tragedy in distressed areas."

It accused the government of starting in arms race. The Labor party was in favor of necessary defences and collective measures in the League but it sought better organization of collective security against aggression and a world-wide reduction of armaments.

CABINET BUSY ALL NEXT WEEK

Dominion - Provincial Conference Will Soon Be Called

Ottawa, Oct. 26.—(CP)—The third meeting of the Liberal cabinet since it took office will be held early next week, possibly Monday, when many of the problems left for the new administration to handle will be further considered.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King had no announcement to make as he emerged last night from the Privy Council Chamber at the close of a four hour sitting of Cabinet council. A voluminous amount of work was before the government but progress was being made in dealing with it, Mr. King remarked.

The session followed Wednesday night's sitting immediately after the swearing in of the ministry. Besides considering the problems of unemployment and relief, the Dominion-Provincial conference, constitution of the National Employment Commission and questions relative to trade, with Great Britain, United States and Japan.

A few of the ministers, whose homes are within short travelling distance of the capital are making flying visits to their constituencies during the weekend but will be back Monday.

Letters to the Editor

The Editor, Ontario Intelligencer, Belleville, Ont.

Sir,—

The encouragement given in the Report of the Royal Commission on Co-operation and Development of Consumers' Co-operatives, and the widespread public interest shown thereto, is a substantial means of raising the economic standards of the people which has been growing since the commencement of the depression period, have attracted the attention of individuals and a company promoting interest, and actuated by the Christian spirit which is instead of to give social service.

The Toronto Conference in consideration of the annual Congress of this Union held recently at Saskatoon where a resolution was passed urging the various governments in Canada to bring all applications for incorporation of co-operative societies under the law being satisfied they are of bona fide social order or producer origin, and not of speculative nature.

In the resolution the public are warned to apply at the Head Office to be satisfied, before becoming members of or making investments in co-operative societies that the co-operative, that they are so in fact, and under the proper democratic control. In such resolution the press is urged to publicize the Co-operative, to give publicity there to. The courtesy of publication of this letter would consequently be much appreciated.

General Secretary, The Co-operative Union of Canada,

HYDRO TO MAKE NO COMPROMISES

New Contracts Will Provide For Only Fraction of Power Now Taken

Toronto, Oct 26 (CP)—Any new contracts negotiated by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission with Quebec Power Companies will provide for delivery of only a small fraction of the power the commission has accepted under contracts, which are to be terminated, it was learned in Queen's Park today.

"Although it has been suggested the companies may suggest scaling down power deliveries to one-third at present, there is no chance that such a reduction would not be accepted by Sir Adam Beck and the Hepburn Government.

"Many figures will not be entertained for a moment," said a government spokesman today, "Hydro will not make compromises in the expense of the power users. We want power more than power is worth, and we won't go into agreements that bind our grandchildren." It is understood that the attitude is at the moment "independent" of Quebec power, but commission will require reserve power from the Quebec companies. Unofficial calculations of the reserve necessary range from 100,000 to 150,000 horsepower of a total of 1,000,000 horsepower for which the Hydro Commission has contracts with four Quebec companies, Gatineau, Beauharnois, Maclaren Quebec, and Ottawa Valley Power Company.

Cang of Car Thieves Sought by Prov. Police

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 26.—(CP)—While Hamilton and R.C.M.P. police are busy seeking an alleged international gang of car thieves, provincial police today uncovered what appears to be a separate gang working in central and western Ontario centres.

Following a wrecked car belonging to Dr. F. B. Bowman, of Hamilton, on the Guelph Highway last night, provincial police found the thefts to light.

When first seen in a ditch by a passing motorist last night the car was equipped with license plates and a dog was fleabed to the door of the wrecked car. When officers arrived on the scene, the plates and the dog had disappeared. Further investigation disclosed the plates to have been stolen from a car in a Sandwich, Ont., garage.

B.C.I. SQUAD TRIM ST. MIKES

Score is 13-1 With The Green and White Showing Improvement

Continuing their string of undefeated victories in the Bay of Quinte group in C.O.S.S.A. football circles the C.O.I. 6VS squad rolled home to a 13 to 1 victory over the lighter St. Michael's squad at the Fair Grounds yesterday afternoon. Taking full advantage of their excess weight the Collegiate first-colored team used power plays and literally smothered the lighter team who battled back gamely and held their heavy squad to one point for the first half.

Both kicking halves took full advantage of a stiff west wind and punted at every opportunity with Baker getting more distance than his rival St. Michael hooker, Frank O'Neil.

Using Dick Logie as their pivot player the Collegiate squad opened their attack early in the first half that saw the visitors forged to the fore. Dick Logie, Bert Jones and the yardsticks ahead exactly 13 times in their attempt to make through the St. Mike's line of scrimmage, while the lighter Irish only advanced the pigskin on four occasions, two being completed forward passes. The green and white Collegiate backfield team lifted four forward passes and completed two of them for substantial gains of yardage, O'Neil missing the third which would have left each occasion. The Collegiate squad did not try a single forward pass until the last quarter and then completed two in as many attempted.

In the Play

BOY, blood off and behind a vest wind O'Neil punted to the 30 on every opportunity to gain yardage for the Irish. Bert Jones went on their own 40 yard line and as Dick Logie's opponent went up for assists, the ball carried over the Collegiate line for a point. Bradford made yards for the Irish and the latter ended 1 to 0 for St. Mikes. An exchange of punts and Logie brought to St. Mikes 40 yard line and on a reverse play Dick Logie ploughed through left end for a touchdown. Kiat was converted making the count 8 to 1 for the Collegiate. O'Neil booted a nice 30 yard forward pass to Christie as the half ended.

To open the third period Baker kicked over the St. Mikes goal for a single and repeated the trick in the last minute of the period when Riley stopped O'Neil. With the score standing 8 to 1 against them the Collegiate-coached youths made a determined effort to tie the count but Baker and Johnson, kicking for the visitors, put full advantage of the wind to punt-out the danger. Logie, Jones and Auld Mick and McGrath only to have Johnston and Baker end for a touchdown, that was not converted, Kiers and Whalen were tackled behind the line for a safety to count saw B.C.I. in the lead 13 to 1 and the visitors unsuccessful in efforts fourth consecutive win in the group standings. St. Michael's squad played steady football the while showing daily improvements under the tuition of Coach Schrieder.

Line-ups:

B.C.I.—Forwards: Flying wing, Carr; halves, Johnston, Baker; centre quarter, Muir; snap, Sherry; inside wings, Kiers, Whalen; outside wings, McGrath; outsides, Kiers, Renouf; subs, Saunders, Foley, Reynolds, Lachlan, Auld, Bradford, Christie.

VARSITY AHEAD IN TRACK MEET

Secure Eight Firsts in Inter-collegiate Intermediate Title

Hamilton, Oct. 26—(CP)— The annual intermediate intercollegiate track and field meet is over for another year with Varsity holding the whip hand with a lead of 17 points over its nearest competitor.

Varsity athletes took the ribbon eight times in the 15 events yesterday, and came second many another time. The Ontario Agricultural College athletes were well to the front, however and romped home the winner in three events and gained enough other places to win 70 points and second place.

Although Western had three first the London athletes were not able to garner enough points to bring their standing according to the team fell down to a bad third with 30 points. McMaster had 18.

Gordon Cahill (Varsity), O.A.C., buried the javelin 167 feet to better the record of 165 feet nine inches set last year by C. Moore of McMaster.

Varsity scored heavily in many events, winning first place in the discus throw, 120 yard high hurdles, 100-yard dash, 880 yard run, 220-yard dash, broad jump, mile and medley relay.

O.A.C. stars came in the 16-pound shot put, javelin throw and three-mile run. Western was ahead in the pole vault, high jump, and 220-yard low hurdles. McMaster scored its lone first in the 440-yard dash.

TORONTO MAPLE LEAFS' HOCKEY STALWARTS SUCCESSFUL NIMRODS

Harvey Jackson, sharp-shooting left winger of Toronto Maple Leaf Hockey Club, is as good a shot with a pumgun as he is with a hockey stick. Also he is an ardent hunter.

Along with Dick Irvin, Maple Leaf back and a fine array of birds have fallen to their guns. The Maple Leafs are preparing for the year's hockey activities with Irvin again in charge as coach.

AMERKS READY FOR OPENING

Amateurs Trying Out With Team May Make Grade

Oshawa, Ont., Oct. 26.—(CP)—"We are all set to go," "Red" Dutton, manager of the New York Americans, said today as the squad was out to work again.

In an effort to strengthen his defence Dutton and Leighton "Happy" Emms on the rearguard at a practice yesterday. He made a decided impression on the team manager. Dutton said if Emms continued the good work he would be sure of a job on the Amerks rearguard this winter.

Dutton said he was searching for another rightwinger to start the season but hopes were not bright. He was, however, enthusiastic over the large class of amateurs working out with the team.

"They are about the finest bunch of amateurs I have ever seen," he said. "Why pay large sums of money to professional stars, when you can develop a band of amateurs as good as I have with me this year?"

He made particular mention of Nakina Smith, Oshawa; Pete Lesswick, Saskatoon, and Bill Cowley, junior last season with Winnipeg Monarchs.

Edmonton Grads Still Winning

Edmonton, Oct. 26—(CP)— Defending the International Women's basketball championship they have held since 1922, Edmonton commercial Grads take the floor here tonight in the second of their scheduled five-game series with the American Legion quintet from St. Louis.

The St. Louis girls were unable to match the speed and dash of the Canadian champions in the first game and Grads came off the floor with a 55-30 victory. Although outplayed, the American girls were hopeful of a win in the story tonight and spoiling the Grads' objective of ending the series in three straight games.

McGILL POLE-VAULTER

Pole-vaulter Ericson of McGill University goes over the bar to take second place in that event to the alma mater to help defend the Intercollegiate track and field championship held by McGill at the five-college meet in Toronto.

In Hockey Training Camps

Another famous line, the Cook-Boucher-Cook trio was broken up as New York Americans opened camp in Winnipeg yesterday. Lester Patrick tried Bill Cook on defence while Glen Brydson worked at right wing with Frank Boucher and Bun Cook.

The Ranger mentor hasn't decided whether he will keep the great right winger back on the defence. Bill had some experience there last year and has often expressed his desire to step back when age slowed him.

Another winger who may be modelled into a defence man is Hapsburg of the New York Americans. In training at Oshawa yesterday the veteran showed to advantage in the new position and Manager Red Dutton will keep him there if his good work is continued.

Chicago Black Hawks provided the third exhibition game last night at Champaign, Ill., when the "Blacks" led by the veteran line of Howe Morenz, Munh March and Johnny Gottselig defeated the "Pans" 3-2.

LEAFS SQUADS TIE IN OPENER

Playing in Hamilton Both Teams Put on Clever Show

Hamilton, Oct., 26.—(CP)—Members of Toronto Maple Leafs and Syracuse Stars hockey teams provided a clever exhibition of mid-season hockey before their home-game series for the "Lew" Hayman trophy to decided.

They started the series here last night, when a galaxies of the two teams' players under the names of Blues and White, put on a slam-bang, hard-hitting display and shades of the ice that is 2-2—Stiff body-checks and high elbows threatened more than once to end the open display but not the final battery before any damages was done. The teams meet again in Maitland tonight.

Conn Blues, coached by Dick Irvin of Leafs, scored on shots by Bill Thoms, "Buzz" Boll and Nick Metz. The White's goals were made by the sticks of Reggie Hamilton, Charlie Conacher and Joe Primeau. Blues and Whites were coached by Eddie Powers of Syracuse Stars.

Lester Shiel's tri-colored oiled football squad from the B.C.I. & M.I. are in a class by themselves much their own way in the Bay of Quinte group in C.O.S.S.A. football circles time far this season, but they have one more obstacle to overcome, that being their game versus Coach Pete Beach's Albert College squad at the Fair Grounds. Coach Shiel's squad used their excess weight to good advantage in the first game and down yesterday and win to the tune of 13 to 1 and if they can amend the yard sticks but four times as many times as did the Irish yesterday they should have little trouble over along the line, but the St. Mike's squad showed power in their city in aerial attacks, especially in forward passing. O'Neil looked well for the Irish in the first game but was slightly over-shadowed by Baker in the punting duels, the punters taking full advantage of a stiff west wind. There is no doubt the St. Mikes are a battling squad and will improve, they being the only team to defeat the A.C.I. score highly seasoned players in McGrath, Bob Reid, Saunders, Legge, Baker and Renouf, all of whom are playing good ball for the group leaders.

This afternoon the Belleville O.R.F.U. squad meet the Cobourg Grey-Green team on the Cobourg Lake Shore schedule. To date the Cobourg team has won but one game, but their scores show they have a fighting chance against the visitors. Coach Dr. Kennedy fully realizes the importance of the

With mysterious black stage glittering in silver stars, flowers in profusion and the proverbial Hallowe'en pumpkins, Minerva Chapter O.E.S. gave its Hallowe'en party last night. Routine work by Worthy Matron Sister Womacott was soon despatched and the evening given over to enjoyment. Worthy Patron Brother Cooper presided. A varied and well rendered program followed: Scotch Dance by Master Douglas Bobbin; reading by Miss Anna Bingle; banjo solo by Miss Muriel Turner; reading by Miss Bernice Edwards.

The dress parade was a difficult one for the judges. A variety of masqueraders, both young and old marched around the hall, the most original ovation being won by Miss Arbuckle and Mr. Ewart Bonter as Ophia and her brave. The Indian costumes were perfect in detail even to his stride.

With Helen Darrah at the piano, impromptu dancing was enjoyed until refreshments were served. The hostesses were Mesdames Allin, Clapp, Simmons and Bill Cooke. The door prize was won by Mrs. Sam McGuire; bean contest, Mrs. Alfred Cooper; spot dance, Mrs. William Cooke, Mrs. Victor Graves.

AMATEUR HOUR GIVEN BY SHRINE

An enjoyable innovation in social activities of Bethlehem Shrine No. 11, was Major Bowes' Amateur Hour held Wednesday night at Oddfellows Temple, Front Street. After the business of the order had been despatched and Shrine declared closed, the hall was transformed into a cleverly improvised studio for the test. The Chase and Sanborn Hour was enacted in minute detail including the wheel of fortune, a replica of the NBC "mike", the affable Jimmy Wallington and the formidable gong. Major Bowes was himself impersonated. The witticisms and antics of the jocular major were both convincing and amusing. There was a large and responsive audience present and the hour was well consisted.

The Bell-Boy Orchestra received the greatest number of votes. They were awarded a prize, an imaginary trip to Washington with group fare. An interesting event of the evening was a draw for the beautiful quilt Mrs. Russell Smith, Worthy High Priestess, made the draw with Mrs. Maud Elliott, 34 Bridge Street holding the lucky ticket.

Delightful refreshments were served by the committee and the Bell-Boys rendered an enjoyable dance program.

PRESENTATION

During the evening the guests were entertained by dance selections by Mrs. R. Chambers and a solo by Mrs. F. Purmidge after which the following address was read by Miss Margaret Smallhorn.

Dear Harold and Marion,—

We, your friends and neighbors, have gathered here tonight to extend to you our very best wishes for a long, happy and prosperous wedded life and may your year find you happier than the last.

We are sorry we do not know either Harold or Marion very well, but we hope that this evening may be the beginning of a new friendship and trust as the years pass you will find us friends worthy of the name.

As a slight token of our love and friendship we ask you to accept these gifts and may their use recall this happy event and as a poet has said:

When you take an inventory
Of your friends, both new and old,
When you are adding up the joys of life

Which can't be bought with gold,
When you feel the need of someone
Who will stand thru thick and thin,
We shall count ourselves most happy
If you only count us in.

Signed on behalf of Corbyville and Canniffton friends,

Gerald Brenton
Pearl Cole
Margaret Smallhorn.

They were then presented with floor lamp, table lamp and fern. The bride and groom very graciously thanked all for their gifts. All joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" after which a delicious lunch was served.

Correct Manners
By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

(Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOUSEWIVES' PROBLEM

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Many times each day we housewives are confronted with a problem — that of treating the many canvassers with graciousness. It is impossible for us to buy from each one. Won't you please suggest some polite way for us to address them?

Would-be-gracious.

This is, most definitely, a problem that we always have with us. We want to be human about it, and as kind as possible, and very understanding of the canvasser's problem and his need to earn a living — but there is the baby crying, or the pie in the oven, or the telephone ringing and anyway very little time or real inclination to be brilliant. But well-bred people accept their inside manners in just such exigencies as these, and we're called and intimated if we don't say "no" as courteously and pleasantly as we would say it if a person socially important in our lives were looking on. If a "table" were taken of most women dismissing canvassers, I'll wager they wouldn't enjoy looking at it.

There is always the "Good Morning" or "Good Afternoon" to be said. Then if we want to buy, all is well. If we don't, a gracious but firm "No, thank you. I don't need any" or "No, thank you. I don't use that kind of soap" or "perfume" etc.

If this doesn't work, as it won't with the over-persistent kind of canvasser, or the high-pressure salesman who wouldn't dream of taking no for an answer, you'll have to put on pressure too and say it in quite definite about my answer. And I'm very busy. Will you please excuse me?" — and close the interview, and when necessary, the door.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I expect to have a celebration of our tenth wedding anniversary and I would like to know if it would be proper to write an informal note asking for the invitation, and if so, will you please tell me how to word the note? Would it be proper to specify the "tenth" anniversary, or would it be better just to invite them to an "anniversary party"?

T.

Whether you tell your friends, in your invitation, that it is to be "a tenth anniversary party" or "an anniversary party" or just "a party" depends on your choice. People have various notions about this, some hesitating to name an occasion that requires a present. However, if you do say that it is to be an anniversary party, it seems logical to name the anniversary.

Your invitation might read something like this, changed if you decide to take out the mention of the anniversary:

Dear Jane:

Tom and I are having a little supper party in our home to celebrate our tenth wedding anniversary, on Tuesday, the first of November, at eight o'clock and of course we won't accept anything but "Yes, we'll come" from you and Jack. So do say that, and make us happy in anticipation of greeting you two dear friends on the first.

Love from us both,
Affectionately,

JELLY and JAM

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When jelly is served with meat, how is it correct to be served? 2. At family meals, how are jelly, jam, conserves or honey conveyed to the table? Should they be eaten with hot rolls or biscuits?

Mrs. Brad.

1. We eat the jelly that is served on meat with the meat, as an accompaniment of the meat, as we eat any of the other food accessories. We eat jelly with the fork. 2. When the jelly, jam conserve, or honey is intended to be eaten on the rolls or biscuits, we should serve a small dish, as put it on our bread and butter plate. We break off a piece of the hot roll, butter it, if we wish, and then, with the butter spreader, put a small portion of the jelly or jam on the piece. We cut this piece before we break off the next piece of biscuit.

Real Beauty Qualities
Make-Up Can't Disguise Poor Complexion
Won Through Effort

By HELEN FOLLETT

It's all right to run to the cosmetic counter and buy beautifying shutter pigment, blushes in boxes, rosy tints for pretty lipsticks, and paints for cheeks. Pulpiness and its work properly.

It is the old story of health and symmetry—diet, fresh air, restful sleep, mental health.

The right path to a complexion beautifier. So are breathing exercises. After a night of refreshing sleep a woman awakens with red lips, sparkling eyes, rose-petal cheeks. Fatigue, worry, indigestion, nervous rundown and poor diet sickens with a woman's appearance.

Place rouge on the eyelids. If you wish and on the temples, but not on the cheeks or the lower lids. If you do, you will look as if you have been drinking a good cry.

When factory roses are placed too low, they make the face look saggy, add to lip width. Women with eyes set close together should place rouge far away from the wings of the nose. There are tricks in the art of face painting is a popular one right now.

For the complexion, that is discolored, in need of mild bleaching, there is a simple home remedy, the beaten white of an egg to which has been added a teaspoon of strained orange juice.

Spread it on a clean skin surface lightly. Include the neck. Keep the best necks need whitening agents now and then. It's also fine for an oily skin or one that is dotted with large pores. Keep the flesh feels drawn, remove the pack with tepid water, and pat dry with a good cold cream jar. Do it twice a week.

HIGH RUNS IN BILLIARDS

Vancouver, Oct. 26.—(CP)—A new record for high runs in billiards was credited to Walter Lindrum, world's championship English billiard player, today.

Playing against Clark McConachy, New Zealand champion, last night, Lindrum broke his own Canadian high break record of 610 with that of 650.

After completion of last night's match Lindrum said he would be pleased over the New Zealand champion to 726. Lindrum had 3304 and McConachy 2286.

McConachy was responsible for three high breaks, 130, 130 and 160.

PLEADS GUILTY

QUINTUPLETS IMPRESS PSYCHOLOGIST

Montreal, Oct. 26.—(CP)—Dr. Alfred Adler, New York Psychologist who originated the present conception of an "Inferiority Complex" arrived in Montreal today after a visit to Callander, Ont., where he examined the Dionne quintuplets.

If a very small shoulder carries a chip . . .

DEFIANT . . . cross as a bear . . . when your child has "days" like this, take warning!

There's often a physical cause for a child's naughtiness. And usually it is simply — constipation.

Give a Child's Laxative

It is a wise precaution to give a laxative. Not an adult laxative which may cause griping pain, or upset stomach . . . but a child's laxative. Give Castoria!

Castoria is made especially for children — from babyhood to 11 years. It is safe — contains no harsh purgatives, no narcotics. It is gentle. It is effective. And it has a pleasant taste that children like!

Ask your doctor

Next time you see your doctor for your child's regular health examination, ask him about Castoria. He will assure you that Castoria contains only such ingredients as are suitable for a child's system.

Buy a bottle of Castoria to-night. (If you're thrifty you'll buy the family-size bottle.) Keep it handy, always. Give it for constipation and at the first sign of a cold.

RUTTAN—In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Harry D. Ruttan, who passed away three years ago today, October 26, 1932. For many years our family chain was unbroken together,
But oh, that chain is broken now.

The better tone on the local board can be attributed entirely to the fact that many issues are now receiving aggressive sponsorship, with the Canadian political situation cleared up for the next five years, a strong government now in power, with business indices recording steady recovery, it is not surprising that a more confident attitude pervails with regard to the stock market.

LOOT OBTAINED AT OTTERVILLE BANK

Bandits Hold Up Staff And One Customer in Bank

Woodstock, Ont., Oct. 26 (CP)—Driving up to the Royal Bank in Otterville, Ont., yesterday, two men entered the building, held up the three members of the staff and the customer, locked them into the vault and scooped up all the loose cash in the safe. They then fled in the car in which a third man had kept the motor running.

The vault door not having fastened properly, the imprisoned quartet were soon on their feet and began to follow the robbers in two cars after them. They gave chase to Tweedville where it was thought the bandits had abandoned their car. Brantford, all trace was lost.

L. Carley, Manager of the bank said while it was still impossible to learn how much the loss the amount had not been large. H. Wood, teller, W. Law, ledger-keeper and W. Siddon, Otterville businessman were the others in the bank at the time of the raid. They described the bandits as tall men wearing light overcoats and fedoras.

Board Room Gossip

As Supplied to Bigger and Crawford By Financial Service

The New York market has been riding for nearly seven consecutive months. The average intermediate swing is three months; only exceptional swings last four months, without some correction. Since Jones Reward and Dow Theory Market Review. The most reassuring aspect of the present market is the lack of absence of heavy speculation. Brokers' loans have been falling and security transactions have not risen above 3 million shares a day. Despite the tremendous rise in stock values the New York market does not present that unhealthy appearance which one generally associates with the advance of such sizeable proportions. Technically, therefore, the New York market seems sound.

In Canada, the markets are catching up to the betterment in business which has been registered over the border and are gradually beginning to throw off fear. Less sensitive influence is encouraging conditions and more susceptible to any increase in offerings or bids. Canadian stocks must be judged on a slightly different basis.

The Wall Street Journal states that entering the period of seasonal improvement in their business with October sales running about 10 per cent. ahead of last year, leading chain store executives are optimistic that the new administration in Canada is in favor of lower tariffs and is now working on a reciprocal agreement with the United States, with Secretary of State Hull. Lumber is one of the important products on which Canada will probably seek reductions in return for favors to American goods.

Several factors have contributed to the improved tone of investment in the chain store field in Canada: the general contraction in buying power due to widespread unemployment conditions throughout the country; the sales resistance met by certain of the chains arising out of the price spreads and mass buying enquiry last year; and cut-throat competition among the various chain store organizations, especially in the important Montreal field.

There are evidences of better conditions developing in connection with each of these adverse influences. Employment has picked up and hopes are entertained of a continued improvement in this direction. The unfavorable effects of the Stevens enquiry are now believed to have practically as the conviction grows among the bulk of the public that many of the operations under whose operations were attacked during the course of that enquiry have been a fair opportunity of presenting their case before the Royal Board. In connection with the third factor, the competitive conditions in the Montreal field, there are signs of a definite change of policy among the various chain organizations.

The above is most interesting for certain holders of such companies as Dominion Stores, Thrift Stores and Stop and Shop, all of whom are liberally represented in the Montreal district.

Industrial recovery, already well advanced, is gaining further momentum. The markets, during the week, have advanced moderately reflecting growing confidence. We believe that Canadian business is entering a period of progressive betterment and that selected common stocks are a buy. Base Metal, Hamilton B.G.&W. and Steel of Canada are suggested as attractive purchases.

Utilities—Bell Telephone, Montreal Power, Shawinigan.

Metals—International Nickel, Consolidated Smelters, Noranda.

Consumers Goods—National Breweries, Imperial Tobacco, Canada Dominion Sugar.

Industrials—Steel of Canada. Dominion Bridge, Building Products, Pipe-Hiram.

Miscellaneous—Imperial Oil, Inter. Petroleum, Ford of Canada, Dominion Coal Preferred.

There are in the lower-priced issues a number of well managed businesses should be definitely stimulated with material improvement in market price: e.g. Canada Bread, Baltimul "A" and Dominion Steel and Coal "B".

Canada's exports of nickel in the first nine months of 1935 highest level since corresponding period 1930.

Sherritt Gordon management hopes that there will be further improvement in copper so as to justify resumption of operations.

Pickle Crow.—September output valued at $108,614 was at a new recovery high since resumption of operations. Ore reserves, new record, as production in first 15 days of October.

Base Metals.—"The board has determined to suspend operations in the future because of lack of available ore reserves to warrant extensive exploration," reads message to shareholders.

Reno Mill Can Treat 140 Tons Daily

At the annual meeting, Mr. Lindsay, in referring to the mill, stated that it had practically been constructed during the past year, notwithstanding considerable expense, but was now in good shape with no further major expenses anticipated. With no further additions he felt an average tonnage of 140 tons daily could be maintained if mine conditions warranted. He felt that last year's grade should be maintained.

Industrial Activity Lifted To New High Since 1929 in U.S.

Motor Factories Accelerate Production to Beat Coming NRA Regulations

INDEX PLACED AT 81.5

(By Rader Winget)

(Copyright 1935, by the Associated Press)

New York, Oct. 26.—The automobile industry roared down the recovery highway last week, lifting industrial activity to the highest pace for this time of year in a long time.

The biggest production of new automobiles for October since 1929 lifted the Associated Press weekly index of industrial activity to a new high for 1935.

In fact, it touched the highest level since 1929, a period in which the pace in an effort to "beat" the oncoming NRA regulations and increased costs.

Steel production did almost as well. The American Iron and Steel Institute estimated production for the week at 51.8 per cent, of capacity which approximated the output for the same week in 1931 was 50.6 and a year ago, 39.

Statistics appearing for the previous week showed a substantial gain in electric power production after recording an all-time high in the second week of October.

The index of industrial activity, based on 1926 as 100, rose to 81.5 today as against 77.0 the previous week and 62.3 a year ago. The previous high for the year was 77.3, reached last February.

The index, with seasonal adjusted indices for its six component factors, follows:

	This Previous Year Week Week Ago
Composite Index	81.5 77.0 62.3
Automobile Production (x)	100.6 73.4 40.6
Steel Mill Activity	51.8 50.6 39.0
Electric Power Activity	89.5 93.4 90.7
Carloadings Revenue Freight	101.3 101.8 93.9
Residential Building (x)	42.5 42.5 16.4
Total Car Loadings	58.6 59.1 59.8

(X)—New high 1935.

In securities markets during the week ended yesterday a new high level since 1931 was established by 60 issues in the Associated Press average.

Maternity Sweepstakes Contest Enters Last Lap

Six Toronto Families in Race For $500,000 From Estate of Late Charles Millar—Ends Oct. 31, 1936

By HOWARD GEERING
Central Press Canadian Staff Writer

Toronto, Oct. 26.—With half a million dollars at stake, the world's strangest maternity race is heading an end. One year from to-day there will be waiting for some Toronto mother $500,000 if she can prove that during the ten-year period 1926-1936 she has given birth to more children than any other Toronto mother.

Under the bizarre will of Charles Vance Millar, millionaire Toronto lawyer, bachelor and practical joker, this sum of money was left to the most prolific Toronto mother during the ten years following his death.

On October 31 of this year the estate of Charles Millar will go on sale. The property and stock holdings are expected to realize a half a million dollars, but the exact amount will not be known for at least a year, according to the executors of the estate. The selling of all the property will occupy the better part of a year by which time the baby marathon will be officially over.

Mrs. Keaney Leads

Leading the marathon so far as known, is little Mrs Matthew Keany, French-Canadian mother, who has had 14 children five of whom have died and who is expecting another before Christmas. Of these Mrs. Kenny claims 11 have been born since 1926. Mrs. Kenny whose hobby is making miniature buildings of Toronto, as they appeared 100 years ago, will buy Mary Pickford's birthplace to exhibit her now ever-flowing collection. On relief for the last ten years, Mrs. Kenny is perhaps the most cheerful of the Toronto mothers who are contenders for the money. Her chances, however, depend largely upon the registration of the births of three children whose births were not registered for some time after their death. Doctors it is expected will be called upon to substantiate Mrs. Kenny's claim. This doesn't bother Mrs. Kenny.

"It's been a great race, win or lose," she smiles.

With twelve children, nine born since October, 1926, Mrs. Steffano Darrigo, Italian-Canadian mother, is well up in the lead with Mrs. Kenny in this strange race. The determined mother has managed to lose their three fruit stores, two automobiles, their insurance, and now bankrupt they have been forced to accept relief.

"I am going to win that Millar money," said Mrs. Darrigo to-day. "All my friends — Mrs. Leigh, no one when they read about Mrs. Kenny and the others. But I will show them all."

Expecting Twins

When told that Mrs. Kenny was counting on twins in the future, Mrs. Darrigo demanded: "How about my wife? She has had two sets of twins already. Maybe she will have two more sets of twins. Then there is the Millar money for us."

According to Mrs. Darrigo they would open up their fruit stores and their children would always be sure of work.

Mrs. Leigh, another and one who is well up in the running is another Italian-Canadian mother, Mrs. Joseph Bagnato, mother of 12 children, nine born in the stricken time. Of all the parents in the marathon, Mrs. Bagnato and her husband are perhaps situated financially better than the other contenders, her husband a customs inspector and they have a car. Mrs. Bagnato wants only one thing with the Millar money—peace and quiet.

Canadian Couple Contenders

"I want to be quiet," she says.

Close on the heels of the other mothers comes Mrs. John Nagle, wife of an unemployed laborer. In August of this year a six-pound baby girl was born to the Nagles, making nine children in the nine years since Charles Millar died. Mrs. Nagle was sick in bed for four months this year, the result of injuries when she fell from a step ladder as she was papering the walls of her home.

I have not used it or any other during the last four years following farming as usual.

Carmel, Oct. 26—On the evening of Oct. 10th, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Simmons entertained at a reception at their home in honor of their son Ira who was recently married in Montreal to Miss Reta Stewart.

Tea was served in a tastefully arranged dining room, which seated 35 guests, friends of the bride and groom.

The tables were centred with white poinsettias in crystal baskets of white and yellow roses and the wedding cake.

The ushers were Miss Evelyn McInroy of West Huntingdon cousin of the groom; Mrs. Osborne and Miss Bernice Latone of Belleville niece of the bridegroom and Mr. Jack and Mr. Jack McCabe, who tastefully arranged the courses.

The bride received many beautiful gifts. Then at 9 o'clock about 75 of her neighbors and friends invaded the home and after a social time served, with the bride and groom.

Mr. E. Horton acting as toastmaster asked the newly weds to be seated. After a few pleasant remarks from Mr. Horton, Miss Margaret Reynolds read an address and Miss Bright and Miss Simmons sang a happy couple with a beautiful Kenwood blanket and three pairs of lovely linen madeira pillow cases.

Although taken by surprise Ira replied in a few well chosen words for himself and on behalf of Reta, for the lovely gifts received.

After singing "For they are jolly good fellows" a dainty lunch was served by the Carmel friends at which a social evening was spent with the bride and groom.

The address read in their honor was as follows:

Dear Reta and Ira:

On this happy occasion of your marriage your friends and well wishers of Carmel desire to play a small part in the establishment of your first home. We can not help you think that in entering upon the blissful sea of matrimony that your many friends here, would not wish to manifest in some tangible way their interest and appreciation. We are told to rejoice and so to-night we assembled here to share with you in your happiness, all of us. If I win I am going to give part of it to other families anyway."

So instead of one mother taking the lump sum, half a dozen of them may share the winnings.

Smoke Does Not Hinder Swallows' Departure

San Juan Capistrano, Calif., Oct. 23.—The swallows of famous San Juan Capistrano mission yesterday defied the elements and departed for the south on schedule as they have done every October 23 for 64 years.

A dust-laden gale was blowing as the swallows took off. An added handicap was heavy smoke from Southern California's disastrous brush and forest fires.

Villagers gathered to watch the departure said it was impossible to see 10 feet in any direction. In fact, it was not until a villager climbed to the loft of the ancient mission that it was known that the flight had taken place.

The fathers of the mission know exactly when the swallows will return. They always leave on October 23 and come back on March 19.

"Installment Marriage"

by

Janet Doran

"I'm going to get the money to pay you back, Judy. And don't worry ..... the only thing I'" be sorry about is that I let myself wide open for this!"

Judy reached out a pleading hand, but her husband is from his sleeve adeptly.

Don't borrow, Michael. Wait until you get your commission. Then you can repay me, if you're so set on it."

"Right now," Michael said coldly, "tonight, I'll pay you, Judy. I'm not a drained house-pet yet!"

Judy moved woodenly, stiffly, to her bedroom to take off her suit and change to a house-dress. Not until twenty later was she to realize that he went to Allison Maher to borrow the money!

CHAPTER 16.

REAL TROUBLE

Judy fully expected to hear Michael stumble unsteadily home, any moment after two, with his pockets empty and his jud dull, and aching with remorse.

When she finally heard his key in the lock, softly, softly burning the door open, a fear greater than the other blazed across her mind in a searing path. He was cold sober. So sober he was carefully, ludicrously cautious lest he awaken her.

Judy watched him through tangled, thick lashes that did not betray her wakefulness. He took off his top coat, placed his hat on the bureau, and surreptitiously felt of his chin, his throat, before the mirror.

Then he began taking things out of his pockets. His open knife. His watch. His billfold, and from the billfold a thin, narrow, small slip of paper, obviously a check.

He studied this, briefly, then folded it again and placed it with the billfold in his hip pocket. Then he placed the wallet in the drawer of his blue-striped pajamas and the action brought a dark stain of shame to Judy's soft face, in spite of her eyes to stay closed. She was afraid she would look at him and then against still afraid she might search his wallet!

It had a searing brand across her heart to see him so careful of his money, or how.

It filled even the fear she had had when he left her in such anger to get the money. It made her forget to worry about where he got the money, or how.

When the alarm brought her out of the heavy, fragile slumber she had finally drifted into, Judy was not rested. Was stiff and tired and jumpy.

Michael still slept, one arm up-flung, as if to shield his eyes. As if he had fallen, asleep, staring into the darkness, thinking. It gave Judy's heart a quick little yank, and the hurt of his actions was the check and wallet stilled before a newer anxiety.

Michael looked so tired. So worn and drawn. His face was much thinner than it had been a few weeks ago, and there were tired little lines etched around his mouth and eyes. Lines of strain and worry.

Judy had breakfast ready, before she called Michael. She wanted him to sleep as late as possible before getting up.

"Michael," she said softly, shaking his shoulder gently. "Mike, dear, it's time to get up."

He rolled over and grumbled something unintelligible. She shook him again.

"You'll be late, Michael."

"Oh!" his eyes were still hostile, his tone gruffly polite. "Thanks." He swung his feet to the floor, felt for his slippers, and bent his tousled head into his hands, elbows braced on his knees.

"I feel rotten," he muttered. "Think I'll take a seltzer."

He went to the bathroom to dress and Judy flung the covers over the bed. The pillow and sheet were handy reminders of some kind of a drama, and the old nagging fear rose up in her mind. Could he had had too many cocktails the night before.

"I must try to stop him drinking or he'll have another attack of his appendix," she thought worriedly.

Michael appeared, did not sit down. He was dressed for business, but in spite of the flattering new brown tweed suit, soft white shirt, and dark maroon tie, he was pale, ashen, ghastly.

"Just some black coffee, please, Judy. My head is bad."

"But, Michael, at least a slice of toast and a soft-boiled egg! You'll be ill if you try to work all morning on black coffee!"

He glanced at her quearly at that, and Judy's head drooped downward. Did he imagine she wanted him to eat a good breakfast so he could earn more? Her fingers twisted nervously, on the percolator as she poured him his third cup of black coffee.

"Don't worry," he said gruffly; "I'll be all right."

Her heart cried out to him in a desperate, silent plea to remember their love, to understand, but no words came. It was as if an invisible impenetrable wall had been built between them like a mighty glacier, and they were neither about through it her climb over it. As if it were freezing, slowly congealing the most precious thing they had ever known.

"I'll take the money to your account, Judy, as soon as the bank opens." He put on his hat, and Judy was sure she saw him wince as he brought his arm up. But she was so stricken with the cold anger that she did not remember that until later, either.

"Michael," she began in a little frightened rush, "Michael, if this is as much my house as yours, if it's my happiness as much as yours, and I'm just as side-hearted, and earn almost as much....."

"Judy," he declared loudly, a little wildly, "I won't listen to it, do you hear? I won't let you argue me against my principles in any way you look at it! This house, and the responsibility of running it, is my job! I don't care what you do with your money, but you're not paying my bills with it!"

Judy stared at him in stricken silence, unable to see his hard wrap-on against him, that would prove her point. Unable to show him by pointing out that the answer to his problem was that unless they brought their expenditures down to the budget of their joint income, eventually they must alter their method of meeting their obligations.

"All right, Michael," she agreed quietly, "but you hurt me when you borrow from strangers and leave me to worry about whom we shall rob to pay Peter! Paying Paul isn't the end of the chain! There seem to be other links."

"If I borrow money, Judy, I'm as well able to repay it now, as I was before I married!" He went out on that, and his words were a dull ultimate to the pain that throbbed in Judy's mind all day. She could never make him understand. She couldn't make him see that it was worse to borrow from Allison than to borrow from Paul, that it was to use some of her salary or savings to keep a debt unrepaid, and their good name, so far as credit went.

At noon her appetite had left her, and instead of going out to lunch, she stayed at the office, calculating on some contracts she had to get in order before the next mammoth rush of bids arrived.

Ted Hoyt came through at ten to one, glanced at her oddly, and then came back.

"Been to lunch yet, Judy?" His blue eyes were grave and concerned. Not at all the "chilled blue steel" one of the girls had once defined them, and startled, Judy discovered that his hair was graying rapidly at the temples, though he kept it cut so close to his head she hadn't noticed before.

"I.... no.... that is," she faltered, "I had a slight headache and I thought it better not to eat until it left me." She pushed the contracts into a neat pile, lest he notice that she had been putting in overtime, but he reached out a slender, sun-browned hand and took them from her.

"Lester go out and get a hot malted and a sandwich," he said to the office boy quietly. "It won't help your head any to work on your lunch."

When she hesitated a moment, he went on gently: "Everything all right at home, Judy? Not worrying about anything?"

She shook her head and turned quickly to get her hat and purse, afraid to confide in him, afraid to share her troubles, as she had been doing for all the years up to the time she met Michael. Michael stood between them, an accusing, angry spirit, ready to burst into explosive fury if she dared open her lips.

Sighing softly, Ted walked on into his office, but he did not shut the door. Instead, he stood at his desk apparently studying some papers —actually watching Judy's hasty flight from the adjoining room. His eyes were fixed unseemly on the roofline beyond his office window, after Judy had left, and his mouth was a little grim, as were his grave blue eyes.

At seven Judy had finally given up waiting for Michael, and she fixed the salad and cold plate, fully sure that he was still angry with her. Michael was not one to forgive his displeasure.

"I am going to be an old woman and worry like a fussy hen, or else Michael is delayed a bit!" she promised herself, "I'll have a block of insurance." But the hour did not taste very appetizing, and she was conscious of a faint, sick ache to her head, yet at nine, he'd eat came in, and went directly to bed. He was, he said, only tired out. Yes, ill.

But Judy knew. And like a fleeting warning she remembered the whine of pain as he had reached upward to put on his hat that morning.

"Michael," she begged, "Michael, darling, please let me call Dr. Fenwick. Please don't take any chances!"

He yanked the covers over one shoulder and his voice was sharp with irritation. "I'm catching your cold, I'm sure. That's all."

"We can't afford a doctor every other month, Judy," he said, and at her, and made a sound that was meant for a grin, but that was really dreadful, terrifying sound to the girl staring at him with eyes full of fear. "I'm catching your cold, I'm sure. That's all."

Judy thought that a long night. A troubled, uncertain slumber, from which she was rudely yanked, about two hours later, by Michael's agonized call!

"Judy! Judy..... get a doctor quick! I..... think..... It's..... come!" Judy fled to the telephone, her heart congealing slowly, with the knowledge that the symptoms she had dreaded, feared horribly all these weeks an months, was at hand.

Michael would have to go to the hospital. He would have to be operated on! Her Michael!

"God," she prayed childishly, "don't let it hurt! Don't let them hurt Michael!" She had never taken either. She had a confused notion that perhaps he would feel the pain, as one did a bad tooth coming out, under local anaesthetic.

She sat, a white, frozen little terrified ghost, in the ambulance, as it swayed and rocked toward the hospital, and the words they drove through were empty, aching corridors, in her mind, and at the end of each there loomed a ghastly fear.

CHAPTER 17.

AT THE HOSPITAL

There were two dark reddish purple splashes on Michael's face, one high up on either cheekbone. But his mouth was drawn, almost gray, and a thin, sharp line of white looked like a deep crease around his mouth as he lay still in the high white iron bed waiting for the wheeled stretcher to take him down to the operating room.

"Judy....." Judy jumped, though his voice was a thick, blurred whisper. "Judy, Sweet..... I'm scared." He tried to moisten his lips, but his tongue was dry, and he tried to summon the old gallant grin of a thousand high-hearted battles with life, and instead of a grin, it was a twisted grimace of pain. "Scared ..... stuff," he repeated with little boy horror of the nameless dread of knives and cutting flesh.

Judy had meant to be so brave, to smile, and cheer him on. To make him believe it was the right thing for him, and that it would only be a matter of a very short while, at most. She had meant to "stand by."

Now all her good resolutions were swept away on a tidal wave of sheer horror, and she buried her cold, white little face against his still hand on the counterpane, and burst into a storm of passionate sobs.

"Oh, Michael, I'm so s-s-scared, and I think I'm dying, too! I wish it were me! I....." she could not go on, because she needed her, with a grin of pain, and mingled anxiety for Judy.

"Look, Mrs. Swayne," he offered after a particularly sharp wave of agony held him rigid for a moment, fighting for his breath, "this isn't at all according to Hoyle. Don't you know that it's always the little woman who is yanked away to the health factory in the still dawn?"

Judy's fingers tightened around his hand, and she saw the nurses doing to you."

Judy tried to stop crying, but it was useless. The nurses came back and renewed their silent, efficient preparations, and Michael became more and more pale, more drawn, because of the increasing ravages of pain, and mingled anxiety for Judy.

"I'll be back, Michael," he offered after a particularly sharp wave of agony held him rigid for a moment, fighting for his breath, "this isn't at all according to Hoyle. Don't you know that it's always the little woman who is yanked away to the health factory in the still dawn?"

Judy's fingers tightened around his hand, and she saw the nurses smile at Michael's gallant humor. She almost hated them, that they could be so callous, so hard-boiled, so actually able to smile, when Michael was suffering so terribly. When any minute they'd wheel in that dreadful stretcher and take him away down to the operating room with its lofty glass cabinets filled with glittering, cruel, sharp things, with a bubbling ether machine hub-bubbling in evil, chuckling humor.

"It's also the little woman who usually does all the free and fancy spending, Judy. Looks like fate had reversed the card on us, what?"

MAY USE PLANES TO FRIGHTEN GEESE IN NIAGARA RIVER

5,000 in Danger of Being Swept Over The Falls

MANY HAVE LEFT

Some Flocks Make Short Flight But Again

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Oct. 28 (AP) —The geese which have been battling the swift current of the Niagara River above the Falls since Saturday night began leaving this afternoon, but many still were in the air.

Washington, Oct. 28 (AP)—Planes of the United States may be used to drive them in danger of being swept over Niagara Falls.

Stanley P. Young, Director of the Division of Game Management, Bureau of Biological Survey, said the Navy Department today offered use of navy planes to frighten away some 5,000 geese reported in danger of being dashed to their death over Niagara Falls.

Bodies Returned to Touch

Hundreds of Canadians and Americans lined the Niagara River gorge, waiting for a chance to grab a dead bird—dead, if possible. Game wardens were on hand to see that none was plucked from the water. All the dead geese will be allowed to float down river, to disappear forever in the churning fury of the whirlpool rapids.

Hundreds of geese were swept over the Falls several years ago and the procedure of the game wardens was the same then,—none must be touched.

Ludendorff Maintains Third Reich Will be Involved in Next War

(By John A. Bouman, Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Berlin, Oct. 28.—(AP)—The next war must be a "total war" with every subject of blood and discretionary against it ruthlessly stifled, General Erich Ludendorff maintained today. The great war chief—his last—made public his views of the next fray.

No adversaries were specified but the General assumed the third Reich would be involved.

The Great War, he set forth, was lost by the central powers through the collapse of their morale.

"In order to win a complete conquest," he wrote, "the people's soul is essential."

He elaborated two man points. One was the most rigid military discipline and the uttermost sacrifice imposed on the German people, both men and women.

Ludendorff's second point with contempt the old Prussian motto, forcefully voiced on every soldier's breast cross, "Mit Gott Fuer Koenig Und Vaterland" (With God for King and Fatherland).

He called that motto "Jew-infected." The Jews have substituted "Jehovah", and the Jews have always thrived on "King and Fatherland."

Ludendorff's (Commander-in-Chief) with Socialistan powers. Such a one, he said, is responsible for "treason."

The book made no mention of Reichschancellor Hitler, Generalissimo-in-Chief of the German army.

Indifference of Public Cause of High Death Toll

People Object to Taking Precautions Against Typhoid And Scarlet Fever

HEALTH CAMPAIGN

San Francisco, Oct. 28 (AP)— mass attack on cheese and death on three principal fronts — automobile accidents, infantile paralysis and cancer—was plotted today by 1,200 Fellows of the American College of Surgeons at their 20th Clinical Congress.

Within the public to co-operate in health campaigns was said by Dr. Frederick C. Hammett, professor of Gynecology at Tulane University School of Medicine, who contributed much to the suffering and premature death which is widespread in the United States.

He declared medical science has proved its value by more than doubling the life span of the average citizen in the last forty years, and yet people still object to being vaccinated against smallpox and typhoid fever. He said, "Science has also taken advantage of diphtheria and scarlet fever to the extent of almost protecting against them.

Dr. Hammett, when he asks, "that the United States wage earners lose two and a half million working days each year because of colds, and more than a million and a half because of influenza.

"Why should 12,000 people die annually in the United States, and 11,000 of them children under 10 years, whose fault is it that diphtheria is not yet under control from tuberculosis in this country and from cancer and fever?"

The fault, he said, is largely that of the public, due to their indifference and unwillingness to co-operate.

Dr. R. Payne Palmer, staff pediatrician of the Children's Hospital, Phoenix, Ariz., has given the command to "Get the public commandments to be urged upon the individual so that he would avoid life-shortening habits.

SPEND $7,500,000 UPON ELECTIONS IN GREAT BRITAIN

Tory Workers Warned Not To Expect Easy Victory

LABOR PARTY FIGURES

Samuel Calls Manifesto Confession of Fail-

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 28 (CP Cable)—Not less than $7,500,000 will be spent in the general election campaign, it is estimated by party organizers. Most of this will go for literature, billboards and posters during the next two weeks.

The legal limit for a candidate's expenditure during the campaign, fixed by the number of votes in the constituency.

In a county the candidate may spend 13 cents a vote; in a constituency with 70,000 voters, 10 cents; in a two-member borough 7 cents.

The campaign is speeding up with Party headquarters pouring out new lines of literature and workers working night and day.

Conservative headquarters have sounded a note of caution among workers in many counties as more is needed to reverse the result of 1931, they stress. Labor gained 13 seats.

1. In 1929 Labor polled 37 per cent of the total vote but obtained 287 of the 615 seats.

2. In 1931 Labor polled 30 per cent of the total vote but obtained only 52 seats.

3. A drop of 5 per cent in the total number of Labor votes this year would mean the loss of 225 seats.

Opposition leaders spent the week-end concentrated their attack on the Government's rearmament policy.

The amount and character intended for the new expenditure on armaments is left completely vague," said the Liberal leader, Sir Herbert Samuel. "For the expansion of trade the Government will rely upon separate treaties with individual countries subject to conditions set by the Ottawa agreements. The manifesto reads more like a confession or failure than a program for the future."

Roman Troops Advance All Along Northern Line

NOTE OF PESSIMISM

General Sanctions Staff of League Will Set Sanctions Date

By H. R. HIPPISLEHUXEN
Mussolini's legions, celebrating the thirteenth anniversary of Fascist rule in Italy, pushed forward into the Ethiopian hinterlor today on both the northern and southern fronts. Advices from Rome reported all along the northern line from Aksum to Adigrat. Of great importance the progress gained, was early in the advance.

The central column under General Alessandro Pirzio-Biroli occupied the Feres Val Valley to the south of Adigrat on the route to Makale.

Southern Front.

On the southern front the army of General Rudolfo Graziani was much hampered by rain but, stricken into the columns, was advancing on a widespread front.

The southern column, up the valley of the Shibeli River, on a line direct to Addis Ababa, by the east, the middle column advanced on Gorrahei and farther to the east the third column was engaged in occupying the border territory against Italian Somaliland. This column was headed for Walwal, scene of the border dispute last December.

The northern army, likewise, had Harar as its principal objective.

In Addis Ababa the Ethiopians were unperturbed over the new Italian advances.

With the Italian advances, the hopes for an early end to Il Duce's invasion went a-glimmering.

The advances reflected the pessimistic opinion, not only in Rome but in other capitals of Europe.

Just a 'Porky' Not Bear Cub That Nick Shot

Nick Chagrasse, popular and well known chief of Ucly city whose brief residence in this country up to the present had not allowed him time for hunting expeditions, willingly accepted the invitation of fellow members of the city to accompany them on a partridge shoot on Saturday of last week.

Lowell divide up," declared, the leader of the party as the car containing them finally reached a little clearing on the edge of a woods some distance off the highway, "you go this way—I'll go this way."

Without further ado, Nick, with a pump gun and a very high velocity and the trusty shot gun over his shoulder, not to mention a complete assortment of Canadian woods and the wild life therein contained, promptly got lost. Some considerable distance in the thick clump of cedars he was unable to hear even the distant reports of the hunters from time to time.

Dark fears assailed him. But it was not until a fat porcupine ambled unconcernedly down the path that the first symptoms of fear actually clinched.

"A bear cub!" he gasped. "The mother bear is probably just around the corner." Animals like this had never been seen in his native Ucly. Now he was face to face with the fact that he had not only encountered a bear but had so much about. It was a rousing blaze from both barrels of the shotgun, that ended the career of the "porky", and shouldering the dead animal, and with fearful glances over his shoulder, Nick continued his aimless wandering.

Hours later, it seemed, he finally sighted a side road. From the sides of the road he gained the main highway. A motorist observing the strange sight of a hunter, toting a prickly-coated porcupine, stopped and gave the weary bitch hiker a lift.

"Will you tell me" questioned Nick as the door swung open "just what kind of an animal this is?" "A porcupine," he was told.

"Phiaw, I thought it was a bear cub.....or maybe a silver fox.....tough lookin' lan't it?"

Fellow Greeks of the city today were recounting the story with embellishments.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church choir fostered a delightful musical evening on Friday night in the church auditorium to a very large, appreciative audience. The church's altar was beautifully decorated with ferns and autumn flowers artistically arranged.

The artists taking part were Miss Mary Hamilton, Mrs. Sol. Ash, Mr. Anderson, Mrs. R. Wilson, Mr. N. Anderson, Master Douglas Browning and Mr. G. L. Bender, the new organist and choirmaster. The music was of a very high order and each artist gave a highly delightful rendition. Mr. N. V. Riley acted as chairman in a very capable manner and Rev. W. J. Walker moved a vote of thanks to those taking part.

Walked into Station and Promptly Locked Up

"I come in to tell you I'm never going to take another drink", mumbled James Deruhil, local citizen, when he walked into the local police station and confronted Sergeant Harrison Saturday night. Deruhil was at that time under the influence of intoxicating beverages and promptly locked up.

Today he appeared in the local police court and was charged with a charge of intoxication before Magistrate K. J. Bailer, K.C. "You see, sir, I was only trying to get off the street," pleaded Deruhil. "Young man, you have pleaded guilty, and the minimum penalty is ten dollars and costs or ten days in the common jail," came back His Worship.

"Oh, well, I'll take the jail sentence, I guess", replied Deruhil, who was later lodged in the county jail.

RATEPAYERS OF THURLOW MEET

Will Request From Hydro Cheaper Power For Rural Residents

A meeting of the Thurlow Township Ratepayers' Association was held in the Prince of Wales School on Friday evening with forty-five in attendance.

The meeting was called to order at 8 p.m. by the President, W. A. Meeks who was assisted on the platform by Chairman Wm. Turner.

The President reviewed briefly the work of the Association and then proceeded to introduce members from Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner and Chairman Stewart Lyon regarding a future interview with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

A letter of appreciation was read from the trustees and teacher of S. S. No. 20, thanking the Association for their work in securing a sidewalk along No. 2 Highway.

President Meeks expressed the thanks of the ratepayers for this visit to Consecon Thursday, who in turn stated he would be pleased to meet the members of Thurlow Council that the sidewalk was appreciated and that a real danger had been eliminated by its construction.

Arthur Gough of Foxboro was elected chairman pro tem and proceeded with the election of officers which resulted as follows:—Honorary President, W. A. Meeks; Vice-President, Walter Ellis; Secretary, William Hickle; Treasurer, Thos. Colclough; Committee Members: W. N. Gough, Wm. Snell, T. Logan.

Committee Formed

The newly-elected President then informed the ratepayers that the Committee would be empowered to interview the Hydro-Electric Power Commission and the following were elected members of that committee: W. N. Gough, Wm. Means, William Nickle and Walter Tanner.

Mr. Jas. P. Hill, M.P.P., was called on to address the meeting and in doing so assuring the ratepayers that he will do his utmost to assist them in their campaign to secure cheaper Hydro.

Discussion arose regarding the shovelling of snow from sidewalks. A motion of appreciation to the trustees of the ratepayers present was defeated and the matter was left in the hands of Council.

W. H. Means, a member of the committee, then made a suggestion from the members present to carry before the Commission. After some discussion regarding telephone lines, the use of electric water pumps, the meeting came to a close.

FEAST OBSERVED AT ST. MICHAEL'S

Solemn High Mass in Commemoration of Christ The King

At ten-thirty at St. Michael's Church yesterday morning, Solemn High Mass was celebrated in the Feast of Christ the King was celebrated by Rt. Rev. J. F. Hickey, V.G., with Rev. C. E. Baker as deacon and Rev. J. J. Collins as sub-deacon. Mass in D by Lavallee was beautifully sung by the choir under the direction of Mrs. James Grant.

The pastor spoke on the significance of this feast which stresses the divine royalty of Christ and His relation to the world's allegiance.

At seven-thirty last evening the Holy Hour was held. A large congregation was present. Monsignor Nicholson spoke on the sermon yesterday and today and the same forever. For nineteen hundred years he has been the living suggestion of mankind ruling the destinies of the world and judging the world's deeds. Men will need in the future as they needed in the past a Saviour and King in whom they can trust for light and guidance, courage and comfort, who shall be for them the Way, the Truth and the Life.

The story of nineteen hundred years shows forth the claims of Jesus to the allegiance of mankind. Time tests all things. It lays bare the human in the work of man and the divine in the work of God. Time has tested the teachings and the works of Christ. The verdict of the ages recorded not by the worshippers of Christ only but by writers who strove to divest Him of the splendour of the Godhead so as to see Him on the most exalted summit of humanity's greatness and goodness. He was sinless. In the other of humanity's heroes was this said of Him it was written "In Him there is no sin". He challenged His enemies saying "which of you will convince Me of sin?" He was.

His was tender and merciful to men. "He passed by doing good." Hospitals, Hospices, Orphanages, Asylums, instructing the ignorant, healing the sinner and the sick and holiness. Gracious to the lowly and the outcast. In the most diverse situations, now praised, and honoured, now calumniated and persecuted. He is ever the Son of God, ever God's life and perfect. He was patient yet powerful magnanimous to those who had known sin, yet jealous for God's rights and justice. In Plate's last and on Calvary's mountain was manifested His divine strength of power. From the cross He prayed "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do." Purest innocence and sublimest virtue and humanity's life and words. Heaven reflects itself in both.

Christ proclaimed that He born of God, from God. The divinity of Our Lord has been attacked by infidels assailants; in order to rob Him of divinity many have worked with ceaseless study and research. In spite of the efforts of His enemies the divinity of Christ ever emerges. He was the best and the wisest the world has ever seen. He claimed for Himself a divine message, He claimed Himself even with the Father, the Father's only Begotten Son. We believe His words and how believe Him as God and Master. We proved His divine mission by prophecies fulfilled in Himself, rising from the grave no Easter morning, Risen and ascended more; He lived and wrought in the souls of men.

Nineteen centuries ago a force utterly new in kind and in its range unparalleled in work and results entered into the world. That force was Christ. Its manifestations are the victories won in the name of the Christian religion. Its field of work is the world. Its measure of time is unending and eternal. Its dynamic unity has been given to men to bridge Him by His works. The past belonged to Jesus also the present and the future. Today as in the past man must look to Him who was Jesus Christ yesterday and today and the same forever. Mankind needs a teacher and a guide. To whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life. The needs and the ills of humanity are the same today and yesterday and to Christ then let the man of today and tomorrow turn for light and strength. Today more than ever is humanity in the need of Christ. Fortunately for humanity Christ remains the same world." He said "shall not pass away and behold I am with you all days even unto the end of the world". A procession of the Risen Saviour was held in the church. The guard of honor consisted of Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus and Benediction closed the devotions. The music for the parade was given by the choir Mr. Ed. Brown singing a solo.

M.P.-ELECT FOR DURHAM STRIKES MAN ON HIGHWAY

Frank Rickard Not Held And Will Attend Inquest

CARS SIDESWIPE

Man Killed As He Walked Across Street in Sudbury

(By The Canadian Press)

The week-end death list from accidents on Ontario highways contained five names today. It was one of the lightest highway tolls in weeks.

An inquest will be held tomorrow night at Port Hope into the death of John W. Jamieson, 57, who died in hospital last night, 30 hours after he was knocked down by a motor car driven by Frank Rickard, newly elected member of Parliament for Durham.

The M.P.-elect was driving to Port Hope to attend a Liberal party dinner in his honor, when the accident occurred. Rickard did not attend the dinner. Instead he took Jamieson to the hospital and saw that he received every care.

Mrs. Stella Reinhardt, Detroit, was killed instantly and George T. Dixon, Windsor, was seriously injured when their car side-swiped another near Caledonia and then crashed into a tree. Occupants, of the second car were uninjured. Dixon's condition was reported "fair" by attendants at Hamilton General Hospital.

P. Kerman, of Coniston, was struck down and killed as he walked across a street in Sudbury. The driver of the car, Peter Nenar, 16, was charged with manslaughter. Paul L. Johnston, 36, of Hog's Back, near Ottawa, was killed when his automobile skidded from the highway into a tree.

His scalp torn off in an accident in Stamford Township (Tuesday) Maurice McKenzie, 28, Niagara Falls, N.Y., died yesterday in hospital at Niagara Falls, Ont. McKenzie's two companions were not seriously injured.

2,000 Dead or Missing As Thatched Native Huts Swept Away by Floods

Most of Bodies Missing Are Carried Out To Sea

JEREMIE HARDEST HIT

Airplanes Only Communication With Stricken Districts

Port-Au-Prince, Haiti, Oct. 28.—(AP)—At least 2,000 persons are dead or missing in a storm which ravaged the southern peninsula of Haiti, most of the casualties were caused by floods which followed the hurricane a week ago. Thousands were reported homeless and hungry.

Population of valley villages were believed to have been wiped out as rains sent the streams from their channels, demolishing the frail, thatched huts of the natives. Information received here indicated the bodies of most of the missing were swept out to sea.

Official reports, based on fragmentary data gathered by a small airplane, the only means of communication with the stricken districts, double the number of dead or missing after the storm struck Saturday had put the toll at possibly 1,000.

Relief operations could not be instituted until the arrival of the Standard Fruit steamer Catalina, delayed by strong winds north of Cuba. The boat was expected today.

Jacmel, a community on the south shore of the mountainous island, reportedly across from Port-Au-Prince, already has yielded 96 bodies, Jeremie, on the north shore of the western tip of the peninsula, apparently was hardest hit.

Farmlands Drowned

The Voldrogue and Rossaux Rivers roared over their banks and deluged surrounding farmlands.

Reports said the Hydro-Electric plant at Jacmel was destroyed. Rehabilitation work had to be carried on without light or water.

Cayes, on the south shore, has been reached by telegraph. Officials there advised government officers damage was not serious but crops had suffered.

To provide relief funds the government slashed the public payroll 10 per cent for a month.

Bridges Destroyed

It was considered possibly the storm which struck Jamaica, Eastern Cuba and Haiti veered sharply to the southwest and dissipated in Honduras later in the week. The disturbance which took several lives in Santiago, Cuba, was reported by meteorologists to have "dissolved" as it swept northeastward.

The deaths of three native women in the mining settlement of San Juancito were reported in initial news of the destruction wrought by a hurricane in Honduras.

Rainstorms and wind destroyed communication with the stricken areas. It was indicated damage to the banana plantations was heavy. Several towns were flooded.

Numerous bridges were destroyed in the Cortes Zone. Eight hundred families were reported homeless in Chamelecon where water drove them to the hills.

WELSH MINERS EMERGE FROM DEPTHS

Despite the fact that they had been in a 5-day stay-down strike deep in the pits, in which much hand-to-hand fighting took place, these miners of Glamorganshire, Wales, resume their debonair attitude upon coming to the surface. Police are escorting them home made for a settlement.

They came from the Taff Merthyr pit, in which men of the South Wales Miners' Federation came to blows with the members of the South Wales Miners' Industrial Union. Over 8,000 men are on strike against the employment of non-union labor. Headway has been made for a settlement.

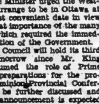
Tattooing Cheeks of Halibut to Trace Wanderings Aids Fishermen



Victoria, Oct. 28.—(CP)—Tattooing the cheeks of Pacific halibut to trace their wanderings is working out well, George J. Alexander, Dep. uty British Columbia Fisheries Commission, has discovered.

Hatched from eggs laid in a moving ocean current that flows northward from British Columbia to the Gulf of Alaska, Baby Halibut have to swim home against the tide. In 14 years the "chicks" or young Halibut pass out of the adolescent stage and become good commercial fish. In 20 years they are shipwrecks of the race, nodding gently in gossipy seclusion on the sheltered banks of the North Pacific area.

In youth and in vigorous middle age, however, the Halibut roam freely, being found at times 300 miles from their home banks. It is to trace these movements, which affect commercial fishing, the Commission has adopted a policy of catching specimen fish and tattooing neat geometrical designs into the cheeks.

Early or late, Halibut return to the waters in which they were born, existing records show. The exception, of course, are those that fall for a line.

HON. MR. GARDINER TO ENTER CABINET

Premier of Saskatchewan Accepts Post of Minister of Agriculture

Ottawa, Oct. 28 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King has completed his Cabinet slate and Hon. James G. Gardiner will come to Ottawa from the heart of the Prairies to assume the portfolio of Dominion Minister of Agriculture.

The post was left vacant when Mr. King had his other chosen colleagues sworn in Wednesday night before the deputy of the Governor-General. At the time, however, Mr. King explained he hoped the Saskatchewan premier would be in a position to accept his offer to come into the greater political arena.

The Prime Minister in announcing Mr. Gardiner's appointment last night made public the text of an exchange of telegrams Saturday in his wire Mr. Gardiner said after consultation he had the unanimous support and backing of his constituency caucus and Liberal executive of the Province to accept the Prime Minister's invitation to join his Cabinet.

Mr. King wired his reply expressing pleasure at the unanimous consent and support given and believed the acceptance by Mr. Gardiner would be good news to the country. The Prime Minister urged the Westerner to arrange to be in Ottawa at the earliest convenient date in view of the great importance of the many matters which required the immediate attention of the Government.

Cabinet Council will hold its third sitting tomorrow since Mr. King again assumed the role of Prime Minister preparatory for the proposed Dominion-Provincial Conference will be further discussed and an early announcement is expected to be made of the date of the parley.

QUIET PREVAILS IN CORNWALL JAIL

Six Went on Rampage But None Escaped Custody

Cornwall, Ont., Oct. 28 (CP)—Quiet prevailed today in the Cornwall Jail, scene of a week-end riot when six prisoners went on a rampage but were subdued without any escapes or casualties.

The fractious inmates were being punished, it was stated, and one of the number, Duncan Willard, 21, Kenyon Township farmer serving an 18 months' sentence for theft, was reported to be in solitary confinement. Clarence Cameron, Amherst, N.S., awaiting a second trial for murder of Louis Volvey, 55-year-old farmer, was said to be one of the trouble leaders.

Police officials declared they were unaware of the cause of the disturbance, which broke out at supper time Saturday in the cell block occupied by the enraged prisoners. They threatened Governor Ralph Cook and Bernard Maloney, guard, refused to obey orders and proceeded to demolish the furniture in their block.

Provincial and city police were sent for by the jail officials who were in an adjoining corridor, Incidentally the disturbers realized they were outnumbered they quieted down and were locked in their cells.

QUINTUPLETS AT 17 MONTHS NOW ADD MEAT TO DIET

Veal Liver Served Once a Week to Growing Youngsters

MARIE PROGRESSES

Three Largest Take a Few Steps Alone Occasionally

Callander, Ont., Oct. 28 (CP)—Seventeen months old today the Dionne quintuplets added meat to their diet for the first time. It's only a small quantity of carefully selected and prepared veal liver served once a week but it marked the youngsters' first move toward a grown-up diet.

The liver and Marie's development were highlights of the famous babies' seventeenth month. Marie had progressed remarkably, mentally and physically. In the past four weeks, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, their physician, said today.

Within a few months Marie, who was the smallest of the five when they were born May 28, 1934, and has lagged since, will equal her sisters in every way, the physician believes.

The bit of liver they are fed is only a drop in the bucket for the Dionne children who are distinguishing themselves as gourmands. They eat up all their spinach and everything else that comes along. Not infrequently they cry for more, sometimes they get it.

Mainly their diet consists of vegetables prepared several ways, fruit, bread and butter and milk—plenty of it—and a daily cod liver oil phastiex. It is to the canned variety with corn syrup added.

Morning Cocktail.

They get a morning cocktail of cod liver oil and orange juice at 6.30 as an appetizer for their 7.30 breakfast of cereal, egg, buttered bread, arrowroot and a glass of milk.

That holds them until 12.30 noon when their two nurses pile their tables with creamed vegetable soup, a half pint of cream, weak in fat, fresh fruit or a custard, buttered bread and milk. Once a week the liver is substituted for the creamed vegetables.

Three thirty in the afternoon is cod liver oil and orange juice time again and at 6.30, the bedtime bottle, they are served porridge in milk, buttered toast and another glass of milk. No one wakes in the night hungry.

Starting to Walk.

Thriving on that fare, three of the youngsters — Yvonne, Annette and Cecile, front runners in the weight derby—are attempting to walk and occasionally manage a few steps. Marie often tries and sometimes, like Marie and Emilie, to do their amazing clinging to an adult finger.

It is the youngsters' accomplishment enough to stand on each other's head they could reach higher than most ceilings—12 feet 1¼ inches. Cecile and Yvonne are both 29¼ inches tall, Marie a half inch shorter, Annette 28¾ and Emilie 28¼. The only change from last month are gains of ¼ inch for Yvonne and ¼ for Annette.

They are almost even now in the matter of teeth. All have eight but Emilie. She has seven.

TRAINER'S SPIRIT STILL UNSHAKEN

Mabel Stark, Tiger Trainer, Has Over 500 Stitches on Body

Los Angeles, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Two more muscles have been removed from the left fern of Mabel Stark. Her left wrist is Z-shaped; there are three different kinds of potson in her left arm and shoulder; 'tob number of surgeon's stitches in various parts of her body now number in the neighborhood of 500. But the spirit of the slim, 115-pound Tiger Trainer hasn't a scar on it.

Her blues eyes (even the one that was torn out and miraculously replaced several years ago) glittered contemptuously as she said:

"It was a minor accident. I'm ashamed of myself for not being out there working."

She heard the latest mishap at Phoenix, Arizona, last Sept. 21, when a 500-pound tiger jumped upon her, bit through her arm and shoulder, crushed the elbow and ripped the muscles of her back and stomach.

"It's the second time I have actually had to leave the arena," she said, "But that's not because of the wounds—the poison did it."

Enticcio Ethiopia, 3:15 p.m. Oct. 27.— The advance guard of Italy's great northern armies moved into the mountains shielding Makale today in the second big push of the campaign in Ethiopia.

The new drive which started yesterday, won easier and no important new foothold for the Fascist Blackshirt forces.

The central column under General Alessandro Pirzio-Biroli advanced 20 kilometres (12 1-2 miles) to occupy the Feres Mai Valley—the first important advance since the Italian troops halted on the 80-mile former front line from Axum to Adigrat.

The spearhead of the attack was poised today in the heights looking down the remainder of the line of march to Makale, strategic site 60 miles southeast of Adwa.

'SURE OF WHAT WE KNOW'

Sir Edward Beatty, chancellor of McGill University, while speaking at Western University last week, took occasion to attack certain of the economic teaching which is being given the young men and women in the universities of today, he declared it tends to socialism, he declared, slanted.

You and is always progressive and is impulsive and revolutionary enough in the nature of things, so that Sir Edward demands that when members of our universities undertake to explain the defects of our present system of society and to offer the improvements which would make it better, we shall always endeavor to ascertain if they are men who by patient and prejudiced research have made themselves so familiar with the facts that they can be trusted to tell us what precisely is the matter, and whether they are so familiar with the workings of this complex world that their design for a new machine, and their instructions for delicate process of change can be given the most complete confidence."

He says that while there are many universal economists in Canada who have a sound and thorough knowledge of economic history and whose services and advice to the state has already proved extremely reliable, there is this fact to be faced that "academic thought—especially among the young—varies in this field—is deeply colored by Socialist ideas which are based on a lack of adequate knowledge of the structure of existing economic and social society, on an unconditional desire for correction which outruns the slower but safer processes of logical reasoning."

He claims that their position is false in the main, reserved in the view held and advanced by some that it is almost immoral for a man to show a profit in business.

In answer to this Sir Edward says: "The corporate money power' of which you hear so often, is, as far as I know, the mere figment of imaginations heated by too much study and too little thought. The business life of this country, as I know it, is carried on by thousands and hundreds of thousands of men and women, who, in their big and their small way, are all honesty and decency, to obtain a reasonable reward for what can be accomplished. I admit its slowness and its perversion by individuals of less than average moral principle. I admit its periodical inefficiency. Against all these I place the fact that in a century and a half we have, for a thousand years or more of recorded history, raised the living standards of the whole human race, and steadily removed, and not accentuated, the inequalities which a thousand years ago separated class from class."

All that Sir Edward asks is that "we shall all be quite sure of what we know."

IS IT TRUE?

Is the war which is being waged in Ethiopia war at all as compared with the scenes which for the thousands were endured every day for over four years during the Great War? To judge by the remarks credited to British aviators it is not. Bombing, a sport of picnic flying over unprotected villages and raining death in the form of bombs. Telling of an attack on a village, it is reported that he says that some of the natives looked at the Italian airplanes as if they were their own planes and that the Italian planes descended as low as 100 feet above the earth and poured machine gun fire into the Ethiopians. It was added "several shots were fired at us."

Is this the picture of war as it really is? Destroying for the real pleasure of seeing human beings suffer, brethren under the skin though their skin be of a different Italian color? Has war after all been a huge deception? Did even Julius Caesar, the great model of Mussolini, look upon war and killing as the chief element? Though killing was part of it Caesar was an empire expander, seeking new territory to pay tribute to keep up the mammoth country's expenditures. Caesar in his commentaries on the Gallic War or the war in Britain, never spoke in the light vein, credited to the Italian flier.

Edmondson Bellamy commenting on the story expresses the hope that for the Italian people's reputation and good name, such a story is not true and that the Ethiopians are not engaged in such butchery. Indeed one cannot understand the cruellest person thinking of war in such a light, let alone an aviator.

Even hunters of animals have mercy on wounded game and put them out of misery and often feel a pang of regret at the pain they have caused. So probably one is almost safe in saying such a story as above is utterly untrue.

What men need is not talent, but it is purpose; in other words, not the power to achieve but will to labor. I believe that labour judiciously and continuously applied becomes genius.—Bulwer.

Labor is the true producer of wealth; it moves all other causes.—Daniel Webster.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE HOME FORUM

Comments on the events of the day, human gossip and personal news topics as revealed by the Home Grove correspondents—under the evening heading of Belleville and Gen. — Supporting The Intelligencer.

ALL I KNOW IS WHAT I SEE IN THE PAPERS, said Will Rogers—so takes his tip we propose to see just what we can get out of The Buenos Aires Herald, an English, September 14, 1935, publication. It proclaims that it was under the masthead claim "More than TREBLE the net circulation of any other English language journal in South America."

Founded in 1876. Front Page Masthead proclaim that HARROD'S is a fine place to get good groceries. Men's Clothing and get good groceries. Men's Clothing and other things—reminiscent of good old Lunnon, eh, what?

A recent writer said that Buenos Aires was the most cosmopolitan city in the world, that if a visitor was unaware what city it was he would immediately identify one section as London, England, another as New York, another as Rome and so on. There is everything in this wonder city of the south to please and perplex, from the most modern of innovations to the grip that the ancient days of the Argentine was little savage days when the Argentine was more than a vast series of pampas with cattle barons and rough and rollicking cattlemen and poor but happy peasants. Buenos Aires has everything, old and new, but it is the new, the modern, which is the most attractive.

Uncle Sam's trade hunters have found lots of business in the Argentine but the feeling against Uncle Sam is not conducive to holding that business—and the reason ascribed is that the U.S.A. has brought to the staid the simple children of the pampas as get-rich-quickers from the hide and tallow trade. France, where they get certificates of culture and their children for a superior education, and where they like to go themselves for a whirl of gayety, has also been indicered by the fact that this social culture money has not conferred culture on the occupants of the palaces of Buenos Aires. And all this and that seems to indicate that the Argentine has yet considerable business from the Argentine if it was gone after systematically and earnestly.

Now, having said all that, as by the way, let us return to the Buenos Aires Herald, which is but one of several newspapers printed every day in that metropolis.

FRONT PAGE

Front Page is all cable news, mostly about the war and the League of Nations which was then considering Peace in the Chaco, a war in which B. has no definite interest. Bottom of Front Page is a panel telling when the next mails from the outside world arrive—by Southern and Atlantic. Also a panel in precedence to the Sport of Kings, and be it noted the racing at La Plata track started at 12.05 and the eighth race of the day, the Handicap, was to be run at 17.45. English and American racing and general sports were also noted.

DUELS AND ASSASSINATIONS

A report on the activity of the Senate bulked large on page three, principally dealing with the Meat Trade Investigation, which, by the way, is one of a very important matter, the history of which "has been the most chequered in parliamentary annals, the outstanding features including fisticuffs in the committee chamber, since deceased; the assassination of a Senator-elect; a duel between a Senator and a minister; a rejected challenge to the assassin-members of the Cabinet; and the narrowly averted Cabinet crisis."

PAPER PROFITS. GOLD LOSSES

An important article described what was called the "Railway Situation," discussing the fact that with total net profits of $15,000,000, the loss on exchange amounted to $57,000,000. The gross profit exceeded that of the previous year by $10,000,000, but the Exchange loss took more than a million out of the account. "The exchange losses refer to remittances for financial transfers and purchases of material." The railways are evidently government owned and operated.

SIXTEEN DAYS FROM 'OME

A large advertisement informs would be Argentine that a Fast Voyage with Speed and Luxury can be had to England on the Royal Mail Turbine liner S.S. Acantara, with a 16 1-2 days passage guaranteed.

The Editorial Page reveals comment on Ethiopian war, with strong British bias.

Social Arrivals are given prominence, also arrivals and departures on Steamships.

JSTS MONEY TO TRAVEL

Stock Markets occupy two pages and then several pages of steamship sailings and general news follows. Steamships leave frequently for all parts of the world, with fares quoted from $605 to Norway, $1600 round trip to California; $1230 round trip to New York, etc.

Professional Directory lists doctors, dentists, [illegible] with a fair percentage of firms with English names.

NOTICE OF A WOMAN'S EXCHANGE

BRIDGE TEA in a Buenos Aires newspaper notes that the tickets are four dollars, "saying nothing about the class of player one might draw, though obviously class will not be lacking," - rather mournfully comments the newspaperman. Another article quotes a liquor importer as saying that the people of Argentine have forsakrn cocktails for Scotch whiskey and the younger set has given pop a bye and taken to cocktails. Incidentally, the newspaper sells for ten cents the copy—for the editor needs the money.

"The Healer"

Doctors and Nurses, Sanitariums and Hospitals

The gripping career of a young doctor with almost miraculous curative powers is being unfolded on the Capitol theatre screen this week in the picturization of a powerful novel, "The Healer" being the title of the picture.

With such brilliant players as Karen Morley, Ralph Bellamy, Mickey Rooney, the plot of "The Healer" traces the meteoric career of young Doctor Holden, whose hobby is to combat the terrible diseases that reek the bodies of young children. He is assisted in his endeavours by a beautiful society girl who has surrendered her social career to join the meritorious cause. Their idealistic companionship is blended by the touch of a pretty and sophisticated young woman who holds the key to a large sanitarium to win the doctor away from the quiet post which is the real work he finds worthy efforts.

Believing her to be sincere in her desire to bring him to the attention of the medical world, he accepts the position, but finds that he is stifled by the necessity of conforming to the ways of his wealthy clients. The story pursues in a romantic manner, during the holocaust, the sanitarium is destroyed by fire, in scenes of suspense and danger he is brought to the realization that he is grown away from his real aim and while leading his highly artificial existence.

Ralph Bellamy in the title role is excellent. He is ably supported by the featured players of outstanding importance. Among them are Karen Morley, responsible for their skillful portrayals of the story, are Karen Morley, Mickey Rooney, Sidney Allen, Robert McWade and J. Farrell MacDonald.

Laughs With Leon Errol

Leon Errol, the funny pantomime craziest of a hilarious comedy in which the laughable Leon Errol is seen to combat with gravitation. He provides no end of laughs in a subject entitled "Perfect Perfidy" which is a Sports Reel that shows expert athletes and divers in a number of exciting and thrilling dives.

Pepper by Request

A Pepper by request subject recalls to the audience many of the old time songs which were attendant to sentimental themes.

To each lady patron attending the Monday and Tuesday performances at the Capitol theatre a pair of silk stockings will be presented.

"The Man They Could Not Hang" is the picture to the picture to the Strand theatre, New Zealand and subsequently described the island Kingdom, and breaking records all along the line. The attraction is decidedly novel will open at the Capitol theatre on Monday. The picture is a modern picture adaptation of the life story of John Lee who was tried and sentenced for murder.

The picture equaled the life story of John Lee, who three times faced the death chair only to escape upon the scaffold, yet lived to become known as "The Man They Could Not Hang."

AT THE STRAND

"The Man They Could Not Hang"

Gay, romantic, tuneful and altogether delightful "Top Hat" must be marked as another outstanding triumph for Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. Unquestionably the star team and double which gave the screen "Flying Down Rio", "The Gay Divorcee" and "Roberta" has delivered another smashing entertainment in "Top Hat" having its premiere at the Bally Theatre on Saturday in almost continuous bursts of uproarious and appealing laughter.

Hooking up the superlative dancing abilities of Astaire and Miss Rogers with the melodies of Irving Berlin proves to be a master stroke of concentrated entertainment value. Berlin never has written more catchy, ingratiating songs than for this new film and the way that Astaire and Miss Rogers put over the numbers, both in dancing and singing, leaves nothing to be desired.

Perfect support is accorded the co-stars by a grand comedy cast. Edward Everett Horton, Broderick Crawford, brilliant Broadway comedian, Erik Rhodes and Eric Rhos make the most of their comedy roles. Indeed, only stars with the talents and imagination of Astaire and Miss Rogers could keep from having a picture stolen right away from them by such fine players.

The story of "Top Hat" is light, dazzling and breathless, providing the ideal sort of vehicle for a musical comedy which is crammed only with sparkling entertainment, kept strictly within the bounds of reason. It concerns Fred Astaire, American dancing star, and Dale Tremont, Miss Rogers, beautiful young woman who meets under romantic and unconventional circumstances in London and Italy.

The various song and dance numbers are lavish and brilliantly executed. Because of the color of its setting and the fact that it is ballet and not ballroom to the "Carioca" and the "Continental", the numbers glow, the Terpsichorean offerings special mention. A dance of dancing fans, surprising in its use with superb grace by Astaire and Miss Rogers, against a background of white with attractive black polka dots. An ensemble arrangement of the "Carioca" is also done in a large mixed chorus. Other brilliant numbers are "Top Hat, White Tie and Tails", "Top Hat", "Isn't This a Lovely Day" and "Get Thee Behind Me Satan". You'll be sorry if you don't see "Top Hat" at the Bally Tonight, or Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee and night.

Two entertaining short reels precede the feature film "Top Hat" a very funny and clever Mickey Mouse Cartoon, "Mickey's Orphans" included, and the Belle Latest World News..

GT. BRITAIN AND FRANCE SET PACE

League Members Line Up in Favor of Sanctions Against Italy

By JOSEPH E. HARKEVY

Geneva, Oct. 28 (AP)—The League of Nations' member states lined up swiftly today in favor of sanctions against Italy to force a halt to its warfare on Ethiopia.

Great Britain and France set the pace as the League sent a message to its members throughout the world to give notice by today of the date when they believed they could apply an economic boycott against Italy.

The call was issued in preparation for a meeting on October 31 of the general committee of 18 nations to fix the date when the boycott will be begun.

Although the nations were swinging into line more rapidly on the arms embargo and other than on the economic measures, Britain and France took the lead in accepting a "key nothing from Italy" program and a ban on exports to Italy of certain key products especially important in war.

The participation of Russia and Spain economic sanctions was expected to be announced during the day.

Spain, while talks many things but little sold by Italy throughout the world, stands to profit by a "key nothing" ban from Italy and Russia is been firm in the sanctions drive.

League sources forecast Switzerland's reply would not be wholly satisfactory. Hence, Geneva believed, realized fully that nation's delicate position with an Italian population of 140,000 and its necessity of maintaining neutrality, already guaranteed by the great powers.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating breakfast and Uncle Albit wasn't down yet on account of still shaving himself with one of pop's razor blades, and pop remarked to me his hands looked raying. Well, this is the big day, this is the glorious occasion.

Meaning on account of Uncle Albit going to go home today, and me said, I no. I'm not so tolkeptable, but I can hardly leave it.

With just then Uncle Albit came down, pop saying, Sit down, Albit, join the festive board, such marvelous weather, I've never known such a day.

Why's it's close and heavy and it's going to rain any minnit, what's about that? Uncle Albit said, and pop said, That's the point, mean I expect to enjoy the change. If we had perfect summer weather all the year we wouldn't even notice it any more'n we would the air we breathed in us without the contrast of a ragged winter season, and not cry that, but a change is good for the blue. And it's the same way with life. We need the smooth sides and the sharp sides, and sweet sides and s'a and against, it's good for the character. Have some more cream in your coffee, pop told Uncle Albit. It's a grain old world, pop said.

You seem in a very gay lyrial mood this morning, Uncle Albit said, and pop said, I mean what's contrast. We've got to have contrasts here today and gone tomorrow, or in your case, home to think of it, Albit, gone today. It's the same old story, we've had the pleasure of your company and now we're going to have the pleasure, I should say the shock, of seeing you go. I wont be satisfied I'll be convinced, I'll take you to the station and see you off myself in person. I wouldn't think of allowing a mere cabbie that little attention, yes yes the bitter with the sweet, it's a funny old world ha ha ha.

Being the last I heard on account of having to go to school.

Any Attempt to 'Stall' Will be Quashed--Hep'

Toronto, Oct. 28 (CP)—Premier Hepburn said today any attempts on the part of Quebec power companies to "stall" in their negotiations with the Ontario government for a settlement of the Beauharnois power dispute, will be quashed.

The premier said the companies would be given a "reasonable time" to come to an agreement and failing that, the province would immediately set the Power Commission Act, cancelling the contracts.

"We don't want to dictate to them but we will just have to tell them how much longer we can wait," he said. "We have made this gesture so they might put their house in order".

No serious crime confronted local police authorities over the week-end the arrest of inebriated and lone investigation of minor cases constituting the bulk of their business. Two drunks were apprehended on Saturday night and after having spent the night in the cell lodged were fined in return home with instructions to report at today's court session.

A bicycle reported stolen in Belleville on June 25th last, was recovered on Sunday by Police Chief Ellis in Cemetery street. The bike was found secluded in a clump of bushes west of Cemetery street. The bicycle was returned to its rightful owner today.

Two motorists returned to their parked cars only to find police stickers affixed to their windshields with instructions to report to the police station. The motor cars in question were left in the "no parking zone" opposite the upper fire hall. Continued reports regarding the parking of automobiles at this point have been received from the fire department, the chief complaining delay to the firemen, when answering a hurried call, due to the parking zone opposite the fire hall at the upper end of Front street, is clearly defined. It is hoped the by-law will be strictly adhered to in the future.

Twenty-one transients slumbered at police station over week-end after been being taken in Saturday night, while the remaining five were afforded sleeping quarters on Sunday night.

MANY WOMEN prefer a flashy trimmed cloth hat to the severe tailored model. A luxury coat is of cut lamb worked with a waistline of depth, cape-like collar of silver fox. The sleeves have ribbon cuffs and there is a silver fox muff. A famous film star selected this.

HANDS OFF to try on some new gloves. For example, over there is a longish glove of black suede with long floral motifs done in tiny rhinestones.

10,000 Canada Geese Engage In Life and Death Struggle

Rest on Niagara River But Carried to Brink of Falls

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 28 (CP)—Ten thousand wild geese, confused by the river that tumbles over the world's greatest water power, floated down the Niagara River today in great squadrons. When they had floated to the edge of the Falls, they rose into the air, flew back up the river and rode down again.

This rotary movement, unprecedented here, started yesterday when the south-bound geese arrived at the Falls and alighted on the river to rest. They'd rested twice since and it is feared many of them will be carried to death, swept over the Horseshoe Falls, unless they soon dispersed.

Thousands upon thousands of geese flew out of Northern Ontario on the week-end, settling here and there in fields, lakes and rivers. Most of the migrants, taking part in the most spectacular exodus in years, left Ontario behind yesterday, day by day scattered.

Alarm Expressed

But 10,000 or more—the unfortunates—picked the Niagara as a resting place and settled down to become involved in one of the strangest life-and-death games in the history of the outlands. Had they not settled on any gold within a mile or so of the Falls, the situation would not have arisen.

Alarm was expressed last night that the geese, tired by their flight, quickly dispersed, many hundreds will become so weary they will be carried over the Falls to their doom. Every effort was made during the night to keep the birds on the river, but would fly away from the danger points.

Watchers who stood beside the Falls until early morning said they thought none had been carried over. As each group of geese drifted down the river to the Falls, a wild fluttering of wings signalled their swift rise to temporary safety.

Slide Backs Out Of Flight

Shotguns were fired without effect during the night. Lights used to illuminate the Falls during the evening were switched on late last night, but the sound of gunfire was lost in the concerted "honk, honk" from the flocks.

Ontario skies were darkened Saturday by great flocks of geese. More than 2,000 of them rested for two hours in a field north of Queenston. A cloud-like formation flew over Toronto, causing thousands of spectators at the Montreal-Toronto football game to crane their necks to partly forget the game for minutes on end.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Displaying anything except the fighting spirit that gave them victory over the powerful Lindsay squad on Thursday last, the local O.R.F.U. managed to squeeze out a 6 to 5 win over the Cobourg collection squad on Saturday. Some of the local players turned in splendid efforts, but on the whole they looked no too much and were therefore lucky to get away with a victory in last stanza. A rather unique incident happened during the game, the visitors, Cobourg and local, their first touchdown of the season, while the local team scored the first touchdown in the group to cross the Belleville goal-line for a major score this season, a rather peculiar setting. Cobourg showed the best aerial attack in the matter of forward passing, we have seen this year in the loop. The Rivicus squad tried eleven forward passes and completed six, Belleville's lone attempt was a failure and was not repeated. For a squad, that is entirely out of the running, the Cobourg players are a gritty lot and showed plenty of fight throughout.

On numerous occasions there has been combined wrangling in relationship to the work of the officials during games. Last Friday night's game, Saturday's 11th here being no exception to the rule, according to the constitution of the group the visiting team is to supply a coach, referee, and linesman, and Lindsay did. Cobourg arrived on the scene they immediately had no referee, but only an umpire. Then a referee was pressed into service with the result, that we had an umpire and referee, a ball-batting followed, which the locals contended is decisive they proceeded a Tweedie referee and paid him, there being no squabbling on the part of the league officials about the case, that the visiting team supplies the coach and qualified referee for all games, leaving the choice of umpire and headlinesman to the home team.

When the Lindsay Rotary team stepped into Oshawa and downed the Oshawa Legion 14 to 7 a different scene is painted in the local O.R.F.U. group now. Today Bellville and Lindsay are just one game out of first place and all we regret about that, that the Lindsay combination squad are all through with the blue-decked Oshawa squad. Coach Kennedy has worked wonders with the younger players on the squad Sharpe, Fred Dyer, Carter and Ted Lee are fast developing into superb tackles, as they break through to smear opposing players before they can get under motion. As a matter of fact the locals are noted for their defensive ability.

The local wrestling promoters are considering an age limit affair as well known American wrestler, Ed "Strangler" Lewis meets Jerry Monk at the Arena on Thursday night. Sentimentally Kaslan needs no introduction to an American or Canadian audience, however, he having met all the top-notchers such as Jim Browning, Jim Londos, Joe Stecher and Wayne Munn. Whatever the others see nameworn to mention. If the local matchmakers can induce Kaslan to a local ring with Dr. Death it should prove the greatest ring attraction in many months. While on the subject of wrestling the fans should bear in mind Tuesday night's card at the Arena is calling an early start, the boys may not be "Shakespere or Brownings, but they are willing to do their best to put on a good entertainment, while they are in the ring.

The Hart House Theatre got away to an early start towards next season, when they held their annual meeting and election of officers last week. The return to office of President Gwynne Walford is the popularity with the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club members. Incidentally the organization enjoyed its most successful season in many years during 1935 and are looking forward to a bigger and better year during 1936.

Have you heard this one?

Girl Friend: Well, have you decided what business you're going into?

Boy Friend: "Well, I've a good mind to be a travelling salesman.'

Girl Friend: "You certainly have simply crammed with dirty stories!"

A mere handful of fans cap the Cornwall Colts 24 to 4 at the Arena on Saturday night to win the mid-O.R.F.U. championship. Really it was a battle between giants and pigmies, the Minutes help tower, Eddie Mirco, Cornwall's four-foot-nine inch middle, dominated the best stickhandler in the game. The Cornwall kids were in no way disgraced despite the fact they were severely registered against them, as the Minutes had to battle hard in the face of overwhelming odds. The Cornwall kids must have been outweighed an average of 30 pounds per player, while their tallest player did not reach the shoulders of Minsko's smallest. The final result of the contest was never in doubt, the Minutes had advantage of their opponents weight to even draw payment for their efforts.

Boy Choristers Give Recital

Following evensong at Christ Church last night, Dr. Cyrus Mayhew, organist and choirmaster accoated to requests for a short recital by the boys of the choir. Among the many who listened were a number beyond the walls.

Twenty-six boys from the ages of 7 to 14 years filled into the choir stalls and at 8.30 precisely Mr. Mayhew has been developing Speech Training periods for the boys of the Christ Church Choir and the Collegiate Institute which make the service decidedly congregational. The first Evensong in Parish of S.S.M.M. will be held at St. Ann's Church, Toronto, November 17, at which the Most Reverend Archbishop Owen, Primate, spoke to 225 boy choristers including those of Christ Church.

A week ago Mr. Mayhew gave an organ recital at the Toronto music. The boys have imbibed their leader's enthusiasm and their earnestness in their work. Each reads from his score. Descants or obligato sung above the harmonies of the choir, the dependence while contented numbers find pleasure in singing with marked distinction and restraint were commended upon by the audience.

Mention might be made of the soloists who showed poise not often found in such youthful singers. Two boys rendered Handel's "Ever Bright and Fair" and Billy Boydon Clements "Glory To Thine, My God, This Night" which was chosen by Archbishop Robertson for the choristers' competition. Belleville is known everywhere as a musical city and this work is a distinct advance towards renown.

Marmora and District

MARMORA — Marmora High School drew their second victory of the season on the home field at Deloro in an exhibition tilt with Stirling on Friday afternoon, the final score being 8-0.

The home team kicked off and Deloro ran visitors on their 30-yard line. Owing to the change in the Marmora line Stirling's attack across back was not as effective in gaining yards as in former games. Then they met with a stone-wall defence and lost the ball. Marmora immediately kicked for a safety point, getting them the necessary edge for attack in Stirling's half of the field. The game was very evenly waged from then until full time, neither team scoring points, although on several occasions Marmora lost gilt edge chances.

The third quarter was the only stage of the game, when Stirling really threatened to back the homesters over the goal line. Stirling kicked off and downed O'Neill on the Marmora 8-yard line. A Marmora left lateral clicked perfectly to bring them up to their 25-yard line. On the next play however, Hart was downed for a 15-yard loss which forced Marmora to kick. Some excitement was put into the game at this point when Marmora by a series of end runs and spinner line bucks marched down to the Stirling 40-yard-line. O'Neill was downed after a 40-yard run on the Stirling 1-yard line but lost the ball as the 3rd quarter ended.

In the last quarter Loveless regained the ball on a fumble by Stirling. McKeown advancing it to the Stirling 1-yard line on a line buck and long run. The same play was called and O'Neill pushed it over for the only "touch" of the game. Marmora failed to convert, leaving the score 5-0.

In the remainder of the time, Marmora staged a thrilling game, obtaining 2 more points, the game ending 8-0.

This game lacked the usual excitement of the high school games, but the hard tackling and fine running by both teams rendered them to be evenly matched.

The lineups:

Sitting—Quarter, McDonald; Fly Wing, Scott; Right Half, Wallace; Full, Bailey; Left Half, Campbell; Line, Lucas, Mathews, Rogers, Hayes, Howell and Grange.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

Wants to Know Some "High-brow" Young Men.

Dear Miss Fairfax:—

I'm thoroughly disgusted with the common young men I meet in business. They're hard-boiled, uncultured and haven't an idea above drinking and petting. I've cut them all off my list, and find it more agreeable to go to movies and other places of entertainment by myself. I'd rather do that than associate with them.

I would really like to know men of a better class, and being a stranger in this town, I am puzzled to know how to go about it. Don't think I'm a prude, far from it. But there has got to be some answering spark of intelligence in a male's friendship count, something more than raving and drinking.

A. J.

What are your ambitions, my dear lassie? At you're interested in music, drama, art, join some club or group which goes in for these things. You must have had them back home, or you wouldn't feel them so now. Write back home for letters of introduction which may put you in touch with congenial people.

This will also answer a girl who has written to me, and signed herself "Dissatisfied."

Thought She Was the Girl TH Ele Had Been Looking For.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A few weeks ago, I met a charming girl at a dance and with her for some time I visited her home and met her two sisters, who I believe is the one girl for me. How can I give up the one I met first, and cultivate the friendship of the other?

A. J.

If you haven't proposed to the first girl, you are under no obligation to continue your attentions to her. Shift to the other girl by inviting her to go with you, and, to taper off gradually, you might invite them both at first.

She Thinks He Reads "Trash"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My spare time reading, dime novels, western story, mystery stories, love stories, etc., and I am very much in love with him. I know he would read some worth-while literature it would be better for us both. But how can I make him understand, without hurting his feelings, that he is wasting his time reading trash? What should I do? I'm very innocent, while he pursues his tastes.

H.P.T.

You might try to ensnare his interests the next time he calls by saying "Have you read this?" and then tell him how much you enjoyed and read some of its most interesting passages to him! Start a discussion about some book you think worth-while.

At the same time, please remember that detective stories and books of the type you mention, as trash, have been the relaxation of some of the world's great men. During the World War, Lloyd George devoured mystery stories, and this is equally true of several British statesmen. Maybe this boy is a president in embryo.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Christenings

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please give me some pointers on christenings? How should the baby be dressed, what do the parents and god-parents have to do, and so forth and so on? I would like to have my baby christened in church, but I do not know how to go about it. We are Lutherans.

M.

First go to see the minister of your church, to consult with him about the details required by your denomination; for instance, the number of godparents, for this number varies in different denominations. Usually christians have two godmothers and one godfather for a girl baby, two godfathers and one godmother for a boy, and sometimes two of each are required.

Your minister too will make suggestions about the most convenient times for the ceremony; sometimes this is after church service, and sometimes often in the middle of the afternoon (generally between three and five) after the baby has had its afternoon nap.

The christening robe is always white, of a sheer soft material. The dress should not be "fussy"; it may have a touch of handmaking or hemstitching or dainty lace. The long christening robe is worn by the baby boy also.

Usually only the immediate family and close friends are invited to a christening; sometimes only the parents and the godparents are present.

At the appointed hour the guests and parents gather and you have your places in the front pews. When the minister calls for them, the godmother takes the child in her arms and, accompanied by the other godparent (the godparents and mother of the child's parents, goes forward to the font. Then follows the details of the christening then proceed according to the ritual of the church. It is the godmother who gives the baby its name to the minister and she should be sure she's clear about pronouncing it distinctly and correctly, so that there will be no confusion or mistake about the name which is being bestowed upon the child. Remember that the name given at christening is the child's legal name for life!

It is customary, after a christening, for the guests to return with the parents and baby to the parents' home, where refreshments are served, usually those appropriate for afternoon tea.

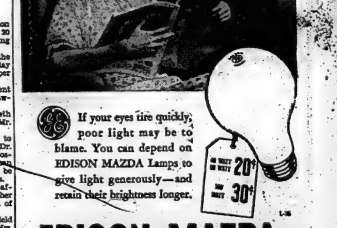
NEW OPERA STAR

Catherine Guthrie

Heralded by voice culturists as a potential rival of Lily Pons, 20-year-old Catherine Guthrie of Springfield, O., ABOVE, will make her operatic debut in Chicago opera this year next summer. Miss Guthrie is a coloratura soprano.

Mrs. Charles Treverton read a letter from Mrs. Herrington about the Missionary Monthly Secretary, Mrs. Russell Glass gave an interesting reading, "The Ten Weddings". Miss Lottie Wallace, Mrs. C. Treverton and Miss Ida Gibson were appointed program committee. The meeting closed with hymn No. 225 and the Benediction. A vote of thanks was given Mrs. Parks for opening her home for the meeting. The hostess served a lovely lunch and a social half hour was spent. - Collection, $1.15 with 13 present.

Fashion Flashes



There's nothing like a neat black suit with dressmaker lapeches as the foundation for an Autumn wardrobe. A nice suit is the soft black cloth with a fitted, buttoned jacket which has an enormous shawl collar. The jacket is also draped about the throat. The collar is in black velvet, and the suit is worn with black velvet gloves.

HARD TO RESIST are the excellent styles and bargain prices of the new fur coats. A nice model is done on slim lines in black caracul with a convertible pointed revere collar of baum marten.

WE WILL SHINE in our lame gowns this season. A new evening gown of silver brocaded lame has front drapery on bodice and skirt. Strands of self material which form the back drape descends in latticed shoulders.

INVITATIONS to dinner mean a new dinner frock. Most attractive is a gown of black matelasse done on princess lines and worn with a fez. The cuffed, side-closing jacket of silver lame has jewelled buttons.

Board Room Gossip

As Supplied to Bigger and Crawford by Dy Publishing Service.

With the present reticent news of Consolidated Smelters still very much in force, no official information is forthcoming regarding it. Consolidated Chibougamau Gold Mines property is presently forthcoming, but field advices state that considerable diamond drilling has given excellent encouragement. It will be interesting to see Minor can say on good authority.

The local market gave a very good account of itself last week. Industrials continue to display more activity and it can be confidently stated that the higher prices go the more public is attracted to the market. There is no better iconic index to rating prices to revive public interest.

In New York, the averages recorded on the best level since 1931. Little change, however, has occurred in the technical structure of the market. Trading in most issues continuing to play an insignificant part in the general movement. At the present time, the pyramiding of new stock purchases is impossible in the face of new flotations coming to sales, under the Federal Reserve's margin of regulations, which as a result thereof is that price reactions of any size will be quick to bring out margin calls and the dumping of stocks to accelerate the decline. And, the general public for most cases cannot be pyramidded, the cyclical advance in prices has been relatively at a more moderate pace than it would have been otherwise.

Business developments may temporarily affect the upward trend from time to time, but the fundamental factors underlying the longer term security movements here will continue to be the determining factors in financial situation. As long as prospects here remain favorable—and the signs at the present time are favorable—the investor is warranted in retaining his present holdings and in further acquisitions upon the appearance of buying opportunities.

Shrewd buyers of stocks have been picking up bargains of late. The company stands to benefit very materially from the advance in copper; besides, the Panamor property has all the earmarks at the present time of becoming a medium grade gold producer of great tonnage; according to official utterances — all of which means greater earnings for Noranda —thus higher dividends for the shareholders. At the present time this market appears to be behind the time.

VARSITY HEADS INTERCOLLEGIATE DEFEAT McGILL

QUEENS WIN

Score 18-10 Victory Over Western With Three Touchdowns

(By Elmer Dalmage)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

They knew something. It seemed, when they said away back in September that finally at Toronto had a football team. It has developed beyond any doubt that the heated intercollegiate campaign, with its upsets and its sudden shows of surprising strength, that the Blues really have a backfield that is almost as powerful as they said it was.

If those Redmen from McGill doubted it after holding Toronto to an 11-7 score on Oct. 19, they doubted it no longer when Varsity's Blues trod on them 18-10 Saturday. Wrong. Warren Stevens' mighty team went into Montreal Saturday and thrashed McGill 39-6 with the greatest display of power and intercollegiate team has put on this fall.

The convincing defeat left the Crimson wave so far from this shores that there is little chance hope in the McGill camp. Queen's alone have a chance to get down the Blues. The occasion will be provided next Saturday in Toronto. There, also the plaint a tie in their first class this season.

Second Three Touchdowns

Coasting towards this crucial fixture, the Torontonians overwhelmed Western Mustangs in Kingston 18-10. To make the victory more impressive, the young men of Ted Reeve scored their first touchdown of 1935, this coming in the second quarter and so delighted the trio color wrangles that they made it more right away—three they scored within fifty minutes.

Toronto's grounders, sandy, confident, well-drilled, scored their sixth consecutive victory in the interprovincial tryout as the expense of Montreal's Redmen. The score was 18-13. But the Soulers aren't out of the woods yet. With three games to play, they have to face a four-point margin over Hamilton Tigers, who polished off Ottawa Rough by same team Sat Argos.

Without Ted Turville and Brian Tippin in the lineup, Tigers will need good enough to beat Ottawa Rough Riders Nov. 2 and Johnny Pavano galloped 30 yards after blocking a forward pass for Hamilton's touchdown and Huck Welsh kicked the point in the 11-7 game stand by the unlucky Bengals.

Powerful Attack

A crowd of 15,000 in Montreal saw the unfolding of tremendous attack by Toronto's Varsity. For the first time the Stevens backfield performed in combination and hoped it would, when he assembled such stars as Bobby Coulter, Hugh Marks, Sam Chase and Ken Strong.

Gray was perhaps the outstanding star in the backfield, but a Marks to Connelly forward pass scored the first touchdown. Marks threw 40 yards and Connelly ran 15 more to cross the goal line. Gray kicked two field goals and the second Toronto touchdown was made possible by Mike Valentine, who blocked Bert Westman's kick. Joe Holden fell on the ball over the goal line.

By relentless, fiercely attack, that McGill had few chances to score. The Redmen did. Their only touchdown when Gray slipped on his forward pass. Mike Valentine snapped to him and Arden Hodge, McGill attacks, scooped up the lumber to run on.

Crushed Game Saturday

Harvey Stevens' Blues, incidentally 38,000 spectators in their last two games, Toronto is likely to see another 15,000 in Varsity Stadium, when they came home to play Queen's Special Thanksgiving. The second 1933 duel between the old rivals may cause the stadium architects to fall.

Johnny Munro, who takes rank with any halfback in the Stevens camp, set Queen's on the right foot early in the game with a 40-yard spurt through the whole Mustang line for a touchdown. Munro caught a punt at midfield and was still on his feet, when he crossed the line.

Within five minutes two more major scores had been recorded by a team, that reputedly had little scoring punch. Mustang fumbles made two fumbles and both were turned into touchdowns. Second, Queens' outside, picked up the first and ran 40 yards for the score. Johnny Wing dribbled the second over the goal line and Harry Sonsabie fell on it.

Although he got into the game for only five minutes, Ken Strong, former professional baseball player and now backbone of New York pro football team, scored all of his squads 10 points against Brooklyn Dodgers in the opening professional football game of the year. In the last period he kicked a 24-yard field goal to win the game and finish the scoring. Giants won 16-7, Ken's hard-running figure out for yourself how hard it would be to haul him down.

Notre Dame and Ohio State are Teams to Beat

by

Janet Doran

"Miss darling," Judy whispered in a choked little voice, "would please ... You've been wonderful kind and sweet, and grand to me. She stopped on a strangled sob, unable to continue, and Michael's hand tightened convulsively about her fingers, as pain ripped through him again, and he closed his eyes against the clawing scourge.

"There's something I've got to tell you, Judy," he began, after the spasm passed, and he could open his eyes again, and see her through the dancing, flickering blur that marched ahead of the fever, "and be quick about it, for I feel the mechanical rise over their pinnacle."

Michael was carving softly, grimly, bitterly, as pain tore through him again, and he clenched his jaws tight together.

"Wait," he gasped, "wait. I ... must ... tell ... my ... wife."

"Hurry!" Dr. Herrick snapped, and over his shoulder, in vague kindness to Judy's stricken terror, "He can tell it to you - together, Mrs. Swayne.

Judy bumped up and down the stairs, bare hospital room, and each moment became seconds, each hour, and then a week, shot through and through with the searing agony of a thoroughly tangled love. Every quarrel they had had, every impatient word she had spoken, every criticism came back and goaded her, like jagged, avenging daggers.

The nurse came back and glanced worriedly at her.

"You'd better rest if you can, Mrs. Swayne. You'll need your strength."

Judy did not answer; returned to the ceaseless pacing up and down the room. She detested the woman for a cold-blooded conscientious, mechanical automaton. What did she know or suffering, of mental agony - she that was calloused, immune to heartbreak.

The nurse grabbed softly out, and returned, shortly, with a stocky, important little woman of middle-age.

"I'm the head-nurse, Mrs. Swayne. Won't you try to lie down and get a little rest, for a while, now? Mr. Swayne will need you, when he comes to say, to the anaesthetic.

"Please," Judy gasped thickly, close to a cry of utter misery, "please go away and leave me! I want to be alone! I ... I can't bear any more!"

"I'll get you a bromide," the head nurse said firmly, "you've got to get at least part of a night's rest, after being up all night like this for your husband ..."

"You'll get out," Judy's voice rose to a shrill pitch and broke, and she began sobbing in long, shuddering gasps, "oh please," she repeated, "won't you go, and leave me alone? I'm all right, I tell you! I just want to be left alone!"

The head nurse backed hastily out, and hurried to consult the house doctor, who evidently voted in Judy's favor against hospital routine. They did not return, and Judy walked aimlessly and wearily up and down the room until the inky blackness of black 31st outside, and dawn flamed slowly into the eastern sky.

The elevator clanged softly, many feet whispered along spotless floors, and the wheeled stretcher brought back its precious burden of humanity.

Michael was breathing in loud, stertorous snores that were so deep and slow, they became groans, every so often. His mouth was open, and his face sagged in terrifying inert lines. His dark hair was matted and damp, and the purple patches had been replaced by bluish white pallor.

Judy watched them slide him into the bed, watched the doctor and nurses working briskly, skilfully. Finally they took their positions about the bed, and the long, slow vigil began, for consciousness to return.

"He'll sleep now." Dr. Herrick said finally, and Judy wiped the damp perspiration from her hands and face, "by afternoon, he'll know you, Mrs. Swayne."

"You could go out, if you wanted to do any errands," the nurse said much," she said, "just rest now, and we'll talk later, Everything's going to be all right, now."

His fingers touched her face softly, moved down to her throat, her bob, and Judy knew that his heart was too full for words. That it was best to be left alone to cope with their terrifying nightmare behind closed doors.

"At least," she added soberly, "he won't die, that is very much about any more!"

Dr. Herrick smiled. Michael agreed softly, "and to think I went around for years, worrying myself sick over my health, and it wasn't quite as bad as the nagging horror that's been eating me, for years."

Judy said nothing. She knew that nothing would ever be as hard to bear again, as this, but there was no use in letting Michael know what she had suffered. He had enough to bear of his own pain, without adding hers to the load.

At eight, he was sleeping still, when she tiptoed out to get her breakfast and go to work.

"I'll call in the morning, and at noon," she told the nurse, "and while is my telephone number if you should need me."

"Now, Mrs. Swayne, you're not to worry about that big husky boy," said the nurse repeated for the tenth time, "he'll be strong as another time after, in a little while. You just stop worrying and let up look after him."

But Judy did worry. Dr. Herrick had told her that it was one of the worst ruptured appendices he had ever had, and there was no forgetting it. All day long, she kept remembering cases wherein appendicitis had been fatal, and her nerves became jumpy and taut, in spite of her efforts to believe that Michael was all right. That he was strong and healthy, and everything would come along fine.

At four, the office force surprised her with a small gift of money, a collection that they had hastily scattered, in sympathy for her trouble. There was a twenty dollar bill in the bottom of the hat, and Judy knew Ted had contributed that. It was so like of him to think of the practical side of her problem first.

"Buy your husband some flowers, or fruit, Judy," they urged, "or put it toward the hospital bill."

"Sell it right away in the old sock, Judy," Tommy Jennifer advised staunchly, "nothing like a little old reserve, when it pours! Miles won't be working for many a moon, yet. And hospitals don't wait. Neither do you digest gardenias and orchids with any amount of success, unless you're an alligator."

Judy flashed him an uneasy glance, aware that he knew of Michael's penchant for spending three to every one dollar he earned.

"I can never thank you enough," she faltered, "you've been wonderful. I ... I guess we never know how many friends we have, until disaster strikes."

"Forget it," Tommy said lightly, "we're all here there, Judy. We know how it is. Keep the old chin up, taul in the bell, and keep liv' ening for the bell."

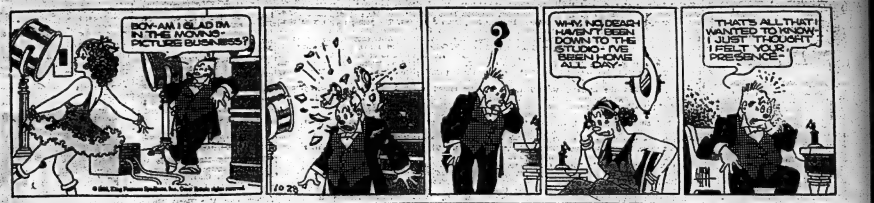
"Right, Tommy," Judy answered huskily, "I will. And thanks!" She looked around a pair of figures, debts they owed, indebtedness that must be met, rent, light, telephone and food, and her income did not in any way approach the staggering total.

Frowning, she bent over the sheet and began creating out items in neat little double lines. Fur coat, would have to go. She could never pay for it, and it would be weeks before Michael could work again. Perhaps longer.

Besides, she didn't really need it. She had a very good heavy winter tweed coat.

She stopped at that. She did not quite dare cross any of the other items off, without consulting Michael. And she didn't see how they could be paid for, either. For weeks to come, Michael would have to have special food, someone to stay with him. For weeks, the expense of running the house alone, would gobble up her entire salary.

And there was no more. Her own savings had dwindled to almost nothing. Only a few dollars left, since she had paid the two months' hospital instalments.



She would have to go to Michael's employer and find out about his insurance. He had mentioned the insurance policy as a "spare tire." In case they ran into bad weather, they could borrow on it.

Wood ai say, sanitoral bank, Judy," he had explained, "just like a savings account, only you get protection, in case anything happens to you."

There had been bonuses, too. Several of them. He had mentioned, "when I get my bonus for this quarter". Then he hadn't mentioned it again, so she guessed it had accumulated, like a bank account.

Mrs. Russel Alexander, President of Moneymore Women's Guild very ably acted as chairman for the evening.

A hymn was sung, followed by prayer and scripture reading, then all joined in singing "There is a green hill far away." Miss Luella Herrington of Thomasburg sang a solo, "Jesus lives next door to me." Mr. Willis Wilson gave a reading on "Encyclopedia in a desk of cards". Jack and Hazel Henderson of Lime Lake then favored with a duet and Mr. Archie Monch of Marlbank sang a solo.

Bessey sang a solo, Mr. Bullock sang a solo, Mrs. Archie Meeks of Marlbank Ladies' Aid gave a reading from Tony's scrap book, "The man who drew his line low." Herrington who said it was a pleasure to attend a meeting of this nature, and that there should be more gatherings of this kind, for though we may be of different race or creed, we are all working for a common good, Jesus Christ the center around which we gather here and throughout the world. Make room in your hearts for Jesus and let him be your guide, Rev. Herrington also spoke briefly of the convention held during the past week in Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, in connection with the tenth anniversary of the United Church.

A. of the Anglican Church this year, of the brigin of the church in England, of the work of John Wesley, who was sent out of the Mother Church to start a new method to bring people back to their knees.

Never say no to an opportunity to do christian work, do while you are asked. Remember that you own your life and living to God. In connection with Thanksgiving Day, Miss Jones spoke of the story of Moses and the burning brush, of God telling him to take the ground on which you stand is holy ground. Do we ever stop to think of that? We may own the land and work it but with out the sunshine and rain which God sends we could grow nothing. We are too much in the habit of asking God to give, never saying God, I thank you. We should observe Thanksgiving Day as a Holy Day, not a holiday.

The President expressed her thanks to all who had assisted with the programme and at this time Mrs. Bessey extended a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. John Waterhouse for their kindness in bringing Miss Jones to Moneymore, and also on behalf of the visiting branches for their thanks to the Moneymore ladies for their kind hospitality. Hymns were sung and the National Anthem brought the programme to a close, after which the Guild ladies served a delicious lunch and a social hour was enjoyed.

JAPAN NOW HAS EYES ON MONGOLIA, TOO

MAP SHOWS EXTENDING JAPANESE INFLUENCE

Japan has made formal demands upon China that it be permitted to establish Japanese or Manchoukuoan military representatives in Outer Mongolia, where Russian influence has long been paramount, for years. The Soviet union scores the Japanese of having penetrated already, if Mongolia were added to Manchoukuo, the Japanese would have a broad front on Siberia. In addition, Japanese military authorities are talking of the necessity of "reorganizing" five North China provinces adjoining Manchoukuo and Mongolia. Thus, a large slice of China might fall into Japanese hands without a war or even a military advance. Recently Manchoukuo military forces under Japanese officers were accused by the Soviet with violating Siberian boundaries and the Chinese National government, at Vladivostok. The Japanese say, however, that the boundaries are in dispute. Then, recently, Japanese warships were sent to Swatow, in South China, because Chinese seized Japanese cargoes of rice on the ground that the Japanese refused to pay duty. Another conflicting "incident" is reported secret treaty between Russia and the Chinese National government.

HYDRO PLANS HUGE DEVELOPMENT ON THE OGOKI RIVER

392,000 Horsepower Can be Obtained at Cost of $3,000,000

DIVERT WATER

Scheme Would Create Artificial Lake of 150 Square Miles

Toronto, Oct. 29—(CP)—Whether or not the United States and Canada get together on the St. Lawrence water development, Ontario is going to the federal government at Ottawa with its plans to develop 392,000 horsepower by a unique power development in the province's northwest.

Chairman T. Stewart Lyon of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission, told the Board of Trade Club last night the province is determined to proceed with long-dreamed-of Ogoki River diversion. The $3,000,000 project, he said, would divert 4,000 cubic feet of water per second from James Bay to Lake Superior.

"We are going to ask the new federal government to undertake, just as soon as it gets settled, to help with the public project," the chairman said. The Ogoki River plan had not previously considered a part of the greater St. Lawrence waterway development, at least temporarily blocked by refusal of the United States Senate to approve the U. S.-Canada Welland Ship Canal.

Artificial Lake Needed

It involves construction of an artificial lake, 150 square miles in size, north of the farthest-west Great Lakes. Waters of the Albany and Ogoki rivers would be connected with Lake Nipigon. From there the diverted water would flow into Lake Superior.

The contemplated water level of the Great Lakes would rise 2.1 feet, Mr. Lyon said, increasing lake shipping on Huron, Michigan and Erie which, he added, would amount to the extent of $500,000 annually. Level of the St. Lawrence River would be affected by the diversion, Montreal harbor waters would rise 1.4 inches.

The Commission Chairman said the plan was nearly 12 years old. It had been thoroughly studied and investigated by Commission experts, and found to be economically feasible. The power yield, it was estimated, would bring Ontario an annual revenue of $1,500,000.

Create New Lake

Lake Nipigon would be the storage basin for water diverted from their run to James Bay. A dam would be built on the Ogoki river at Wabonga Lake, making the waters about 25 feet, flooding upstream for 70 miles. This would be new lake to be created of flood waters.

The plan would create a height of land, feeding Jackfish River and Kenogami down to Lake Nipigon. A dam at the outlet of Nipigon would regulate the flow to Lake Superior.

The diversion would permit power development right down the Great Lakes system—24,000 horsepower between Ogoki and Lake Nipigon; 96,000 between Nipigon and Superior; 8,000 between Superior and Lake Huron; 120,000 between the upper Niagara and Queenston; 34 between Ogdensburg and Lake St. Francis; 50,000 between Lake St. Francis and Lachine.

Easy To Benefit

"The interests benefiting from the diversion would be the government with the power users of Ontario, and Canadian and United States shipping interests," Mr. Lyon said.

"While United States shipping interests would benefit to a considerable degree, it is not thought a direct cash contribution could be made by the United States federal government towards the carrying out of this project, as this would involve expenditures of money on waterways outside their jurisdiction. In view of this, the diversion would be of value to Canada might be obtained."

Butcher Shops in Italy Closed Two Days Week As 6 Months' Diet Begins

Rationing is Begun to Reduce Necessity For Imports — Spagetti And Bread Do Not Come Under Food Edict of Mussolini—Fish Industry Promises Increase

By JOHN EVANS
(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Rome, Oct. 29 (AP)—Premier Mussolini today put the nation on a six-meatless diet to fight the sanctions imposed by the League of Nations.

The first of the measures, effective November 3, ordered restricted sale of meats to reduce the necessity of imports, restrictive measures were also put on public dining.

Hotels, restaurants and dining cars will be forbidden to serve more than one meat or fish dish at a meal.

To increase the food supply the fish industry promised to increase production. Restrictions on game have also been lifted to encourage the use as food.

Spagnetti and bread were found to be safe because the 1935 wheat crop was officially given as 282,000,000 bushels, which, plus the reserve stock, is considered sufficient to cover the nation's needs.

Does Not Mean Starvation

Mussolini took active command of the National Defence program and expected sanctions. He summoned to his office all officials and industrial chiefs concerned and at two meetings placed before them the present situation and the probable effect of sanctions.

Il Duce declared the people had proved their ability to discipline themselves to obey and he had confidence in them once they knew the situation.

Il Duce is also preparing a plan to reduce the consumption and use of paper and other supplies that are largely imported.

The first of the orders to become effective will close butcher shops on Tuesday, and on Wednesdays they cannot sell beef, poultry, or pork products for the duration of the ban. The butcher shops, as recompense for the two days' restrictions will be permitted to remain open Sundays until 11 a.m. Mussolini rejected the idea of bread-cards or any other such restrictions.

100-Inch Telescope Reveals Nebulae 240,000,000 Light Years Distant to Astronomers

The Distance is Known With in Uncertainty of Less than 30 Per Cent

MANY STAR CLUSTERS

Speed of Distant Groups is Shown to be Hundreds of Miles Per Second

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 29—(AP) —Space of a depth almost incomprehensible to man is daily being conquered in accurate geographical detail, made with aid of a 100-inch telescope.

A space ship, using charts described at Yale University by Dr. Edwin Hubble of Mt. Wilson Observatory, could set out to travel 240,000,000 light years straight away from earth with reasonable assurance the charts.

The rivers would reach clusters of nebulae 240,000,000 light years away—the distance it takes light 240,000,000 years to travel.

"The distance," Dr. Hubble said, "is known with an uncertainty of less than 30 per cent and probably less than 15 per cent."

The trip is by the greatest distance yet charted. Arriving the traveller would probably find the nebulae to be clusters of stars like those of our own heavens, averaging about 85,-000,000 suns apiece.

Unit For Measuring

A triple-staranglin Jacob's Ladder used to measure these distances was described by Dr. Hubble last night. The first step with 126 nebulae near by in which individual stars could be seen. The stars gave the distances to the nebular to which they belonged.

The next section of the climb was to an immense collection of nebulae —the Virgo cluster—consisting of several hundred nebulae of all types in which a few stars could be seen.

The third extension came from examining the light itself from nebulae so far away no individual stars could be made out. In this climb the astronomical explorers studied nebulae receding outward for nearly 100 nebulae of all types and 10,000 clusters of nebulae.

The light from all these very distant nebulae shows them apparently travelling with speeds running from hundreds to thousands of miles a second. This is the most startling feature of the light which permitted the climbers.

WAR SETTLEMENT DENIAL IS GIVEN IN PARIS REPORT

Britain and France Reach Working Agreement on Procedure

PLAN OF ACTION

No Trade With Italy Plan Adopted by Many Nations

London and Paris today reported studying counter proposals to Premier Mussolini's terms to end Ethiopia. These were understood to refuse Il Duce his desired protectorate over Tigre Province in the north and his wish for a link between Eritrea and Italian Somaliland.

At Geneva it was announced 34 nations had approved the buy-sell-keep-from-Italy sanction.

Rome officially announced pene-tration of Italian patrols in the north, a further 25 miles into the Italian interior. In the south Italian Italian troops routed Ethiopians and occupied Dolo, Italian Somaliland, down a six months regulation of foodstuffs. Meat sales and dining in restaurants is restricted.

Working Arrangement.

Paris, Oct. 29 (AP) — A reliable source said today Great Britain and France had reached a working arrangement upon the procedure to be followed in future discussions concerning the Italo-Ethiopian conflict.

However, both French and British officials declined to comment upon reports any plan for the settlement of the war had been drafted.

The agreement on the Geneva plan of action was reached in a series of conversations between Premier Laval and Sir George Russell Clerk, British Ambassador.

The British Embassy persistently refused to confirm agreement on a peace plan had been reached by British and French experts in Paris, saying no British experts were there in Paris.

The foreign office described Paris and London as being "in complete agreement on all questions of procedure". They were reported to be in agreement also on Italy's "present position in the League of Nations".

The reference to "Italy's position" was interpreted in circles close to the foreign office as meaning Premier Mussolini would be encouraged to present his case against Ethiopia again to the proper League committee through Baron Aloisi, who was his delegate to the League, if he so desires.

PROPOSES PLAN TO COVER MART

Would Cover Sidewalk on Each Side to Provide More Comfort

Alderman Thomas Marshall, chairman of Market and City Property committee, at Monday evening council in committee on Monday evening is to provide better protection at the market by having the sidewalks on both sides of the park in the square covered. This would provide those selling produce on the market with protection from the biting cold or winter and the hot sun of summer and make it more agreeable for those making purchases. Plans and specifications were drawn up by the committee and did not take any action, but it is understood the matter will be considered at the next regular meeting of the committee.

The plan proposes to put posts down each side of the sidewalk on the park and have the entrance at the corners behind the posts. The City Hall would extend at least four feet out over the sidewalk into the market square. The cost would not be prohibitive and would be a considerable advantage in carrying on the market.

Haverial, interviewed en route to Addis Ababa, added:

"We can hold out just as long as the Italians can. We would not be surprised if this war lasts fifteen or twenty years—there is no limit to the powers in carry on the fight."

Joseph Martin, 22-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Martin, Bridge Street, Madoc, is attending Hawarden Academy, Hawarden, Iowa.

Martin, accompanied by his brother Benjamin, will report for his first year at Hawarden on Thursday.

Also en route to Addis Ababa was the Rev. Ernest Ethiopian "man of mystery", acting as a special agent for Haile Selassie in Europe for the purchase of arms and supplies.

New Brain Surgery Technique Perfected to Remove Portions of Skull, Sterilize and Replant

Diseased Bone May Be Sterilized, And Replaced Later

(By Howard W. Blakeslee)
(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, Oct. 29—(AP)—A new miracle of brain surgery, by which portions of the skull can be removed, sterilized, put outside, and replanted safely to the head hours or days later, was described today before the American College of Surgeons by its inventor.

The technique is a step in the direction of taking out diseased portions of skull, putting back only after they are cured. The brain surgery has been under development for several years at the University of California Medical School and was explained by Howard C. Naffziger, M.D., head of the Department of Surgery at the University, and O. W. Jones, Jr., M.D.

Many skull wounds are cured in this manner. One is tumors of the skull, also, some forms of epilepsy. The other is infections of the skull.

In tumors the affected part of the bone is removed, the tumor tissue going with it. The tumorous tissues are then removed from the bone. Then the bone is sterilized and is ready for replanting when the tissue in place in the head.

Cancerous Bone Treated

"It was Alexander Lambert a few years ago, Dr. Naffziger said, that discovered that bone could be replanted with safety. But the sterilization, chemical or boiling in water completely removed the danger of the cancer recurring. Formerly bone grafts were used for restoring the wounds, left by such operations. The grafts are sometimes troublesome or dangerous, Dr. Naffziger said.

"The skull," he said, "is the one place where you can remove the tissue that harbors the tumor, sterilize the bone and replant it at once."

The infections of the skull are handled differently. The infected bone is removed, sterilized, and put away for periods running sometimes into weeks, while the infection in the brain overlying about the site of the removed piece gets well. Then the piece of skull is put back in place.

General Says Italians Driven Out in Two Months

By G. H. ANDERSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 29—(AP)— Great Britain imposed its second sanction against Italy today with enforcement of an embargo on credit to the Fascist nation.

A surprise announcement that Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare as well as Anthony Eden would go to Geneva late this week to represent Britain in view of "important decision" to be taken, led to the belief in some quarters that further punitive measures would soon be undertaken.

Peace Hopes

British sources expressed hope the Foreign Secretary's visit at the League of Nations would lead to more definite discussion of "peace" rather than have yet been held.

Sir Samuel was expected to confer himself concerning the latest possible private meetings with Premier Laval, chief figure in the European negotiations and other leading statesmen.

Meanwhile today the British money market was forbidden to make loans to Italians in London, acceptance or endorsement of bills of exchange for the benefit of Italy was banned and issuance or subscription for shares in Italian corporations was prohibited.

Addis Ababa, Oct. 29 (CP)—Italian troops, bombed the Walkait region on the border of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan several times today, according to unconfirmed reports reaching here. It was also said the bombers were driven off by British planes.

Tana, the point where British interests are concerned.

Two trains bearing 1,500 soldiers from Addis Ababa have reached the front on their way to the Ogaden front and early next week Emperor Haile Selassie will send a company of 60,000 men north to headquarters at Dessie.

"Four men should serve one rifle," Ras Getachu who has charge of the Emperor's army is reported to have said. Italian will be driven out of Ethiopia within two months. "When the first is killed, the second should take his place and so on until only the last death in defending the fate of the country."

City and District News

MILD WEATHER PROVES BOON TO FISHERMEN

Present mild weather of a perfect fall season may be a boon to residents of the city and district at large, but to the fishermen in particular it is looked upon with little satisfaction.

Fishermen daily bring with their nets any fish from ordinary specimens to gobs of their work. Warm weather has resulted in whitefish, particularly, staying far down in the lake; catches of other fish have been correspondingly affected, and that portion of the city are also engaged in the ancient habit of thumb twiddling as warm day succeeds warm day, although early season business was a little shaded of expectations.

LACK OF RAIN CAUSE OF WELLS GOING DRY

The present dry autumn is responsible for the drying up of scores of wells in the area about the city and in many cases farmers have been forced to haul water for long distances for their stock and ordinary household needs. One resident west of the city has been forced to drive his horse daily for a distance of nearly two miles for water. "A good soaking rain," is badly needed for pastures, which is also to assist fall ploughing, it was stated by leading farmers today.

NO MORE LOCAL MEN NEEDED AT AIR PORT

No more local men will be accepted on the Relief Project at the Royal Canadian Air Force Camp on the Trent Road it was indicated this week at the local Unemployment Service office. Quite a few Belleville resident who was sent to the camp by the office in turn, was returned, it was stated.

"Until we have further word from there we will not be sending any more men," commented the office superintendent, Mr. V. Ross.

DONATIONS OF BROKEN TOYS ARE ASKED FOR

Following the custom of past years, members of the local Legion, assisted by Saint Santa Claus by repairing worn and broken toys, if enough donations are forthcoming, and local stores can be secured, it was learned at the meeting of Lynch.

The repaired toys will be distributed to the children of needy residents of the city along with the Christmas baskets, at the annual Christmas Day.

Donations of these toys which may be unearthed in cellars and crannies of homes during the present fall cleaning season may be made at either the Bell Telephone office, a phone call at either station, or, consistent will call for the parcels. Nothing is too small or too insignificant to be overlooked, and no matter how worn or how badly repairs are needed, the article will be thankfully accepted.

ODD JOBS PROVIDE WORK FOR MANY MEN

Odd jobs created through fall work such as raking leaves, spading gardens and flower beds, shovelling storm, window, and cleaning and repainting heating plants in local homes are responsible for a considerable number of men being given part time employment at the present time, it was stated at the local Employment Service office. Also a considerable number of vacancies for housework at the present time are also being filled.

A local seven year old Belleville youth was charged in possession of a quantity of chewing gum, candy and cash, that had been stolen from Dennis' grocery store, Pine St, late Saturday night. Problems Facing New Gov't Intimated by W. E. Tummon

Thanks Thurlow Conservatives For Loyal Support in Campaign

"I'm not going to start in and criticize in a hostile manner to the Liberals following their defeat at the polls in 1930, but I am going to place your attention to the problems that face the King administration today," declared W. E. Tummon, M.P., for South Hastings at a well attended meeting in Thurlow Conservative Club held in Landon Orange Hall on Friday evening at which F. P. Hill, M.P.P., for North Hastings also spoke, as well as other prominent Conservatives.

"I come here for one purpose in particular, to extend my sincere thanks to the loyalty of my staunch friends in Thurlow Township, during the recent campaign and I can truthfully say, that I am in no way discredited in the result, which was the manner in which it was conducted in South Hastings. Getting back to the problems, that face the new government, however, I might say, that for the last 400 days prior to the 1930 election, when the Bennett government came into power, there was a decrease of one million dollars per day in our export trade, but, prior to the election just held according to statistics there was an increase in Canadian export trade, declared Mr. Tummon. He referred to Mr. King's attitude when he proposed trade treaty with the United States, declaring that Mr. Tummon referred to the manner in which Mr. King had failed to put these treaties, in which all growers and producers in particular, depend on such treaties and who would naturally endeavour to protect their interests against the flood of importations from Canada, as proposed Mr. King.

Three Obstacles

In reference to his recent defeat at the polls, Mr. Tummon stated it was of the opinion that the riding of South Hastings had presented three obstacles to a Conservative candidate. The first was the Liberal machine in this riding and the railway vote was not split as this time. Then there was the single man's relief camp near Trenton and finally, the Socialist candidate, who naturally polled many Conservative votes, not only in South Hastings but throughout the entire Province. "It is my opinion that the Liberals cannot hold this old ruby riding, so be ready and alert," Mr. Hill, M.P.P., concluded amid applause.

In reviewing the recent election Mr. Tummon pointed out, that 2,053 more votes were polled in the riding this election than in 1930 and 1,700 more votes were cast in Thurlow Township in 1935 than in the provincial election one year previous, "which goes to show, that in spite of poor financial conditions of the past, people are not content with unemployment and other problems that face them, and when the government before he concluded. "No matter what government is in power we must remember, that we cannot have our present troubles in order, that they gradually right themselves, time may be secure. I'm no prophet, but I do not think we have seen the worst. I know the book will be on the other foot in South Hastings at the next election as he has always thanked his loyal supporters in Thurlow Township.

"Maybe there is a silver lining to the cloud," declared F. P. Hill, M.P.P., for East Hastings. Speaking in the Provincial House at Ottawa, Mr. Hepburn will no longer have a place to lay the blame for his troubles," declared Mr. Hill as he later spoke of the lack of progress in Ontario. The conservative ranks of this riding for people of today with the results the county in by-elections and what is needed in every party is the complete re-organization of the younger Conservatives, declared Mr. Hill, as he lauded the late Bennett administration.

Different Voting Lists

Different voting lists at Belleville, spoke on the Revision of Election Acts and pointed out there are two voting lists, one for Provincial and for the Federal and Provincial elections. Mr. Tummon referred to some of the new names added to the local voting list, stating that in the past year the Liberals had added five names to the Conservative one. He urged the meeting to organize in relationship to the placing of slips on the voters on polling day, declaring as well as R. D. Arnott, President of the Thurlow Conservative Association, that the Thurlow Conservative Club, urged the necessity of Conservatives in both ranks and more particularly among the younger element of those just becoming of voting age.

Mrs. Harold Sparrow, of Foxboro acted as chairman for the program, which consisted of community singing, reading by Edith Easton, duet, Mrs. Wessels and Mrs. Sparrow, reading, Rita Clark; reading, Grace Mills, solo, C. Eggleton, accompanied by Bruce Martin. Following the National Anthem refreshments were served.

In making the presentation Mr. H. G. Hanna, K.C., on behalf of the Hastings County Bar Association expressed the welcome and appreciation to Hon. Mr. Justice McTague on the occasion of his first official visit to Belleville.

"I very much appreciate your wishes and I am happy to be here," returned Mr. Justice McTague. "I have had favorable reports of the conditions in Belleville, and with the co-operation of counsel here I hope to make this the best term before us may be made reasonably easy.

"Thank you, gentlemen."

Forty-Two Horses Will Contest Cambridgeshire Race

Newmarket, England, Oct. 29 — (CP Cable)—Forty-two horses are expected to contest the classic Cambridgeshire handicap here Wednesday.

As usual the race is regarded as almost an open one, some racing writers are telling the public to refrain from betting but there is one, Aldershot correspondent, who rates favorite at 17 to 2. It is agreed Pegasus will do well if drawn favorably placed. The draw is important at Newmarket, when there is a big field.

Nearly all the experts are calling the winner to come from the mixed company of Pegasus, Wychrood Abbot, Segundo, Bostillon and O'Grady.

Basil Jarvis, the favorite's trainer, thinks Pegasus "will take a lot to beat." The owner of F. P. Horning, hopes the horse will live up to the name.

C. Lambton, trainer of Segundo, Pegino and Bostillon, says they will run on their merits and wont try to impress an opinion. After training Fairies Vow Jarvis and Gaines Gap, H. L. Cottrill also declined to talk.

A. Sheldon, owner of the British quota, is convinced his filly is nearly ready to win. Mr. Sheldon says his Cayrnanas is very fit and expected to run well.

A. B. Scott, the late trained Commander thinks the horse is well handicapped and has a good sporting chance.

Lady Neill reports her Fitalist is fit and well but J. H. Jones says Ouabout's chances are "rotten."

Maj. Gen. Eric Miln Bathurst will do himself justice. Trainer Harvey Leader said Heavyweight will do well if the going is soft.

Makale will not be defended as part of the plan is to permit the Italians to advance far into Ethiopia before launching a counter-attack.

A government communique asserted: (The Rational Government) before Italian communiques claiming subjugation of Ethiopian chiefs, the names entirely unknown, Fantalale names also are provided for these chiefs and the Ethiopian government has reason to believe they are non-existent."

VIGILANCE KEPT AT ALEXANDRIA

Ten Powerful Searchlights Throw Beams at Night

(By Gayle Talbot)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)
Alexandria, Egypt, Oct. 28.—(CP)—The casting of tension, between Great Britain and Italy, has not caused the British land and sea forces to relax their vigilance in Egypt.

Alexandria's harbor bristles today with fighting craft and hospital ships. Ashore there is unceasing activity.

Within the last few days, Britain has closed the Mersah Matruh airport, 89 miles up the coast toward Libya, to civilian planes. Previously the airport was informally patrolled to see their field as a stop.

Since its declaration, the military has taken over the Casino Stefano, Alexandria's famous gambling hall on the shore from the heart of the city. Officially the hotel will be occupied by the British army staff, but it is also rumored, will be equipped with hospital facilities.

From dusk until dawn, 10 powerful searchlights from the shore and ships throw their beams restlessly through the sky. The flying boat patrol of the Royal Australian air force, which operates normally, approached Alexandria from Athens and Malta, picked up the harbor's five miles out and was held steadily in its beam until it was close enough to be identified.

Sightseers are permitted to take conducted tours of the harbor and see the workships close by but cameras have been barred for the last two weeks, ever since the Italian S. S. Amerika turned in the harbor. A rumor, which officials say is absolutely false, persists in Alexandria the Amerika was used to blast the narrow channel and to bottle up the British ships.

EMPLOYMENT GAIN STEADY

Rather remarkable is the coincidence of report from Ottawa and Washington showing large gains in employment in the month of September of this year, in the United States 350,000 persons added to workers staff in Canada 32,040. These facts attend the general uprise in business and manufacturing activity.

The United States figures were the largest for a year and a half and employment has now reached the 1930 level.

In Canada, the total of 9914 firms reporting to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics showed 927,018 persons actively employed as against 964,977 on the first of September. Firms in all provinces of Canada except British Columbia reported gains. Ontario's gain aggregated 16,372 more persons back at work.

The uniformity of opinion backed by figures continues to multiply the proofs of the soundness of the recovery.

HALLOWE'EN

Young minds find in Hallowe'en a festival which develops to the fullest their fascinating interest, for this is the festival which gives freest scope to the imagination, most potent in the young. Nature has been good to childhood in this for it is the foundation of experience and upon this rests the development of the child's emotions.

Down through the aged have come customs which have become crystallized in the Eve of All Saints. Many of the currents are pagan in their origin, but join with the other currents to create that atmosphere. So sharply do the old and the quite sophisticated and a modernist, who knows all about machinery, he is also an adept at make-believe and feasting where the real spirit of the occasion. It may be said that the child is in that happy state where what he believes and what he plays are really one.

Hallowe'en is not what it used to be—that is, generations ago, but though it has changed with the times, it is modernised in such a way as to please, and the elements which exists only in memory and is revivified at Hallowe'en is still a pleasing thing.

The festival dates back to the earliest harvest celebrations in various lands, and these sources were at last gathered about the Christian vigil of All Saints' Day. Druidic Celtic and Roman traditions were largely factors in the old time festival. It used to be the belief that Hallowe'en was the only time when spirits, ghosts, witches, warlocks rendered their visits to the earth free from control. On the next day the Druids held their harvest festival and bonfires were lighted in honour of the sungod in thanksgiving for harvest. So to the mind of this festival it was thought that Samain, the lord of death, assembled the souls of the wicked who had been condemned within the past year, until they could enter into the animals. One can understand accordingly how the tradition of spooks and goblins grew up. In the Roman year, a somewhat similar festival fell about this time in honor of Pomona, the goddess of fruit trees. On this occasion the nut and the apple represented the winter store of fruits and to this day we have the apple ducking and roasting of nuts.

From these origins grew up Hallowe'en as it used to be and as in some ways still is. The imagination is unfettered—there is a sense of happiness in the harvestide, and the prospect of a winter spent in feasting on rich stores of the fruits of the fields as well as the sense of brightness in the liberation of spirits according to Druidic lore.

Hallowe'en should not be allowed to pass away. Modern industry is doing its best to preserve the old traditions as it turns out in mass production at low prices costumes, false faces, and other paraphernalia which go to make for the delight of the occasion. With its freedom from restraint, it is a good thing for a world and even a childhood which runs a risk of thinking too seriously, and it is a source of real social pleasures of which the world stands in sore need.

On Thursday evening all that the children ask is fine weather and the night will be one to be long remembered. It is a good thing that there is one occasion at least when a child can take that absolute pleasure in what is natural to his mind.

Happy childhood which can enjoy and people a world with fancies so rich that the memory of them endures when the later experienced and more material things have long since passed from the memory!

Nothing is impossible to the man who can will, and then do; this is the only law of success.—Mirabeau.

Labor—the expenditure of vital effort in some form, is the measure, may it the maker of values.—Holland.

The lottery of honest labour, drawn by time, is the only one whose prizes are worth taking up and carrying home.—Theodore Parker.

RACKETS AND BULLETS

JESSE AND FRANK JAMES, "BILLY THE KID" and other real live desperate bandits of more than a decade ago, the days when stacked the dime and half-dime Beadle thrillers off on such a fortune-winning quest, have been more than duplicated today by other desperate fast-shooting bandits like Dillinger, "Pretty Boy" Floyd, and others who have killed and been killed.

West of Chicago the gun specialists do their own shooting, mostly, but east of Chicago, particularly in New York the Big Shots have plenty of underlings to do the dirty work.

At Cal Capone could never be tied up directly to any of the killings which benefitted him and his racket and the government had to get him through income tax evasion, for all, like most of the Big Shot crooks though the government had no right to muscle in on any of his tainted money.

Dutch Schultz, big New York gambler head of the Policy game racket which brought in millions of sucker money, and other lucrative rackets, went to the mat with Uncle Sam on the income tax question and won the first round. Uncle Sam still kept after him and proceeded to arrange another trial in another place. In the meantime some one thought that the Dutch was getting too much publicity for the good of the game, and a pair of gunmen, sent from a rival camp or the enemy, filled him full of lead in a after evening—rubbing him and several of his henchmen out of the picture.

One by one the Big Shots in crime in the United States are meeting their Waterloo, some are rubbed out like Dillinger, "Legs" Diamond, Dutch Schultz, and a while back Al Capones, who dodged the bullets, are booked for long sojourns in prison. Again it must be admitted that crime does not pay.

MAINE WHICH HAS LONG BEEN NOTED FOR ITS STRENUOUS PROHIBITION WHISKEY is now vitally concerned with water, for after a long struggle the birthplace of prohibition has succeeded in wresting from the New Deal Government of Franklin Delano Roosevelt an appropriation of thirty-six million dollars to be expended upon a series of dams and power-houses which will harness the tides of the Bay of Fundy and give about 100,000 horse power in electrical energy to the State of Maine to use or dispose of. Passamaquoddy is the place where the thirty-foot tides of the Bay of Fundy rush into the ocean in the faint hope that it may return to the government after many days. Government engineers reported against the project from the point of view of engineering standpoint but economically Commissions composed of Maine politicians reported very favorably on all aspects of the project, apparently with a great influence in favor of the administration at the present general election—especially as Maine has the richest fat and not much lean from the pork barrel appropriations for many years. Competent engineers claim that the power will cost so much to produce and for maintenance that no one could afford to buy it—then there is a big row which prohibits the project when completed of competing with existing power concerns—in fact the power must be sold outside the state—so it looks as if the people of the sovereign state of Maine were concerned almost solely with the expenditure of thirty-six million dollars—let afterward take care of itself.

HOPE SPRINGS ETERNAL IN THE HUMAN BREAST and that's why the State lottery of Cuba keeps many of the poor people of that country alive. Everybody buys tickets, rich and poor, but to the poor the drawings are always tragic, except to the very few who make a winning. A man hanged himself in Havana last week. He bought a lottery ticket fraction for 22 cents, sold it for 16 cents when his family demanded bread. The ticket fraction won $1,400 and the original owner whom Lady Luck had grazed so closely just gave up the battle of life and went out and hung himself.

Heavy Agenda Planned for Dominion - Provincial Parley To be Called in November

Provincial Premiers Will Meet With Ottawa Cabinet

MAY CHANGE ACT

Unemployment Situation is One of Problems to be Discussed

Ottawa, Oct. 26 (CP)—The Dominion-Provincial conference is expected to meet here in November, unemployment and the date of convening of the parley will be made shortly.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced last night after a session of cabinet council the Provincial governments were being communicated with on the matter and the date to them.

The three sittings of cabinet have been held, two of which were very lengthy, since the new administration took office six days ago; and these deliberations have been marked by considerable progress, it was learned.

Sittings of cabinet will take place almost daily; but the Prime Minister was not in a position at the moment to make comments relative to the posted Canada-United States trade pact, the trade mission to Japan, provincial financing of the affairs of the Canadian Wheat Board.

No Significance to Visit

No political significance was to be attached to the visit to Ottawa of Senator Raoul Dandurand, Montreal, Minister without Portfolio, government leader in the Senate first session, the Prime Minister indicated. The visit was a private character and had been planned for December before the recent provincial elections.

Problems with which the Provincial conference will be confronted include two classes, constitutional and financial. Included in the former the clauses are inter-related.

The constitutional issue is their the general problem of revision of the British North America Act, the division of powers as between the Dominion and the Provinces provided in it is stumbling-block to the type of modern social legislation which has been sponsored by the Bennett government in such measures as the Canada Temperance Act, the Criminal Code, the Federal Government and the British Columbia Governments. Its position may be reviewed. The Old Age Pensioning Act is another which may be considered.

The twin problems of debt and taxation loom large in the financial class. Some method of putting a halt to the steady increase in public debt and the accompanying rise in taxes of the past few years will be sought.

Possibility of a National Scheme of debt refunding, accompanied by some plan of supervision of future financing, may form a subject for the financial experts at a conference.

Uniform Mining Policy

In the field of mining, revenues provinces, Dominion and Municipalities have been dogging more fields of taxation and in some cases confusion and inequality are said to have arisen.

Premier Hepburn of Ontario has announced his intention of imposing an income tax and has suggested the Federal Government might collect it for the province in order to avoid duplication of effort. The merits of this suggestion and the possibility of extending it to other provinces will be considered.

Mr. King has called attention to the varying taxes imposed on mines in the different provinces which he regards as an obstacle to the development of the Dominion. One attempt will be made to reach an agreement upon a uniform mining policy.

Set Up Commission

Unemployment relief is the problem of the financial class. Mr. King's policy calls for the setting up of a representative National Commission to co-operate with provincial bodies whose chief purpose is the providing of employment. The provinces, municipalities and other agencies will participate in and co-operate with the work of the commission and the working-out of this policy will require discussion at the conference.

Of immediate practical financial import is a settlement of the proportion of relief costs to be borne by each government and the method of administering relief.

Questions of Housing Schemes and rural credits will also find a place on the agenda. Parliament enacted a Housing Law last session which may come up for revision.

HIKE TO JAP THRONE

An exercise mapped out the Crown Prince of Japan, Tsugu-No-Miya, made at the Tokio railroad station as he prepared to board the train for his first railroad ride. The youngster went to the imperial capital at Kayano for a week end. The crown prince, heir to the throne now held by his father, Emperor Hirochite, was born December 23, 1923.

Mr. King urged these measures should be submitted to the Supreme Court of Canada, for an opinion.

The Provinces may be asked their views as to a conference, to the Courts. Failing to reach unanimity or an agreement to turn over some of their powers to the Dominion Parliament, the Provincial Premiers are beyond Federal constitutional amendment. On the other hand they might discuss an agreement to secure uniform legislation in their legislatures to supplement Federal activities.

Measures in this class are the employment and Social Insurance Act, the Eight-Hour Day Act, the Minimum Wages Act, Day of Rest Act and various provisions aimed at the regulation of business, which were based on recommendations of the Price Spreads Commission.

Debt Problem Looms Large

The Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act is in a slightly different category but has already been the subject of discussion between the Federal Government and the British Columbia Governments. Its position may be reviewed. The Old Age Pensioning Act is another which may be considered.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

OCT. 29th., 1913

Dr. Dormer has returned to the city after a trip to Toronto.

Mr. Peter A. Tripp, Order St. returned home yesterday accompanied two moths with his son and daughter at Saskatoon.

At the Masonic Temple in Trenton last night, Mr. W. S. Murch, First Principal, Mr. W. J. Purdon, K. C., representing the Grand Chapter, of Ontario, were the guests of honor on King Solomon's Temple Night, and delivered elegant addresses and were presented with magnificent flowers.

A horse belonging to Mr. S. Oliphant ran away at Foxboro this afternoon and collided with another vehicle, damaging it to some extent.

"TOP HAT"

Even Better tip "Gay Divorcee" and "Roberta" say critics

Even better than "The Gay Divorcee" and "Roberta"

That's the ultimate in praise which must be awarded "Top Hat" newest of Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers co-starring musical picture.

Dancing and singing to the tunes and lyrics of Irving Berlin, Astaire and Miss Rogers acquaintanceship in a new high for screen musicals in this picture, now in its third day of recording-breaking attendance at the Belle, closing its local engagement Wednesday evening, matinee daily.

As was to be expected, the two stars introduce a number of sensational new dance steps, the climaxed by the Italian flavored Carioca which is the composition by satisfying answer to public demand for a successor to the "Continental" and "Piccolino" of former singing, too, is very pleasing and in general they reveal their characterizations with inimitable verve and appeal.

Splendid support is accorded by a comedy cast which has seldom been matched on stage or screen. It includes Helen Broderick, brilliant comedienne of the Broadway stage, Edward Everett Horton, Eric Blore and Eric Blore, in the screen of "The Gay Divorcee." Gals crew does not need to be told down the middle.

Blending romance with gay comedy "Top Hat" tells a light, thoroughly intriguing story of how a plausible story, with never a lag or dull moment. Jerry Travers and Dale Tremont, Americans, meet in London. In a novel and amusing manner. It's a case of love at first sight for Jerry, and he is not long in swaying Dale to his viewpoint. But complications arise, Dale misclothes to believe that Jerry is the husband of her best friend, and then things begin to happen, fast and furiously and funny.

The background of the story have the Lido as their locale and action unfolds against settings of sumptuous and picturesque splendor.

Mark Sandrich, who guided Astaire and Miss Rogers in "The Gay Divorcee," directed the new picture. The Wright Taylor and Allan Scott, who wrote the screen play based on the "Top Hat" stage production "The Girl who Dared," must go down as truly brilliant dialogue.

In short, "Top Hat", is the essence of satisfying entertainment. Audiences will enjoy every one of the incidental dance and music highlights, such as "Cheek to Cheek," "The Behind Me Satan," "Top Hat," and "Cheek to Cheek."

"Top Hat" will be repeated again tonight, and Wednesday, matinee and evening with the Belle Cinema News Flashes, and "On Ice" a very pretty picture of Sonja Henie's graces in color. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.10. "Top Hat" starts daily at 2.50, 7.30 and 9.30 P. M.

2 Features Thursday

Two outstanding feature attractions are announced for exhibition commencing Thursday in "Doctor Socrates" co-starring Paul Muni and Ann Dvorak and "Personal Maid's Secret" co-starring Margaret Lindsay and Warren Hull.

"The Man They Couldn't Hang"

Story of John Lee Who Lived to Tell the Tale of His Own Hanging

A deeply human story, gripping in its blatantly and inspiring in its theme is the feature picture, "The Healer" playing tonight at the Capitol Theatre. With such a splendid cast that includes Ralph Bellamy, as the young doctor who works miraculous cures on the youngsters crippled by infantile paralysis, Karen Morley, devoted nurse to the doctor; Judith Allen as the gay young society belress who lures the doctor away from his practice; J. Farrell MacDonald and Robert McWade as the two old cronies always at loggerheads who provoke the comedy in the screen play.

Mention should be made of young Sidney Rooney, youngster who plays an important role in this novel drama. Mickey displays unusual ability in depicting an unfortunate lad who is a patient of the creative doctor.

Perhaps one of the most thrilling short subjects ever filmed is called "Under Thrills" showing mad racing speed contests in outboard motor boats. Aquaplaning also looms in the picture's realism. Aileen Revel is seen in a riotous comedy that keeps audiences in roars.

Tonight, each lady patron attending will be presented with a piece of Dufferry dinnerware.

"The Man They Could Not Hang"

One of the most novel presentations in the realm of screenland is the production of the 100 per cent. By this means the actual dates and surviving people will pass before us in manner more realistic and lively as they are today. This show is on an all British bill and was recently covered 35,000 miles and played many of the largest Theatres in Europe at great-er expense than here by special arrangement, popular prices will prevail.

CANADA GEESE AGAIN ON WAY

Believed About 280 Perished While Resting on Niagara

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 29.—(CP)—Game Conservationists watched with fewer misgivings the rush overhead of migrating wild geese today, with scarcely a wild goose in sight—and there's the reason for the nightmare for bird-lovers was at an end.

The Niagara death trap was believed to have taken the lives of no more than 280 birds, a fraction that alighted on the waters above the Falls last night, instead of the day, and them became confused and couldn't be supersed. The great flock broke up this morning after day with thousands of geese continuing their migration flight southward. Only one dense mass of geese was observed. Hundreds were killed at the Falls, when they struck the wires of the Hydro and Ry upstream to ride down again.

Roy Numa, Culpepers game warden, salvaged 23 living geese from the rapids and Mr. Percy was placed in pens at the Lavkin farms at Queenston and revived.

"Watch Texture of Make" Buttermakers are Told at Sixth Annual Banquet

Function Held at Moose Auditorium in This City

LARGE ATTENDANCE

Speakers Prominent in Butter Industry Address Gathering

Members of the Bay of Quinte Buttermakers' Association, with which is associated the Prescott Buttermakers' Club, eclipsed all previous efforts at their sixth annual banquet and meeting held in the Moose auditorium in this city last evening.

Featured by a varied program of entertainment provided by children of the local Ontario School for the Deaf, as well as the sparkling efforts by individual entertainers, the affair together will also be recorded on the list of the local association as one of the most successful yet held. Brief, yet illuminating addresses by the leading gentlemen of the dairying industry in this province enhanced the program.

Present last evening were Mr. J. H. Ross, general manager of the United Farmers' Creameries, Toronto; Mr. Geo. H. Barr, instructor of dairying for the Province; Prof. A. L. Dillman of the Ontario Agricultural School, Kingston; Mr. Mark McIlveen, proprietor of the Kingston Creamery; Mr. Wm. Richardson, of the Belleville Creameries Mr. Thos. Mallett, president of the Quinte Buttermakers' Association; Mr. John H. Scott, chief creamery instructor for the province of Ontario, Mr. W. J. Morrison of the Ontario Agricultural College, Mr. R. V. Illsley, manager of the local branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, and others.

Banquet By Moose Ladies

Ladies of the local Order of the Moose provided the banquet to which ample justice was paid. As chairman of the evening, Mr. J. H. Ross paid tribute to the efforts of the individual members present, and warned also against Ultra Hefia, which at present declared were mitigating against the proper sale and production of that valuable commodity, butter. "Watch the texture of your make," Make it sure, that you follow the regulations as laid down by the government, while making and be sure and stamp your boxes properly", warned Mr. Ross, who spoke with the authority of experience.

R. V. Illsey, following his introduction by the chairman, reiterated his desire to assist in any manner possible the dairying industry in this section of the province. "Bankers, after all have the welfare of the industry at heart, it means not only their bread and butter, but prosperity of the country as a whole to have the dairy farmer in a position, where he is able to realize some profit from the work to which he devotes himself. Twenty-five years ago, when I first came to this city I promised that and I have never forgotten the lesson."

"It has been gratifying to see the conditions of the last several weeks in the industry, with higher prices being paid for the province and it has put heart and confidence in those, who are related to it. I look for increased production and the recapturing of the interest of the markets abroad with such impetus as that which has been given".

"Business is human," declared Mr. Illsey. "They strive to assist wherever and wherever possible. We have always tried to do what we could to keep the cost of production down and the quality up. We are humanly anxious to be as useful as we can; our aim and effort is directed toward the producer to assist him."

Review - Presented

During the brief intermissions between addresses, one of the most sparkling revues seen locally was that introduced by Mr. George of the local School for the Deaf, pianist and instructor, who was assisted in the colorful offerings by children of the school under his tuition. Partially deaf or totally deaf the harmonic vibrations of the piano through the boards of the stage, the many scholars proceeded through their rhythmic exercises with the facility and grace of normally equipped and experienced performers. Schottische dances, sword dances, rhythmic drills and various other entertainments were provided. Miss Keister also assisted in presenting the revue.

Mr. Geo. H. Barr, director of dairying for the province in a brief address contrasted conditions of the present day with those of fifty years ago, when power separators were practically unknown and teaching of the arts of dairying carried on in kit and nine fashion.

"One of the first jobs I was called upon to do was to clean up the factory, where I was appointed, and where, by the way, I paid two dollars a day to learn. Reading a bucket I grabbed the first one, finished what I thought was the dirty water out of it—and then found out that I had thrown a perfectly good pail of rather away down the sewer."

"There have been a good many changes since those days. I have watched particularly the cheesemakers and the buttermakers' power association. At all the time. Cheesemakers through the formation of their association have advance more in the past fifteen years than they had in the past twenty-five. I'll tip my to the buttermakers now to do likewise. During the year, six years of the existence of this club alone I have watched and seen great progress in the ranks of your men."

"Perhaps", continued Mr. Barr, "we have never put in more discouraging years than the last four. But the past year has been a good year — it has been all to the good and the farmers of the country have benefited enlisted on the industry". The creamery men, too should share in the credit.

Cheese Scores High

"We are very pleased with the cheese industry and during the past year or so scores of as high as 98 have been not uncommon. We have been making more high scoring cheese during the past year than we have ever made before. Ten years ago, a man, who scored more than 92 was a good man; now if he doesn't score more than that he is just rated a fair."

"If the buttermakers of this province would get as much effort into their work and try to get as high scores in the province of this province, then they would be on top of the heap; just remember, there is room at the top province, and in this region, make just as many cheese as they make any place in the world if we only try."

"To improve the quality you can concentrate your efforts on quantity instead of volume. When buttermen have an average of 94 score as well as the cheesemakers are, then quality will improve, and if quality improves, then the product will be in demand. Grade all your cream, and grade it right. Be careful, according to regulations, then you will be rewarded at the end of the year when the cheesemakers and the buttermakers will get together, for their common good."

Inspector Heard

Mr. John H. Scott, chief creamery inspector of the province, referred to the progress made during the past few years in the dairy industry and called upon members of the association to recognize what the Dairy Farmers had done for the industry as a whole was. Back of confidence on the part of consumers.

"In up your association with the [illegible] farmers of your district. Host meetings and all you can to induce the boys of today will be the makers of tomorrow. Give them a good ground-ing in the fundamentals of the industry; help them all you can. That is about the best advice I can offer you" declared Mr. Scott.

Following the address a minute's silence was observed by members present in honor of the late Herbert Finkle of the Trenton Dairy who died this year.

Officers of the Bay of Quinte are: president, Thos. V. Mallette; first vice president, Geo. Cook; second vice president and vice president of the Prescott Club, W. Osmond; secretary treasurer, Fred McGuin. The presentation of prizes made during the evening will be found elsewhere in this issue.

PICTON

Picton, Oct. 28—On Friday afternoon, when the rooms of Picton Public School were open for inspection, in order that those interested might view the new addition to the Mary Street School, one realized that methods in teaching change different from years ago, and to make education much more attractive for children.

On entering first the splendid lighting of the new rooms, the width of the floor space, and the lavatories in the basement. Each new room has its own cloakroom, and room for supplies. The teacher welcomed visitors to the room, and explained teaching methods. The manual training room is well equipped with an adjustable bench, band saw and turning lathe besides the necessary equipment for such a pupil. The household science room has a range with all fixtures, and arranged cupboards, tables, sink and kitchen cabinet. It looked very tidy when the visitors saw it.

The sand tables in the junior rooms were very interesting. They represented a complete circus with almost every detail of a parade. In another room was a miniature garage, with proper vehicles and real looking motors. History, geography and hygiene note books in the junior classes told of the lessons in pictures. Children love colors, so the story of Joseph, had drawn Joseph, his brethren, a granary and other accidents in the story. In one room the pupils were graded from "Primer" to reading. A chart on the front of the room held the cards with the pupils' names, for the first eight reading grades. As a pupil improved his card was changed to a higher grade and others saw the record of his improvement. For the first time there is a "promotion class" in the school. This is in charge of Miss Clara Hill, a teacher with a long and successful record. Here the seventeen pupils sit in chairs at oak tables. Their project is the miniature size of the class. Pupils who have got away behind in the regular classes and who are discouraged are given special help in this room. Many have graduated even in the past two months have made some gratifying progress. Picton one saw such excellent art, and writing, and composition, from these little lessons. One came away with a feeling of pride in Picton's public schools, every facility seemed to be provided to prepare young people for a life of work and play.

On Saturday morning, the funeral service for Miss Thomas (Dee) McIlroy, whose death occurred in Toronto on Thursday, October 24th, was largely attended in St. Gregory's church. The deceased Miss McIlroy had been a resident her entire life in Picton, going a few years ago to make her home with Toronto Accompanying the body to Picton, were her brother Joseph and sister, Irene Goodwin, and Mrs. James Burke, Interment was made in Glenwood Cemetery.

The death occurred at his home in Picton Township, on Thursday, October 24th, of Philip Osborne, in his seventy-ninth year. The deceased had been a blacksmith in Picton and retired a few years ago. He is survived by his wife, who before her marriage was a Miss Hickey. The funeral service was held at his late residence, Cherry Valley Road, on Saturday afternoon, with interment in Glenwood cemetery.

On Thursday evening, a number of Picton and Wapous friends of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Robinson, gathered at the home of Mr. Carman Metcalf, Black Creek and surprised them in a pleasant manner. The evening was pleasantly spent with cards and music and the recent bride and groom were presented with lovely gifts of linen, china and aluminum kitchenware. The party served a delicious lunch at midnight, bringing a jolly evening to a close.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hamblin of Norwood were holiday guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wynne Welsh.

New Map of Canada

The Topographical and Air Survey Bureau, Department of the Interior, Ottawa, has just issued a new map of Canada, on the scale of 100 miles to one inch which will be found of interest to all those persons who have use for a small scale map of the Dominion.

The best map of Canada printed by the Department of the Interior is published on the scale of 35 miles to one inch in four parts or sheets which, when joined together, cover a space about 11-2 feet by 2 1-2 feet, making an excellent wall map if one has so much space available. There is another map of intermediate size on the scale of 60 miles to the inch about twice the dimensions for desk use or so it's said will map. The new map has been produced to meet the demand for a smaller map of handy size, useful for general reference purposes. It is 18 inches by 36 inches and fits into any large size drawer or can be hung on the wall. This map shows all of Canada and parts of Alaska, Greenland, including all but some of the northern islands. All the larger physical features, such as lakes, rivers, bays, and islands, are depicted in correct position. The boundaries of the provinces and districts are outlined. All cities and towns are shown and all the railways are drawn in, but without the intermediate small stations being named. The latitude and longitude lines are drawn and from them one may be sure that southern Ontario lies in the same latitude as Boston, while the southern most tip of the Ontario peninsula is as far south as the northern end of the state of Maine.

Canada has some great river systems, the Mackenzie being over 1500 miles in length from its mouth to its headwaters, and the St. Lawrence 1,900 miles. Other great rivers over 1000 miles in length include the Nelson, Saskatchewan, Churchill, Columbia, Peace and Yukon.

Mount Logan is the highest mountain in Canada, with an altitude of 19,850 feet. In addition to it there are sixty-six other mountain peaks above 11,000 feet in height.

Copies of this map may be obtained from the Surveyor General, Department of the Interior, Ottawa, for twenty-five cents per copy. As it is a useful school map, one hopes that a supplied free to any school for official use, upon application of the teacher or school Board.

HILLIER 3RD.

Third Hillier—Mrs. Charlie Bertram was pleasantly surprised by her mother Mrs. McConnell of Wellington, who has been very ill.

Mrs. Ed. Ketcham is making the best of the lovely weather digging potatoes and sweet of the Ellers' club rooms and go out of business. Chided for this mis-demeanor Dr. Clark at the time said a paper never admitted being mistaken, but he had. He mentioned not in a notice saying that the club had changed its name and been vindicated as a going concern.

When Britain Trembled

In incident at a banquet in Belleville a number of years ago when Mr. Morden, K.C., made the "best" banquet, according to the customs in those days, and spoke a very flowery and oratorical. One speaker rising to great heights in supporting the toast said that the Empire cited Napoleon with his 1,000 ships of war marching on conquering all Europe and menacing the entire civilized world with the threat of a military dictatorship—WHEN ENGLAND TREMBLED said the speaker. Up sprang one of the guests a sturdy Englishman, agent for one of the trans-oceanic steamship lines—"THAT'S A LIE HERE LAND NEVER TREMBLED!", yelled the astonished Englishman. The speaker fought hard to get back to his speech in decency and order, but the excitement had caught the crowd which now divided and for the rest of the evening debated heatedly and sometimes very mostly as the invigorating brew went round and round. Mr. Morden himself even trembled at the approach of Napoleon. One speech was spoiled, but those present never forgot the diversion and had many a laugh over it.

New Purchase Papers

Changes in transportation and their effect upon railroads; the coming and development of motor car traffic—changes in industry and the standard of living with these effect and probable effect upon the future were discussed by the speaker. The press of Canada, once strongly partisan with papers representing each side of politics had changed, only ten per cent of the newspapers now being owned by political parties who had discarded sentiment for business. The press was also the mirror of the story. He mentioned Sir John Willison's paper of the Toronto Globe, leaving that paper and saying that he "was tired being the hired man of the Globe and wanted to be where he could just be himself" being his explanation. Formerly the political press used to get a little "pap" but now often it was starved and fed only with premiums and never came true, especially when the party was in opposition, a long sterile period for the opposition newspaper.

When Beth Lie

The Conservative farmer who lived on Foxboro Mail, was described. When he advanced in years he began to take the Globe. This was remarked by a neighbor who he extended to say, saying, "When I read something in the Mail which seems of doubtful accuracy I look it up in the Globe and know it is a lie."

Canada's financial position was briefly touched upon by the speaker as that the economic problem at home and abroad as touching this country. The relations between Canada would have to produce more than a favorable balance here on account of the fact that foreign markets were becoming restricted—as reports of industrial imports now similarly diminish, and Canada must increase industrial manufacturing.

Threat of Taxation

Taxes, constantly increasing and becoming a menace to the national life, were discussed by the speaker, who said that the only thing that will cut it up. Let us rather put our money in the ground. Here is the principal.

The changed relation of agriculture and industry in Canada with the former predominance of agriculture, Mr. Morden, and the effect. At the Century of Progress Exposition and the Canadian Pacific Railway as the chief agent of the country.

Guest of Rotary Indicates Vast Changes in Life in Question of Century

Belleville today and twenty-five years ago were contrasted in an interesting and witty address delivered before the members of the Belleville Rotary Club Monday at the Hotel Quinte by W. S. Morden, K.C., of Toronto, a former resident of the city, Mr. Morden is the vice president of the Chartered Trust Company of Toronto and President of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, besides being identified with various large and important Canadian organizations.

Twenty-five years ago, said Mr. Morden, he could walk along Belle, wide streets and the faces were all familiar and friendly. Today he can walk from one end of Front street to the other without meeting a familiar face. Many changes have taken place in the twenty-five years since he left Belleville.

A notable change in Belleville was revealed by the recent federal election. All the candidates in this riding were members of the Rotary Club and sat down at club meetings in perfect amity. Twenty-five years ago that would not have been deemed possible as party feeling was high. People have a more open mind now and their political allegiance is not such that is can not be changed on occasion, as must have the case in the recent election in many ridings.

"Depression" Days

Reference to the local press of twenty-five years ago by the speaker brought out several amusing incidents. The press of that day was largely partisan with no quarter given or asked. A redistribution bill was "gerrymandered" as it was derisively called was brought down in the House of Commons which stirred up Mr. Northrup's riding of East Hastings. This gave the Grits much hope and pleasure but by what means Mr. Northrup was able to get his riding restored before the bill was passed, and this gave rise to weeping and lamentations in the Grit camp, and a discouragement which led the party paper to say that a meeting had been held and the decision reached to sell the pool

Chided for this mis-demeanor Dr. Clark at the time said a paper never admitted being mistaken, but he had. He mentioned not in a notice saying that the club had changed its name and been vindicated as a going concern.

Thus, the development of recent years, the settlement of the population of the United States were engaged in industrial employment, with thirty million in agriculture. A similar condition, in proportion, is developing in Canada.

Mr. Morden's brief review of the national and international economic situation was very interesting and opened long vistas which called for study. Appreciation for his very interesting and helpful address was also expressed by Roberton K. V. Ilsley, a friend of the speaker of Rotarian Ross Ketcham, and Rotarian Burt Rogers. Mr. Morden was introduced by Rotarian Dr. Ketcham, a former friend of Deseronto days.

Weddings

YOUNG—FRASER

Oshawa.—A pretty Thanksgiving Day wedding was solemnized at 1.30 o'clock in St. Mary's Anglican Church by Rev. D. M. Rose, when Gladstone Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Fraser, 57 Annie Street, became the bride of Albert Phillip Young of Oshawa, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Young of Belleville. The wedding was particularly effective with the bridal costumes and decorations all carried out in black and white color scheme, with touches of yellow.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, who gave her in marriage, was unattended by her bridesmaid, Miss Clive Fraser, sister of the bride, while the strains of the wedding music played by the organist, Mr. W. Gouldburn.

Lovely in a long white velvet gown, the bride wore a veil and wore cap fashion and caught with orange blossoms and carried a sheaf of white asters.

Carrying out the black and white color scheme, the bridesmaid wore a long black velvet gown, and an all-black hat of velvet and she carried a sheaf of white chrysanthemums.

Garland Daniels of Oshawa was groomsman, and Mr. Stanley Fraser, brother of the bride, was usher.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the guests were received by the parents of the bride, assisted by the bridal party. Mrs. Fraser chose a becoming gown of black satin trimmed with lace, and wore a corsage of white chrysanthemums. Mrs. Young was in black crepe with white accessories and wore a corsage of mauve chrysanthemums.

The rooms were decorated with orange and black streamers and the bride's table was effective with a three tier wedding cake, which was topped with a miniature bride and groom and while "mums and black and white" were added to the beauty of the table. A wedding luncheon was served by five friends of the bride, Dorothy Cook, Dorothy Mae Merritt, Dorothy Campbell, Phyllis Campbell and Ruth Hall.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Young left on a motor trip to Niagara Falls and other points, the bride travelling in a black crepe dress, trimmed with white fox, with black hat and black accessories, the bride's going away costume was of brown.

Upon their return they will reside at Oshawa.

Among those present were guests from Port Perry, Belleville, and Toronto.

DELANTY—CLEARY

Cobourg, Ont., Oct. 26—(CP)—St. Michael's Church in Grafton was the scene of a very charming wedding this morning, when Catherine Cleary of Grafton, became the bride of Joseph Delanty, son of Patrick Delanty and the late Mrs. Delanty. The ceremony was performed by Father Beauty, of Cobourg, who was best man and the bride was given away by Patrick Cleary, her sister.

Rev. Father Galvin performed the ceremony and the soloist was the groom's brother, Alfred, of Rochester.

Compton Mackenzie writes with his customary flair of Sir Walter Raleigh and brings to life Charles Stuart, the Pretender, and other heroes in his book, "Prince Charlie and His Ladies". The story of the Young Pretender, grandson of James II as related by Mr. Mackenzie, throws new light on his relationship and corrects many apprehensions. While writing primarily as a scholar he who compiles his material only after exhaustive research, the author does not hesitate to favor the dethroned Stuarts and the anti-Hanoverian side of decision. Interwoven with the story of the lost cause are the stories of the various women who influenced the life and character of "Bonnie Prince Charlie", his mother, his friends, his wife, and his daughter. Margaret Wallace writing of this book, in the New York Times, says, "Mr. Mackenzie lakes sides violently and forces his readers to do so. But there is no denying that it makes lively reading and that a good deal of modern historical writing might be better for a dash of Mr. Mackenzie's enthusiasm."

"The Tragedy of Henry Thornton" by D'Arcy Marsh is an effort to prevent the tragedy of Canada which dimmed the reputation and broke the heart of Henry Thornton. The author, prominent in Canadian affairs, in Montreal, Toronto, Alberta and Ontario was formerly assistant editor of The Canadian Forum, contributor to that magazine articles on a number of Dominion Day broadcasts parts in the story of the railway magnate. Mr. Marsh has depicted Sir Henry Thornton as a man in whom weakness and strength, opportunism and goodwill were commingled — "a great man who in the end was defiled but not disheartened."

R. V. Morton has mixed romance and reality in the picture of Old and New England presented in his book "The Call of England". This book, the opening volume "In Search of England" is a record of a motor holiday in Spring. The author volumes differs in that it was published entirely to present towns, cathedral cities and the beauty of the country side, mainly in the south and west. "The Call of England" introduces the reader to the spirit of England, which has been symbolized too often by the ostrich-like attitude of author, conqueror of the British Isles, content with oppression by his description of a wild and romantic countryside including the beauty of the south.—K.G.

The Young Mother
Has her health problems
Happy and fortunate is the bride
Who enters married life
In full health and vigor of mind and body.
Perhaps the importance of robust health
At the time of marriage is sometimes overlooked.
But the cares and worries of the household
And the tremendous strain of baby's coming
Demand an abundance of rich, red blood
And a healthy, buoyant nervous system.
Modern life and present financial stringencies
Tend to make the life of the woman in the home
More difficult and more nerve racking.
Dr. Chase's Nerve Food can be of very great benefit to you.
Both before and after baby's coming.
By restoring health of body and mind
It will save you from the irritabilities
Which tend to destroy the happiness of the home.
It will restore hope and confidence
At a time when ill health lets you see only the dark side of things.

JUST BURNING OFF FIELD DRIED CLOVER

Burning off a field of dried clover on the farm of Sid Bird, third concession of Thurlow, was the cause of considerable excitement north of Belleville on Monday afternoon, but no loss and even citizens residing in Belleville observed a reddened sky and hastened to the scene of what appeared to be a grass fire. Actually the roarer and the flames soared high but there was no danger from fire around. Anxious persons, upon their arrival at the scene of the blaze, found that Mr. Bird had chosen a particular damage being wrought, for a field of dried red clover was being burned off so that Mr. Bird could prepare the land in the way the field of hay was lighted at night against the cool dew gathering. The blaze attracted hundreds of curious onlookers, however.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Oct. 29 (AP)—It was a hit-and-miss stock market again today with a little more emphasis on the miss side.

Some eyes kept a wake fraction among Canadian stocks while McIntyre, International Nickel and Canadian Pacific rallied about a point. On the Curb Lake Shore, Hiram Walker and Distillers Corp.-Seagrams were narrow. Dominion Coal, common, bonds were steady and Canadian Funds held unchanged at 96 31-32 cents.

Among shares that got up 1 to around 7 points were American Agricultural Chemical, Chrysler, Westinghouse, and Crown Cork. The rails on the whole slipped a shade in either direction as did most of the steels, coppers, oils and utilities. Paramount First preferred had a recession of 3 points or so. Declines of fractions to 2 were registered by Chrysler, General Motors, Studebaker, Allied Chemical, Johns-Manville, American Sugar Refining, Case and American Can.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Oct. 29 (CP)—Lower metal prices, including the London gold quotations, had a dulling effect on the mining department today and, with a few exceptions, stocks changed hands in small volume. Silver issues came into notice in the early afternoon and showed some strength, particularly in Eldorado and Castle. Eldorado traded in heavy volume for a period.

Trading was spotty in the secondary group with prices ranging over the down side by a few cents each. In the senior group McIntyre sold at 35 1-2, off a half point.

Base metals were in lighter demand and a slight recession were noted. Big Missouri weakened 3 cents to 66.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 30.—(CP)— Trading dried up in the Industrial section today, but the senior issues had recovered part of the morning losses. Volume appeared mainly in the oils and golds and these groups displayed a mixture of narrow losses and gains.

Walker's Commun at 29 and Distillers-Seagrams at 39 1-4 were within 1-8 of the previous closing level and in the oils, International Petroleum was the strongest feature, the minimum fraction each. The Big Metals, International Nickel and Consolidated Smelters were unchanged to slightly lower. Love losses than gains were boarded for the Utility and Bank Stocks.

BELIEF CAR SEEN IS BANDIT CAR

Provincial Police today are scouring the district north of Belleville, in search of robbers who broke and entered the general store of E. J. Blanchard, Elizabethville, 12 miles north of Port Hope, and stole over $1,000.00 in cash last night. Early today the police received a report of two suspected of the robbery were riding, driving in Reid's garage at Wooler, procured ten gallons of gasoline and speeded away without paying for it. The car was later described as being a DeSoto sedan bearing 1935 Ontario license number LJ—386, which were issued as Perry Zavitz.

Later the robber-car was hailed by Constable Sweetman as it speeded through the village of Roseneath at 8.30 a.m. today, headed eastward. Last night Constable Sweetman was on at break-neck speed north towards Brighton but apparently police appeared later as the car could not follow accused that entire section of the countryside is without gasoline. Police are of the firm opinion, that the car seen at Wooler was the same used in the flight from the Elizabethville robbery.

According to Provincial Constable Smith, who investigated the Elizabethville robbery, entrance was gained entrance to Mr. Blanchard's general store at the rear of the building in a brean drawer. Mr. Blanchard is also connected with the manufacture of cheese, this being the reason for his having so much cash on hand. No noise was heard by the occupants of the Blanchard home during the robbery, quietly did the burglars operate. The robbery was not discovered until this morning.

Livestock

Toronto, Oct. 29 (CP)—Under a supply of 2,300 holdovers and little of anything else, trading in the cattle division of the Toronto Livestock Market opened in dull trading on grades today with prices generally unchanged. Calves, sheep and lambs were firm and unchanged while hogs, as usual, were unsettled.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 1,140; calves 270, hogs 516, sheep and lambs 1,020.

A few butcher steers and heifers sold at $3.50 to $3.60 cwt. while butcher cows brought $2.90 to $3.00 and bulls $2.50 to $3.00. Stockers moved slowly at $2.50 to $4.00.

The calf division held steady at $8.50 to $9 for choice vealers and all $4.50 to $8.50 for heavy weights.

Lambs opened steady, good ewes and wethers bringing $7 to $7.25 and choice lambs $8.50 to $8.75. Heavy light sheep made $3 to $4 cwt.; with culls at $1.

ROUGHRIDERS OF REGINA IN A TOUGH SPOT

Take on Winnipeg on Saturday in Crucial Game

WINNER COMES EAST

Winnipeg Team Holds a Win Over Dominion Champs

Regina, Oct. 28 (CP)—Only slightly overplayed, as that is the unprecedented verse of football, enthusiasm that swept the West this fall with Winnipeg's rise to power, Regina Roughriders go to the Manitoba capital Saturday suffering from no inferiority complex.

Led by Al Ritchie, fighting little coach of a down-for-the-count Regina teams of other years, the Roughriders expect to flatten Winnipegs in what is likely to be the greatest gridiron struggle ever carded in the West. The prairies have had stormy football forces before but never two as strong as these.

The word is prevalent, that Ritchie's men may prove to be the surprise package of the year, that they might overcome the machine that downed Sarnia Imperials, 1934 Canadian champions, in a game last September. If so again, the winner of this battle is expected to represent the West in the Canadian final.

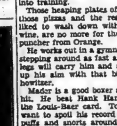
A top-flight strategist, Ritchie has seasoned his veterans with a sprinkling of trades and recruits from United States. Eight Americans are on hand, all but one of them sent to bring Regina its 19th Western title in 23 years.

Strong Backfield

The tip-off appears to lie in the husky and efficient of a backfield built around Weller (Okey) Olson, 185-pound pass-catching quarterback and the elusive Ralph Pearce, former University of South Dakota star. Nick Lorentzen, Regina's other Roughriders were beaten by Sarnia Imperials in the championship final.

Paul Kirk, halfback from Minnesota University and Andy Young, a plunging fullback from South Dakota, division men from last year's squad. Newcomers included Bob Gantert, Minneapolis plunger; "Chappie" O'Connor from North Dakota, a speed charge ball-carrying and passing work with Pearce; "Moose Skinner, Regina junior hockey star; Paul Patrick and Cap Cosgrove, also homebreds.

Flagline Models



Pearce, a 10-second sprinter in his college days, established himself as one of the country's best backfield runners during the 1934 international game in Toronto and Olson also has himself a high rating in that contest. Ritchie feels his backfield is as strong as it needs to be.

Abe Miller, former Ottawa Junior and Lloyd Randall, a newcomer from Minneapolis, handle flying wing. Ritchie considers the youthful Miller without a peer as a pass receiver and the Ottawa boy has distinguished himself in his second line tackling.

There seems to be nothing wrong with the wingline. It held up in September, when the Roughriders bowed by 1c to Winnipeg in the only team and it has steadily improved. Four huskies—Bob Walker, Elmer Lorentzen, Larry Hagan and Johnny Gallak—played with Roughriders last year. Walker is from South Dakota U. and Lorentzen from Washington State.

Ritchie Optimistic

Not only did the promoters procure a top-notch bout for the big attraction, but in the semi-final they signed Dan Petroff, the Russian Lion, to meet Joe Kaiser, of the Winnipeg heavy. Petroff recently held Chief Lynx to a draw and should prove a worthy opponent for the muscular Kaiserack. The opening bout is a return go between Mike Andero and Irish Steve Taylor of Belleville. Doubtlessly the greatest card ever staged locally.

CHIEF LYNX

Owing to his defeat at the hands of Al "Bunny" Dunlop last week, Chief Lynx, the Kanna Kaw Indian mat-villain, has been demoted to semi-final ranks in Belleville wrestling circles and will meet Joe Katelnach in the semi-final bout of Thursday night's all-star wrestling show at the arena. Originally Dan Petroff was to have met Katelnach but owing to a previous engagement Petroff was unable to appear locally. The main bout brings together John Nolan, Canada's foremost wrestling villain, and "Bunny" Dunlop. This is the feature show of the season. Spectators visited today.

Spend $500,000 To Enlarge Field

By Earl J. Milligan, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Detroit, Oct. 29 (AP)—Those pork chs Detroit Tigers will spend $500,000 today at the wolf, that sauntered around during the World Series.

Mr. Wolf didn't have a chance to prowl around the Tiger den during the regular season. Attendance which surged past the million mark made the turnstiles click so fast and the money bags fatten so naturally the noise kept him away. But when that World Series, and the wolf, sniffing the thousands of dollars in expressed which will be hom Tigers knew, came padding around the bengal bailiwick.

Not when he got near the nose inside the door at Navin Field today, he took it on the lam, rouled by a crash of concrete as workmen began wrecking operations which started expenditure by the Detroit club of a cool half million dollars to pep up business hereabouts next year.

Charles J. Navin, club secretary, said today that the Detroit club didn't even break even on the last fall classic. Without digging the receipts and expenditures records out of the vault, Navin further said even had the Chicago-Tiger battle been a seventh game, the Detroit club would not have climbed out of "the red" on the series proper.

EDMONTON GRADS HAVE NEW COACH

Percy Page Retires as Does High Scoring Centre

Edmonton, Oct. 28.—(CP)—Edmonton Grads, destroyers of feminine hopes in the basketball world for the past 13 years, today celebrated another victory but with the passing of two of the old guard.

Grads defeated the American Indian quintet 45-24 but Percy Page here last night, marking the third straight victory for the veteran coach of five series for the International basketball classic, while the triumph was tempered with the knowledge Percy Page would retire from court play. Margaret McBurney would be with the squad next year.

While Page is retiring from the coaching position he will continue as manager, assisted by Arnold Henderson, trained by Page, will be the new coach.

Miss MacBurney has been with the Grads for three seasons. She was a member of the famed front line of MacBurney, Fry and Hennessy that has been one of the highest scorers of the team.

Spaghetti, Wine Principal Items For Pudgy Boxer

New York, Oct. 29 (AP)—Tony Galento, New Jersey fat boy with a yen for a fat living, has found one item in training.

Tony has been a fighter for some time. Many an ambitious boxer has encountered the jolt that rides with Galento's right fist.

He weighs in the neighborhood of 240 pounds and is described as solid as he is tall. His method of fighting highly successful, consists of walking in with his left hand swinging like a fence gate and driving in his right when opportunity knocks.

If it lands, the fight is over. If it misses, Tony keeps on walking until he makes a connection.

What the chubby boy does on the training table, however, does not immediately fit Tony has a fine disregard for being slugged on his open midsection as a peaceful opponent for Joe Louis. Next Friday night he meets Eddie Simms in the semi-final of the Primo Carnera-Walter Cobb battle and it took a telegram from his manager he agreed to go into training.

Those heaping plates of spaghetti, those pizzas and the rest that he lifted by wash down with gallons of wine, are no more for the roly-poly punisher from Orange.

He works out in a gymnasium, too, stepping around as fast as his short legs will carry him and throwing up his aim with that big portable howitzer.

Mader is a good boxer and he can hit. He beat Hank Hankinson on the Louis-Baer card. Tony doesn't want to spoil his record and so he puffs and snorts around the gymnasium, wishing the fight was over so he could rush to the table for heaping plates and heavy tankards.

EXPERTS EXPECT PUZZLE TO NAME ALL-STAR TEAM

Practically Every Team Has Outstanding Man in Position

MANY HALFBACKS

Secondary Defence Men And Passers Are in Profusion

By ELMER DULMAGE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Oct. 29.—(CP)— When final annual parade-form of football, the all-eastern selection sheet, is turned over in a few weeks to sports writers and many experts figure there will be more head-scratching and pencil-chewing than the grid-iron ever caused before in Canada.

The difficulty won't be lacking of outstanding, top-notch football players.

There will be no difficulty finding a sensational backing-up candidate for every position.

The trouble will be eliminating a half-dozen other candidates for every job, who are every bit as good.

Never has eastern football shown as great a galaxy of stars in one season. The big parade-form of football, the all-eastern selection sheet, is turned over in a few weeks to sports writers and many experts figure there will be more head-scratching and pencil-chewing than the grid-iron ever caused before in Canada.

There will be no difficulty finding a sensational backing-up candidate for every position.

The trouble will be eliminating a half-dozen other candidates for every job, who are every bit as good.

Never has eastern football shown as great a galaxy of stars in one season. The big parade-form of football, with halfbacks—running, kicking, plunging, passing specialists, who from Saturday to Saturday hold the spotlight and refuse to turn in a poor performance.

Pity the experts who must name only four quarter-backs to all-star teams and ignore another dozen with such brilliant claims for recognition, that they can't very well be ignored. The situation at quarter-back and halfback is such that it will be the toss of a coin who will be the lucky ones involved.

The 1934 all-eastern half line comprised Abe Eliowitz of Ottawa, Hugh Gerrity and Norman Perry of Sarnia, Imperials and Frank Turnbull of Hamilton. Injuries have eliminated the dashing Gerrity from 1935 consideration and halted Turnbull in the midst of another great season with the Tigers.

So there will be two spots vacant to start with. Eliowitz and Gerrity are just as effective as in 1934. Big Abe has shouldered much of the heavy attacking work on the Roughrider backfield and leads all point-scorers in the east. Stirling remains the peer of Canadian punters.

Every Team Has Those

Nearly every team in sight has halfbacks deserving of all-star ranking. Look at these ball-carriers: Rocky Parsaca and Ormond Beach of Sarnia; Ed Upper and Bobby Boucher of Balmy Beach; Johnny Munro and Orrly King of Queen's; Joe Krol, Toronto Argonauts; Mike Colote and Bob Webber of Toronto Varsity; Gerry Aston of McGill.

Look what the Big Four alone can show in ball-carrying power: Ted Reeve, Toronto Argonauts; Fred Kirk of Argos; Johnny Ferraro of Hamilton; Fal Ryan and Lucio Mathieu of Montreal; Eliowitz and Stan O'Dell of Ottawa Roughriders.

Among the standout kickers are Stirling, Belkirk, Ab Box of Balmy Beach; Buck Welch of Hamilton, Bob Isbister and Gray of Varsity, Munro of Queen's, Herb Wedgman of McGill, Doug Sinales of Western, Mc. Angus and Blewitz. A kicker will have to be able to do lot more than punt to get all-star calling this fall.

Secondary Giants

The secondary defence giants are led by the mighty Beach of Sarnia, one of the greatest tacklers ever to play in Canada. But there are others, such as the brilliant Morris, Harry Scanlon of Queen's, Gordie Paterson of Sarnia, Johnny Agnew of Hamilton and Tuffy Griffiths of Argos.

Ranking quarterbacks include Bobby Cuthbert of Toronto's Intercollegiate leaders, as fine a ball-carrier as any halfback; Andy Mullan of Argos, Box of Beaches, Wilf Patterson of Tigers, Charlie Bye of Western, Arnie McWatters of Sarnia.

If the experts seek forward-passing excellence they won't overlook Hughie Marks of Varsity the ball-throwing Parsaca of Sarnia, Ferraro of Tigers or any one of a half-dozen others who have shown dazzling prowess. Marks, former Rochester, N.Y. schoolboy, is generally credited with being the best of the passers.

By the time the selectors get this backfield straightened out to their own satisfaction, the wingback situation will look just as formidable, and so it is. There is scarcely a wobbling front-line anywhere in sight.

CANADIAN BOXER HANGED IN ENG.

Raymond Bousquet Pays Supreme Penalty For Murder of Young Waitress

London, Oct. 29 (CP)—Raymond Henry Bousquet, Winnipeg boxer known in the prize ring as Del Fontaine, was hanged today for the murder of Hilda Meeks while opponents of capital punishment demonstrated outside Wandsworth prison.

As Bousquet went to his death within the prison walls twenty men, employed by Mrs. J. Van Der Elst, walked up and down the streets with placards denouncing the death penalty and with a sound truck played hymns. Mrs. Van Der Elst is the leader in a movement which frequently makes such demonstrations.

Home Secretary Sir John Simon yesterday rejected an appeal for a reprieve from the National Union of Boxers Managers of the Union executive they knew before Bousquet killed his sweetheart he behaved abnormally owing to a condition of "punch drunkenness".

Bousquet was convicted of murdering Miss Meeks, 21-year-old waitress, July 26. The girl's mother was shot and seriously wounded at the time.

The light-heavyweight formerly lived in Winnipeg. In 1927 he won the Dominion middleweight title from Harry Henning of Toronto.

Raymond Bousquet or Del Fontaine, was born in a French settlement a few miles from Winnipeg.

In 1927 he won the Dominion middleweight title from Harry Henning, Toronto. He made occasional appearances in Canadian rings he has deprived of his title. He made his last appearance at Winnipeg three years ago in a matched bout with Al Conquest, Kansas, Negro.

Shortly after this fight Bousquet, with his manager, William Black left for England. His mother and father reside at St. Boniface, near Winnipeg. Two brothers and three sisters also make their home in that city. His wife and three children live at Winnipeg.

Since leaving the amateur ranks in 1923 Bousquet was matched several times with Mickey Walker when the "toy bulldog" was in his prime Walcott Langford, a nephew of the famous Sam Langford, was one of his victims.

ARGONAUTS SCORE SIXTH STRAIGHT, BEATING W HEELERS 12-12

Toronto Argonauts virtually clinched the Interprovincial Rugby Union championship when they recorded their sixth win against no defeats at the expense of Montreal Winged Wheelers, 18 to 12. At the left Argo tacklers are seen pulling down a Montreal ball-carrier when he attempted to break away from the sitting Scuffler line. He was grounded and lost possession. The major score, standing up.

Dist Argo touchdown came when Tony Rosse, crack halfback import, took a lateral from Morris and tore around the right end. He is shown at right crossing the line with the ball.

DAY BY DAY

On Saturday we had a distinguished fighter of yester-year call at the sports department in the person of Frenchy Bellanger, former world's flyweight bantam champion. Bellanger, after a rapid rise in the ranks of fistiedom, forty years ago, experienced just as rapid a decline and soon was glad to retire, but not showing his ability to fight back he procured a job in one of Northern Ontario's relief camps and has labored there for the past 18 months. Now he's back in the city for a championship, the other day and he headed homeward towards Toronto. I see by the newspapers that the fight game is coming back once again in Ontario and I thought maybe I might get a job training some of the younger boys if I returned to the city," explained Bellanger. "By the way Belleville is fast coming to the front in the boxing world, ain't it?" quizzed Frenchy. Upon receiving an answer in the affirmative Mr. Bellanger became quite interested and wanted to know what chance there might be to get a job and train the local mitters. A man with the knowledge and coaxing that Bellanger once possessed should prove a valued ticket to such local scrappers as Mark Storms, Howard Wheeler, Ernie Hayes and other Belleville mitsters, who are willing to train faithfully and have plenty of ability to make it while in the squared circle. Bellanger was still in the city yesterday and I hope he soon connected with interested fight promoters. He should open a good boxing school and make a go of it.

All sport avenues lead to the Belleville Arena this evening where six grunt-and-groan artists will provide the semi-final sess Fred Chartrand and Ken Faux tangle. Although these amateur kids may not be as proficient as the pros, at least they are willing to mix it.

Local professional wrestling fans have been hard to suit of late promoters why they cannot see different faces in a local ring. We are sick and tired of seeing the same old mugs week after week," is their cry. For the general information of the fans we dug down into the files and counted the number of times they appear in a local ring since October 1, 1934. To be exact, there have been 45 different pro. wrestlers appear in a local ring during the past year. We could publish the list of names to prove our statement, but to do so would take too much space. When it is taken into consideration that bouts are not staged in the winter or summer months, it comes like a fairly good variation for the space of time actually used by the wrestlers. Of course in the 45 faces to appear some were better than others, while still others of the seven were than terrible, but on the whole wrestling fans have been given fairly good shows in Belleville, that is taking into consideration the size of the town, etc. It is a well known fact that Belleville fans have been afforded more and better fans than other cities boasting of a larger population.

To show their appreciation of the continued loyalty of the local wrestling fans the promoters have signed John Katan, Canada's most foremost wrestler of the day, to meet Bunny Dunlop, the Cleveland bad man, in the main bout of Thursday night's bouts at the arena. The local promoters did not procure Katan's signature to a contract until following hours of negotiations and then only after having to guarantee him nearly twice as much percentage at the gate than is customary in Belleville. Katan realized he would be matched with a stiff opponent in Dunlop and held up the local promoters with a figure that he thought would surely be turned down, but seeing the advantage of signing such a well-known wrestler for a "shooting bout" the local matchmakers accepted his terms and are now wondering if they bit off more than they can chew. According to figures Katan will receive more money than is usually paid to both semi-finalists in Belleville. John Katan is no stranger to the wrestling game as he has met some of the best, yes even the world's champions, and although defeated always managed to make it interesting for his opponents.

by

Janet Doran

On her way to the hospital, she had to pass the Insurance Building, and Judy went up, hoping to catch Michael's employer before he left for the day.

"I'm Mrs. Swayne," Judy explained to Carrol Lansing. "I came to see you about Michael's insurance. You know he's ill.... In the hospital with appendicitis." She stopped, waiting for Mr. Lansing to give some sign that he understood her mission.

He stood up, frowning heavily. "I'm awfully sorry about that, Mrs. Swayne, but there was nothing much we could do about it!"

Judy stared at him in amazement.

"What.... what do you mean, Mr. Lansing....Nothing can you do? About what? What's wrong with Michael's insurance policy?"

"That's just it, Mrs. Swayne, there isn't any. There hasn't been, since the week before he married. He borrowed to the limit on it, and then failed to redeem the loan. I'm sorry."

"No policy," Judy said a little sickly, sitting down quickly, as if her knees had lost their strength, "no insurance!"

"I'm sorry," Michael's boss repeated in a troubled murmur, "I tried to talk him out of it, but you know Mike." He spread his hands out, palms up, in a gesture of futility, and Judy stood up.

"Did..... did he have any back pay, any bonuses due him?" Judy grasped at this last straw, as a puny weapon against the towering terror on of expenses looming over her head, and that question brought a husky gruffness to Carrol Lansing's voice when he answered.

"Oh, no," he said gruffly, "he hadn't any bonuses. He spent those in advance. And he hadn't much money due him, when he got through two weeks ago."

"Got through?" Judy gasped. "You must be mistaken, Mr. Lansing. Do you mean Michael's never got through working here?"

"Why yes," Lansing said, surprised, "didn't you know, Mrs. Swayne? He resigned a little over two weeks ago!"

"Through," Judy repeated dully, "no job." The debts, the installments were a high, chill iron fence, wailing her into an ever narrowing prison, and shivering, she dashed her head, and ran stumbling, and unseeing from the room, from the building.

CHAPTER 18.
ROUNDED

A raw wind lashed out at her, as Judy rounded the corner, and began the slow, unreal trip to the hospital. It hit through her light tweed suit, and she shivered in its icy grip, remembering the beautiful fur coat she must return.

In the morning, early, before she went to the office, she would take it down. She would explain to them that it would be impossible to pay for the wrap, now.

A store window display halted her, and she stood for several minutes, staring intently at the lovely gifts. Michael love furs. He'd be sure to swagger in, pause before the group, and with his polished, silver-tipped stick, point out the one he wanted. "That one," he'd say, and that little curve of.... he'd isn't it crazy, Judy? Don't you love it?" Because he loved such novelties himself, he was sure everyone else appreciated them.

Stupidly she drew tighter, Judy turned away from the window. She dared not spend even a quarter now. She hardly knew what she did dare do. She only knew that all roads led to terrifying pile of black worry, and there didn't seem to be any guide post any more.

Michael would think it was because she was economical. He'd be sure to think that because she couldn't bring him things, was because she couldn't bear to spend his money. Because saving was more important than his happiness.

It brought a dull nagging ache to Judy's heart, but there was nothing she could do about it. She couldn't even explain. Not with Michael so ill. She couldn't worry him with their financial difficulties now. It was too late to do anything about it, now that he was ill, and out of a job as well.

Someone came out of the hospital, ran down the steps, and almost collided with Judy. Judy's startled gray eyes flew wide open as Lansing's lean fingers closed about each arm, and he laughed down at her from his tall height.

"Whoa, there, Judy, where's the fire?" His blue eyes sobered and the smile faded from his lips, as he saw the sparkle of tears on her dark lashes. "Anything I can do, Old Girl?"

Judy shook her head mutely, and swallowed over the lump in her throat. Shorty had always been so wonderful to Michael.

"Well, but that's he answered uneasily, "Mike's doing simply fine, just fine with Doc. Pretty sick and he says your old man will be out of the woods, now in a few days, and then it'll be just plain, clear sailing, until he's back on his feet again. There's really nothing to worry over!"

Judy stared at him intently, and he became even more uncomfortable under her silent, confused lack of words.

"If it's money, Judy, I can lend you some. You know Mike would do the same for me. If I took the count, Mack, we all catch up with some seamy luck every so often." He look out his billfold, but Judy almost fled from him up the steps.

"No, Shorty..... no thank you, she gasped..."I'll manage.....some how."

He followed her back up the steps to the big door, with the frosted dome light, illuminating the word, "HOSPITAL", and grasping her wrist firmly, halted her flight.

"Judy, I won't feel that you rate me a friend, Mike's my friend, unless you let me help. You can pay me back later, when you're working again. It wasn't exactly his fault he was fired. Things had been in a bad way at the office for a long time, and it just happened to be him who got the axe. All of us have borrowed from our desk from time to time, and we always paid it back, and nothing was ever said."

"Fred, Shorty!" Judy twisted her flat little purse in fingers that shook pitifully, "Michael was fired?"

"Yeah." Shorty agreed miserably aware that he had blundered, that Michael hkdn't told Judy anything about the affair, "it wasn't his fault though, Judy. We've all done the same thing."

"Did..... did he pay back....what he.... borrowed!" Judy managed to ask, after a long moment during which Shorty wished he could crawl down a manhole, out of reach of Judy's wide, questioning eyes.

"How much was it, Shorty?"

"Not much..... I don't know. I suppose he paid it back." Shorty's one desire was to escape now before he got any deeper. "Forget about it, hon."

Judy watched him run down the steep steps, rake his hat down hard, set against the sharp wind, and stride off, upright. Not until he was out of sigh did she draw a long, quivering breath, and turn slowly into the hospital.

Michael was awake, and very much better. He was in a high-hearted mood and Judy forced her worries into the back of her tired mind in a desperate effort to cheer him.

"Gosh, but it's good to see you again, Mrs. Swayne! After all these years, and years, and years, how have you been? How is your family? Particularly that scamperon, no-account husband you married!" His brown eyes flamed with sentiment, and Judy bent to kiss him quickly, lest he discover the deep, nagging worries adding anxious years to her soft young face.

"Mike, darling," she whispered huskily, "you are better, aren't you?"

"I should say I am," he assured her gayly. "I've begun to crab at them already. Imagine being jailed in a room without so much as a picture, a calendar, or even a drapery to study! Gosh, Judy, you've no idea how long 60 minutes can be!"

"But you're better Michael!" she reminded him, "the dreadful pain has let up.... the awful danger is past!" It seemed incredible that he should mention petty irritations, when they had so recently climbed over the jagged peaks of death, destruction, agony. "Soon you'll be sitting up. Then we can look forward to bringing you home again!" (I'll have my arms ready by that time!) she thought dreatly.

"I'll say!" Michael agreed solemnly, "you know, Judy, it takes something like this to....to bring you confined to a hospital room for several weeks to make you appreciate your home. Your own little cottage. I lay here and visualize every nook, every line of those rooms of ours, Judy, and they seem like Paradise. Like something out of a peculiar, lovely dream. I can't wait till I'm back home again, among our own things."

Judy's heart plunged downward like a fallen sticks, and lodged somewhere in her shoes. His words thought that had been lurking below brought into violent, sharp life, like the surface of her mind, in a unthought, unconscious thought, all day. The thought that they'd have to move. Find a less expensive apartment, and let some of their unpaid for costly furnishings go. They could not be paid for now, according to the agreements. And it would be better to go to Mr. Hasens and explain things, take the responsibility for deciding just what pieces they'd like to keep the things lapse until the company reclaimed them, with the attendant unpleasantness. Certainly they could not expect to keep things they could not hope to pay for. Not without at least a definite income, and a bulging one, to make any payments at given intervals.

Judy sat there a long time, her soft face hidden against his shoulder, his long, thin fingers straying through her brief bob in a quiet tenderness and affection. Silent, troubled toward the fall vase, blazing with a last sheaf of deep crimson blooms big as teacups, and Michael basked only a fraction of an instant, before replying.

"The gang," he explained, "crowded at the office, Shorty brought them." They talked of other things, Judy taking care to keep his mind on pleasant subjects. He told her humorous little bits about the hospital, the staff, the nurses and long before they had said half the things they wanted to share, it was time for one small paycheck was beyond her tired mind to solve.

"Oh, gee you. The gorgeous chrysanthemums, Michael!" Judy nodded toward the tall vase, blazing with a last sheaf of deep crimson blooms big as teacups, and Michael basked only a fraction of an instant, before replying.

"The gang," he explained, "crowded at the office, Shorty brought them." They talked of other things, Judy taking care to keep his mind on pleasant subjects. He told her humorous little bits about the hospital, the staff, the nurses and long before they had said half the things they wanted to share, it was time for Judy to go.

"This health factory runs on a five foot shelf of rules and regulations and the only known method of beating one of the axioms is to break off," Michael explained, "I would do no much more good to talk with you, than follow rule ten and sleep promptly at eight p.m.! I'm not tired, Judy. Only tired of this empty barren room. Tired of not seeing my girl's face across from me."

Judy kissed him good night softly, gently, and let herself out into the still, quiet corridor, fiercely glad that she hadn't let him know anything about her worries. Somehow, some way, she'd find a solution to the riddle, and Michael had enough to bear, without adding that to his troubles.

"He's coming along splendidly, Mrs. Swayne," the night nurse offered, as Judy passed on her way out, "and you're in for a big surprise when you're in need. Flowers made him. He was like a boy over them, he was that pleased. He said chrysanthemums were his favorite flower!"

Judy was shocked into numb silence, and the nurse went on:

"I wasn't on duty when you brought them, I came on just after you'd left, but the other nurse was just putting them in the vase. I've never seen such heavenly blooms!"

Judy escaped, feeling as if she had left her heart behind. As if a bright, cheery succession of words had perforated a neat little incision right above her ribs, and let it ooze out.

She passed a brightly lighted window, with a big square sign posted on the glass, and her tired feet slowed, as she read the black, flaring words.

"Will worry over debts?" the sign asked, "we take over your responsibilities and all you do is to pay us a little each month, over a long, easy period of time. The Workingman's Loan Association is your friend, when you're in need.

She pushed open the door, and found herself, slightly, before the dark, sleek forties looking man who rose eagerly to greet her.

Judy read the long strips of paper he pushed toward her. She shivered faintly, at the endless questions listed, wished desperately that she had someone to advise her, help her with the bewildering legal terms.

"In the morning, Mrs. Swayne," the man assured her, "you can have my money. We guarantee 24-hour service. Just leave everything to us!"

In the morning, Judy had not slept nearly enough to banish the purple shadows under her eyes, the sharp lines of weariness about her soft mouth. She carried her fur coat, boxed in the carton it had come in, to the ferrier, on her way to work, and met with further dismaying obstacles.

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Swayne. We don't do that! If we took coats back after they were sold, and worn, it would injure our reputation for selling brand-new wraps.

"But this has been worn only once," Judy insisted, "and even a model would see it more than that!"

"I'm sorry," the little furrier was cold, and very hard; "it's out of the question!"

HEALTH and PSYCHOLOGY

Prevention is the watchword of our times! Nowadays the aim of all medical work is not only to cure the sick, but to help the well to stay well.

Don't wait, for instance, until you have a nervous breakdown before you seek help or think about your well-being. Don't delay physical examination until you are prostrated with pain. Keep on the alert about your mental health and the state of your organic structure. Don't get into careless habits of thinking.

Be sure also to keep your body fit. To do this, study something of anatomy and physiology so that you may know what you are trying to accomplish.

Never lose sight of the fact that a health body is needed for a healthy mind! Mental hygiene is not yet fully understood. People somehow believe that because they have been able to withstand worry, disappointment and the stern struggle for existence for so long their nervous systems must be resistive enough to stand anything. It cannot be denied that the nervous system is the toughest part of the whole human machinery and that it is able to suffer untold abuse before it breaks down.

It is questionable whether any organ can endure the work undertaken by the brain for months and years at a stretch. Nevertheless, brain and nerves have a breaking point. We know that insanity and all sorts of nervous affections are constantly on the increase because life nerves give way. There is a limit even to the strongest and the bravest endurance!

Yet people who have all they can bear and who have to work hard will go out nights and work just as hard, if not harder, in the pursuit of pleasure. Somehow they get the mistaken idea that spending up the pleasures is an antidote to their daily toil.

The devotees of bridge regard it as a wonderful recreation. It is in small doses, but no game can have any other effect than a dangerous depletion of nervous energy when it is practised for hours as a stretch and at the expense of outdoor recreation and sleep.

Golf is excellent for a change of thought and for pleasurable recreation, provided it is not overdone. The same may be said for tennis, horseback riding, walking, or even table tennis.

Eight hours for work, eight hours for play and eight hours for sleep is an excellent hygienic program which every man and woman should abide by. It it were to be modified in any way the sleep hours might be increased to eight and a half or so nine.

Hard mental work cannot be counteracted by hard physical labor. The two in combination produce a dangerous strain on the body and the nerves. It may be necessary for you to work hard in order to keep your job and make a living. But of your free time you are the master. You can apportion it as you will. You can use it to serve you and refresh you or you can waste it or allow it to deplete your vitality.

Be careful of competitions in games and about laying wagers upon your pet factors. Select, track the beneficial purposes of your leisure.

Health is a precious asset. Think of prevention and practice it. By so doing not only will your life be lengthened but you will, in addition enjoy it more while you live it.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Every mother with babies should keep barley water in the house. This is made by mixing a little cold water into one tablespoonful of barley flour, then stirring the mixture into ten ounces of boiling water to which a pinch of salt has been added. After cooking the mixture for half an hour in a double-boiler, it is strained and enough water is added to bring the quantity up to a pint.

CHURCHILL TO BECOME FIRST LORD OF ADMIRALTY?

About a year ago, Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, the old "warhorse" of British politics, who is one day Tory and the next anti-Tory, said he was through with public life. But the battles of politics are apparently deeply inbred in him after a lifetime of campaigning, and now he is to be found up and down the United Kingdom frightening Englishmen into believing that their navy is no good, and that Germany is about to attack them. Out of it all comes the report that he will be offered the post of first lord of the admiralty after the elections, which are being conceded to the National government in view of the European situation. The layout ABOVE shows Winston Churchill, the politician, in three typical poses. Past sixty, he is still strong and in good health, and will probably run as a Conservative by the election on November 14.

COMMANDER III EASY WINNER OF CAMBRIDGESHIRE

Wins by Length And Half And Rewards Backers 28 to 1

LONG SHOT SECOND

Two Canadians Hold Winning Tickets on Third Horse

Newmarket, Oct. 30.—(CP Cable)—Commander III, five-year-old bay horse owned by G. R. O. Fraser, today won the Cambridgeshire handicap by a length and a half and rewarded his backers at 28 to 1. A short head divided Mary Pal, a 100 to 1 shot, and Fitzalist, last-minute favorite at 9 to 2.

The 1935 Wychwood Abbot, which defealed Commander III and 41 others in the 1934 Cambridgeshire, wound up in fourth place, and the highly-touted Cos Cob was third among the huge starting field of 46 horses.

No Previous Triumph

The veteran Commander III has no previous triumphs in a classic of his credit, but ran second in last year's Cambridgeshire to Fitzalist, given an 18 to 7 chance yesterday, and showed a strong finish at 6 to 1. Lady Relli's gilding showed the shift in confidence was justified, but could not catch the hardworking Commander III.

Will Stay Here

The winner is a bay horse by Hurry Hurry out of Cornetta. His trainer, A. B. Briscoe, said on Monday the horse was favorably handicapped and had a good sporting chance," but experts did not take Commander III very seriously.

With apprentice jockey, T. Hawcroft in the saddle, Commander III was backed from 100 to 8 shortly before the start. He finished in 2.32 seconds flat. He not only beat Mary Pal, Fitzalist and Cos Cob, but Lady Relli's fitalist, but went home in front by a short head ahead of Wychwood Abbot, Law Court, Pegasus—which ruled favorite until Commander III's late burst—and British Quota.

It was the 94th running of the classic Cambridgeshire. On the result depended some $6,000,000 in unreported bets.

Wychwood Abbot, as last year's runner-up, was assigned top weight with 133 pounds while Man's Pal was in with 132 pounds. Out of 51 pounds, Commander III carried 106 pounds.

Large Crowd Present

A large crowd was on hand as the big field lined up at the starting gate. Commander III and Lord Portal's the Slue Boy, at opposite ends of the line, were favorites with the early stages of the race with

Smithfield Resident Receives Injuries That May Prove Fatal

DIZZY CURVE

Cobourg, Ont., Oct. 30 (CP)—Wellington Hart, 59-year-old resident of Smithfield, is unconscious today and not expected to recover in Port Hope Hospital, the result of a curious auto accident.

Robert Dawson, Trenton boxer, received injured ribs and a lacerated nose and the third occupant of the car, Bruce Wood of Trenton, escaped with a few scratches.

The accident occurred yesterday on Jones Hill, west of Port Hope on the Provincial Highway.

Provincial Motorcycle Officer McMillan of Port Hope said the car went out of control at the intersection of a gravel road, shot sideways into a guard rail removing four posts and tearing the engine hood and radiator behind, swung hard into a tree and then described an "S" loop which took the car across the highway facing it in the opposite direction.

With the rear wheels still turning forward, the three found their action and the car shot up the hill for 250 feet, crossing a ditch and small elevator built standard to the perimeter. By reversing the last he pumps air inside the body.

HUMAN PERISCOPE GIVES PEEP INSIDE

New Instrument Saves Pain And Risk in Surgery

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

San Francisco, Oct. 30 (AP)—The human periscope, new instrument for saving pain and risk in surgery, was exhibited today at the American College of Surgeons today.

With the periscope a physician can look directly into the body, anywhere in the abdominal cavity, and see what is wrong. The instrument is a slender, hollow metal rod, the size of a water tool, more than a foot long.

Its tip carries a minute electric light, not much larger than a grain of wheat. At the opposite end is an eye piece.

This rod is inserted, lighted tip downward, through a small hardened and almost painless opening made in the abdominal wall. Through the eye piece an internal field, between two and three inches in diameter, is visible. It is like looking down into the wheat grain light.

As he looks through the periscope the physician holds in his hand a small elongated bulb, attached to the periscope. By forcing the bulb he pumps air inside the body.

French Report Says League Might Consider Lease to Italy

ANGLO-FRENCH PACT

No British Warships Will be Mover From Mediterranean Sea

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, Oct. 30—(AP)—Civies close to the French foreign office said today Premier Laval gave Premier Mussolini of Italy to understand peace terms most acceptable to Il Duce and must be submitted to the League of Nations at Geneva.

Laval in a talk with Italian Ambassador Cerruti was reported to have told him Mussolini's basis for settlement of the Ethiopian war "might be acceptable" if he made certain concessions.

Reliable sources said il Duce was given to understand if he submitted modified demands along "certain lines" to the League of Nations committee, they could then be discussed at Geneva. "certain lines" were interpreted as being Italy's acceptance of a part or "all" on the outlying territories in Ethiopia, leaving the capital of Aksum and Harar and the interior highlands under the sovereignty of Emperor Haile Selassie.

France and Britain were reported to have agreed they will avoid working at cross-purposes in Geneva when and if the Italian proposals are submitted.

Sound Out League On Peace Terms

London, Oct. 30 (AP)—High authoritative sources said today Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, intends to sound out other members of the League of Nations as to what should be offered Premier Mussolini to make peace in Ethiopia. He will go to Geneva tomorrow.

These developments were taken to mean the British did not feel danger in the Mediterranean was past at the though officials said the meeting of experts did not have any bearing on anglo-French military alliance.

Toronto, Oct. 30.—(CP)—Mr. Justice MacRaid today made an order setting aside the coroner's inquest into the death of William McLuhan Dunbar, Toronto, on Aug. 31, and the jury verdict returned at that inquest. The notice of motion stated that after Dr. Stanmore's inquest the body of McLuhan was exhumed by order of the Attorney-General and a post-mortem was performed by Dr. R. B. Franklyn, pathologist, medico-legal expert; that the post mortem disclosed facts which were not before the jury at the inquest and that, therefore, it was desirable in the interests of justice that the inquisition held by Dr. Stanmore be quashed.

BLACK FOX RECOVERED AFTER EXCITING CHASE

Twenty-three valuable black foxes which dug their way to freedom from the pens at Foster Brothers, Mink Lake, Minden last week have all been recovered, according to reports from that district during the past several days. Just two of the foxes are still missing. It is believed that one of the animals was run over by an automobile on the road while the second lost his life when shot by some unknown marksman.

Disappearing last Wednesday, the foxes were placed before the public through a hole day under one of the wire fences enclosing their pens by until hunger drove them back to the pens where they had been accustomed to daily feedings. Within a few hours the majority of them had been recaptured, although by Sunday seven were still missing. Volunteer workers assisted in the fox roundup.

Peterboro Protests the Moving of Gov't Office

The announced intention of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests to transfer the Crown Timber office from Peterborough to Tweed where it is proposed to combine this office with the Forestry Branch, is meeting with strong protest in Peterborough and district.

Mr. J. J. Duffus, federal member elect has declared his intention of taking upon the Hon. Peter Heenan to urge that instead of the Crown Timber office being transferred to Tweed that the forestry office in that village be moved to Peterborough. It is pointed out by Mr. Duffus that Peterborough has long been recognized as the centre of the lumbering industry of the province and that any change would be of considerable inconvenience to lumbering interests of that district.

The Crown Timber office was established in Peterborough over seventy years ago, its jurisdiction extending from Trenton east to the Ottawa River and includes Peterborough, Hastings and Haliburton Counties.

LT. COL. W. H. SCARTH WILL BE MISSED HERE

Provincial Secretary of Canadian Legion Died Yesterday in Toronto

Members of the local branch of the Canadian Legion are paying tribute to the memory of one of their chief and best loved officials, the late Lt. Col. W. H. Scarth, provincial secretary of the Canadian Legion, who died in Toronto yesterday evening. Lt. Col. Scarth had been ill for some time.

Local veterans were well acquainted with the notable soldier and secretary of their organization who has visited Belleville many times and delivered addresses at local meetings.

The late Col. Scarth received his education at Trinity College, Port Hope, the Upper Canada College, Toronto; St. John's College, Winnipeg and the Royal Military College, Kingston. He was a veteran of the Great War during which time he took part in campaigning in German South Africa with the imperial forces. He was unmarried and is survived by two sisters.

Arrangements are being made for a full military funeral in Toronto which is expected to be attended by several of the local branch of the Legion.

BUILD CHARACTER SAYS F. MOORE

Kiwanis Enjoy Address by Past District Governor

Kiwanians were out in full force for the luncheon on Tuesday at the Queen's Hotel, where they listened to a fine address by Fred Moore, Past President of West Toronto Club and Past District Governor, also an appeal to add more members by Professor Gibson, Principal of the Eastern Ontario Dairy School at Kingston. President Jack Bowerman was in the chair with Harold Sexton as song leader and Phil Mellon as sergeant-at-arms. Leo B. Higgs accompanied the community singing on the piano. Several members were introduced to the club in the person of Hugh Sinclair, one of the well-known actor, who is at present with the Capitol Theatre chain.

No Reason For Pessimism

Professor Gibson after being introduced stated there was no good reason for the fluctuation in the price of cheese, a difference of two cents a pound being in evidence at the present time. "The cheese industry is in good shape," said the speaker. In the peak year of 1904, 244 million pounds of cheese were exported and this year a little more than 80 million. Those who are in the habit of concluding his short talk Professor Gibson remarked there had to be a substitution of prices or the farmers would certainly go out of the industry. "The only cheese that can compare with the English home product is the Canadian cheddar cheese and if England should go over to the factory system of making cheese, Canada could underbid some of her best ground in the English market," said the speaker.

Booster for the day was Isaac Stephenson, one of the newer members in the Kiwanis Club. Isaac is a hard worker and enjoys very much his fellowship at the club each week. He conducted a membership drive amongst members in the city and he invited the members to call up and see him and look over the plan. There are many agreed to do. Herb Fox introduced the speaker for the day while Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by James Cowan.

Things That Build

"Civilization and all commerce go together to build up any country," said Mr. Moore and "if either one breaks down, that country fails."

Babylon is an instance of that statement and other countries could be put in the same category. In every case where the golden rule was applied to business there was a general rising and the causes of decline can be laid to the changing order from fellowship to one of accumulation." The gaining of power through wealth is the first period of downfall remarked the speaker. He showed that from 1914 to 1930 all countries were working towards selfishness, that brought other countries down but in Canada and the British Empire the majority held out to the ideals of fair play, that kept us from going too far and "God for the service clubs," said Mr. Moore. "If you have no peace in your soul you cannot have peace in the world," was another statement, and "don't take yourself too seriously." The speaker in conclusion stated there had been many advancements in science in the past twenty-five years but we have not brought into play, on the same basis, the building of character.

ARREST IS MADE IN $1,000 THEFT

Roy Sheppard, Elizabethville customs, was arrested yesterday on a charge of the theft of $1,000.00 from the home of W. G. Blanchard a fellow villager. The arrest followed investigation of the theft of one thousand dollars in cash, stolen from the home of Mr. Blanchard some time Monday night. Provincial Constables Smith and Carey made the arrest. Although the money was not found, Sheppard was taken into custody and lodged in the county jail at Port Hope last night. Sheppard denied knowledge of the theft, it was learned today.

POLICE COURT

William Wilson, Peterboro County, appeared before Magistrate Bullis charged with the theft of a set of harness, the bearing was enlarged until Monday while Wilson was held in custody. The harness in question was allegedly stolen from Edgar Lake Wallbridge, a previous employer of Wilson. According to Provincial Police who investigated, the harness was taken some time ago and returned to the Lake farm with the result that it was by suspect of stealing chicken on Sunday night last. Wilson's automobile was found near the Lake property by the authorities at that time, leading to his arrest.

Stanley Archer, 19, and Victor Whitely, 17, both of Belleville, were arrested yesterday on charges of breaking, entering and theft. The pair were remanded in custody until Friday. The apprehension of the youths culminated an investigation by Plainclothes Officer Fred Reid following the theft of household goods from the home of Mrs. Mahlon Hinds street. Later the stolen goods were recovered in a second hand store. Antiques, linens and other household goods constituted the loot. A third local youth was held for questioning only in the matter, but may face charges of receiving stolen goods. It was intimated by police authorities today.

For the second night in succession a female inebriate occupied the women's cell at the police station last night. This morning she was arraigned and was allowed her liberty but was instructed to appear in police court on Saturday. Along with the other inebriate who was arrested on a similar charge 24 hours previously. The arrest of two women for intoxication in Belleville inside of 24 hours establishes a police record along these lines in Belleville.

COURT AWARDS PLAINTIFF $650

Action Based on Injuries Received in Accident When Car Turned Over

Damages to the extent of $650.00 were granted Charles J. Symons of this city against the defendant, Robert J. R. Dewar also of Belleville in $1,000 recovery suit by the Hon. Mr. Justice McTague at the conclusion of two days' hearing yesterday morning.

The action was based on injuries suffered as the result of a car accident near Peterborough late June in which a car owned and driven by Mr. Dewar and carrying Mr. Symons as passenger turned over in a ditch.

In delivering his judgment the Hon. Mr. Justice McTague found defendants 50 per cent negligible and plaintiff 50 per cent and costs of the court will be apportioned accordingly.

Defendant was represented by the firm of Porter and Porter, each of Belleville, and Geo. F. Payne and Arnold.

In making the award, the Hon. Mr. Justice McTague reviewed briefly events connected with the accident.

"We have a car driven by defendant and the plaintiff is also a passenger. Some distance before the accident took place there is a warning by passengers of a bumping sound on one of the tires. The defendant continued to drive at a speed he admitted later was between 40 and 50 miles per hour.

"Of the main points of the case as to whether defendant was negligible the law applies that the driver must exercise at all times the same measure of precaution to guard against risks which might easily be anticipated. There was the sound of the bumping tire and the fact that his attention had been called to it. It seems he should have stopped to investigate, or at least reduce the speed until it could have been investigated.

"It has been said that another passenger, having drawn the attention of the driver to the fact of the bump on the tire would absolve the passenger-plaintiff from doing anything under the circumstances, but I cannot agree with this supposition. The attention of the driver was called to the bump, but also remarks were used in conversation by passengers that there was plenty of time to reach Peterborough. The plaintiff failed to encourage at least to persuade the driver that the bumping condition should be investigated."

"As for the plaintiff's knowledge of the tires, it was not proved. The defendant should have had. The tires were worn—that's sure. The defendant should have investigated.

"In the circumstances I therefore find that the degree of negligence should be apportioned, 50 per cent against the defendant and 50 per cent against the plaintiff granting the plaintiff the sum of $650.00."

COUNTY BUYS 50 CORDS WOOD

Ten Tenders Submitted For Wood Supply of Institutions

Tenders of Mr. G. Sherman of Read, and Chas. A. Dionne of Marmor for a total of 50 cords of dry, hardwood each at a price of $7.50 per cord were accepted by the committee of Finance and Public Property of Hastings County Council at its regular meeting held in Shire Hall yesterday afternoon. Ten tenders for the wood supply for county buildings had been submitted.

During the meeting which was presided over by Wm. West, Warden, a total of $6,000 in indigent accounts were passed. This shows an increase in total indigent expenditures over the same period for last year.

Steps are being taken to have the Belleville Municipal Band broadcast from station CKWS, Kingston, it was announced at the meeting of the band committee held last night in the band room. Arrangements are being made for the broadcast which is scheduled for the latter part of November.

Stirling and District

On Thursday last a large number of the members of the Stirling I. O. O. F. including the second degree team motored to Campbellford to take part in the great celebration sponsored by the Campbellford Lodge No. 346 I.O.O.F. The celebration marked the fiftieth year since the founding of the Campbellford Lodge. The program was of unusual interest and included a big street parade, a banquet, and the conferring of degrees. The very colorful parade created a great deal of attention during the afternoon when nearly four hundred members, visitors and friends marched to the evening rhythm of the martial music provided by the attending bands. Degree work consisted the first portion of the afternoon and at 7 p.m. the gathering assembled in the auditorium of the Campbellford high school where a splendid banquet was provided through the co-operation of the ladies in the Campbellford Rebekah Lodge. At eight in the evening the Lodge meeting was again called for special degree work. A special feature of the evening was the conferring of the Old Mandeville degree by the Hamilton Past Grands Association. This particular ceremony is about 168 years old and was carried out in a splendid manner by those in charge.

Attend Conference.

Several members of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, as well as a group of specially appointed delegates of the congregation attended the sessions of the Bay of Quinte Conference held in Belleville during October. The conference which was very largely attended throughout from a wide area of the surrounding country met in Bridge Street United Church on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week. Many prominent speakers from all branches of the church took part on the program which included a spectacular pageant presented by ladies of the Belleville Presbyterian. Among those present from St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, were: Rev. and Mrs. R. W. Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Martin, Mr. S. A. Ralton, Mr. W. Hagerman, Mr. William Pilchett and Mr. Fred Rigg. This Conference was the last of a group being held throughout the Dominion during the present year the union of the three great churches into one and a review of the achievements in those ten years was a feature of the proceedings.

Observe 79th Anniversary.

After several weeks of preparation, the congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, celebrated the 79th anniversary of the founding of the church. Special music by the choir under the direction of Mrs. Walter A. Sanford, choir leader, solos by Mr. John Anderson of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Peterborough, and numbers by the Rumbrae quartette added greatly to the interesting messages brought in the large gatherings by Rev. R. W. Walker of the Church, Belleville, who was the special speaker for the occasion. The congregation gathered for the morning service and very good crowd met at from the timely topic chosen by Rev. Walker for his sermon.

The church was very artistically decorated for these special services by a committee lead by the wife of Mr. Thomas Ward. Flowers of many colors banked the pulpit with high over the choir loft and choir in the soft glow of subdued lighting. Above the front in huge silver letters the words "St. Andrew's 79th Anniversary" were assembled with a splendid work in this respect and carried out the design created by Mr. Ward to the appropriately with the general atmosphere. Special lighting equipment was installed with high powered flood lights playing upon the three large memorial windows and the equipment for this was made possible through the generosity of Mr. C. H. Baker, the Chairman of the board of management. Those who gave unsparingly of their time and effort to create this marvellous effect in the art of decorating were: Mrs. R. C. Ward, Mrs. Harper Rollins, Mrs. L. Dafoe, Mr. Roy Redgrave, Mr. R. H. Williams, Mr. William Dermidy, Mr. Jimmie Ward, Mr. Harold Foster and Mr. Thomas Ward who was in charge of the work.

The musical contribution made to these splendid services by the choir in the morning included a very clever arranged descriptive number ("The Storm") by the entire choir. This arrangement included several familiar sacred songs with duet parts taken by Miss Jane Moffat and Mrs. Roy Redgrave and Mr. Arthur Duncan assisting with solo work. Mr. John Anderson of Peterborough offered as a violin solo "Sun of My Soul". Rev. Walker spoke of the spirit of restlessness in which we live as the very essence of progress. The spirit of dissatisfaction dwelling within man is what creates a desire for better things. Students work tirelessly within the four walls of laboratories in experiments to make things better for man in the future. In the science of humanities dissatisfaction with things as they were has brought us to the point where the ocean can be spanned in a few hours. In science of agriculture this achievement is based on dissatisfaction with things as they were. All progress has been the visions of yesterday made practical today. We sympathize with ourselves in these trying times, but the average home today is superior to the palace of yesterday with its electricity and running water, etc. The dreamers of yesterday made all this possible and only because of their faith. The greatest man works for the good of humanity, there are of course exceptions, but the average man has before him the vision of something better, and good is accomplished because of these dreams and visions. A selfish man has no vision. The great service rendered by many of these great men are not recognized while they walk among men but eventually their worth is realized and their faith rewarded.

In the evening the choir was augmented by the Rumbrae quartette, Mrs. Rumbrae, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Taylor, Mrs. Craighead and Mr. C. Donald who offered two fine numbers, "Holy the Lord God Almighty" and "The Still Small Voice" and Mr. John Anderson offered two solos "Gentle Shepherd" by J. E. Ackna, and "Thanks Be To God" by Stanley Dickens. So great was the congregation in the evening that extra chairs had to be placed in the auditorium to accommodate the crowd which was present with great interest the second message brought by Rev. Walker on the theme of the sayings of Paul to Timothy, "Study to show thyself, second verse, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day". Mrs. R. J. Koffend presided at the console of the organ for both services in her very capable manner.

Football Defeat

The Stirling high school rugby team were defeated by the Trenton Normal team on Friday when they were beaten in the early part of the game in the 2nd. fixture of the season. Those on the lineup of the Stirling team were: Ross Scott, Scott, Mumby, Bailey, Campbell, Lammiman, Mahbonen, Hodgett, Rose and a group of local players made up the team.

Carmel T.P.S.

The first regular meeting of Carmel United Young People's Society since their reorganization, took place on evening Oct. 24th with Mr. Archie Bailey, president in charge of the meeting which included the regular devotional period, Rev. R. W. Rowland gave the address of the evening, dealing with the recent conference which took place in Bridge Street United Church Belleville. The report was very interesting to all those present. Miss Mina Carlisle offered a very pleasing soprano solo, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Arthur Preen. Great interest was shown in the closing number on the programme which was a contest directed by Mrs. Ashley Brooks.

The officers appointed to direct the activities of the society for the coming year are as follows: President, Mr. Archie Bailey; 1st Vice President, Miss Gladys Preen; 2nd. Vice President, Miss Myrtle Hazelman; 3rd. Vice President, Mr. Wesley Brooks; Secretary, Roy Brooks; Treasurer, Mr. Everett Orvis. With the above mentioned names forming an executive. Charged with drunken and careless driving, Bachelor "staggered" as Judge Frank Walsh of Holland:

"Enoch, I've voted the Democratic ticket straight in this State for 46 years and my father voted it before me."

"I was going to give you 90 days at the Municipal Farm," said the Judge, a Democrat, "but now I'm going to give you 96, and revoke your license permanently."

THE HOME FORUM

FEWER WAR TOYS

The warlike Italian would not like it but war games are going to be largely absent from Christmas toys this year, according to New York manufacturers. The soldiers will not be so numerous. So the peace-loving tendency gains over even as nations talk and draw war. Dolls are not dressed in uniforms now as is the case in Japan and Europe.

Little boys and girls in the United States are going to receive blocks with buildings instead of soldiers, which for years illustrated the letter "S".

Science is coming in. As electric eye which can silence a radio by flashlight, a boy automobile which will run about a room when its hood is touched by the hand, a toy auto with radio, a fire engine with a siren, and an electric locomotive with a whistle are some of the new devices. Microscopes sets, astronomical equipment, aerodynamic wheel toys and trains, building sets, movie projectors, and play imitations of nearly every adult activity are included.

Toys for Christmas mean a $200,000,000 trade. This year's business is up ten per cent and prices continue at low levels.

Little boys and girls have not begun to think of Christmas but the Santa Claus manufacturers and merchants have long been busy with the preparations for the Yuletide festival, so that little boys and girls may be supremely happy at Christmastide.

EAT MORE CHEESE

CHEESE IS THE SUBJECT OF TODAY'S LESSON OR ARGUMENT, OR WHAT HAVE YOU? This is National Cheese Week, so named and observed in order that the people of Canada might focus their attention for the time on one of the most important industries of this country. The production and sale of cheese affords employment to many and links the country to the town and city—production in the country and distribution in the city. Canadians think they know all about cheese, and consequently do not give it more than a passing thought.

Cheese is produced in Canada under ideal conditions, cleanliness and sanitation work hand in hand with ability and experience with the result that a splendid article of pure food is produced—a complete food in itself, we are told, on which one could exist indefinitely with nothing else and wax strong and fat on the cheese diet. Strange then that Canadians eat less cheese than any other country. Canadian cheese is a luxury in England and other countries—here it is seldom featured on the menu.

YANKS MUST EAT CHEESE

One State in Uncle Sam's domains has passed a law that cheese made in that state must be featured on every menu in public eating places, so many ounces. That has increased the sale of cheese and made people more cheese conscious.

OLD BELLEVILLE CHEESE

Said a friend of ours—I always liked cheese, new Canadian cheese, but couldn't relish the imported cheese which has such a pronounced personality that its presence is always evident when in the proximity. My liking for new cheese was developed when I came to or leave it alone. Upon coming to Belleville I was introduced to Belleville Old Cheese by the late John Elliott, who took a deep personal interest in the cheese industry of this district. Old cheese carefully matured at least a year old certainly crowns with dignity and fullness any meal—and you don't know good eating or good cheese until you learn to love Belleville Old Cheese, now featured on the menus of the finest hotels in Canada and the British Isles.

ASK FOR IT

This being National Cheese Week it behooves us to honour the occasion by introducing Belleville cheese to the family circle every day and each eating more cheese. Also when we dine out in public places ask for Canadian cheese.

If Canadians would eat cheese in anything like the proportion that Englishmen do the cheese industry of Canada would grow and flourish and there would be more employment and many thousands of dollars added yearly to general circulation.

AND SO—

This being National Cheese Week let's eat more cheese this week, and every week hereafter, for our own good and for the good of the nation.

x x x x

HERE'S A FEW INTERESTING FIGURES. There are over two hundred cheese factories in Central Ontario, giving employment to from three to five hundred people in addition to farm labor and the selling and distribution end. Over twenty million pounds of cheese are made yearly in Central Ontario district, bring between two and three million dollars into the district annually. Six thousand farmers are in a position to supply everybody in the district benefits directly or indirectly. Quite an important factor in the prosperity which has always distinguished this section of Canada above all others.

x x x x

EAT MORE CHEESE and be a contributor to the continued and increasing prosperity of the cheese industry and Belleville district as a whole.

GOOD REASON

A much-publicized European dictator was about to visit a lunatic asylum one day and the superintendent went to great pains to teach his inmates how to salute in the new-fangled style.

The great day arrived and the Great One came to inspect the place. All down the line these well trained men extended their right arms in the proper horizontal salute until finally he came to the last man who did not salute at all.

"Come, come, my man," he said, "why don't you salute me?"

"Oh," said the man, "I'm the superintendent—I'm not on of the lunatics."

First Cheese Factory Started in Ontario in '64

The early French settlers in Canada brought the art of making cheese from France to this country. Certain families on the Island of Orleans still make a peculiar type of cheese for which they have been handed down from generation for possibly 300 years.

The United Empire Loyalists brought with them from the United States a knowledge of the manufacture of the Cheddar type of cheese into different parts of Ontario over 150 years ago.

All cheese was made on farms in Ontario until the year 1864, when the first County large parts of cattle were kept from calves and hand and home-made cheese was a common article of commerce. For years Mr. Simon Kenny, who died in 1897, assisted, made cheese from a herd of 100. The factory system of manufacture developed in New York State in the 1851 and spread into Ohio, Schooners plying on Lake Erie often brought across this "Western Reserve" cheese. Enterprising farmers became interested, and in 1865 John Adams of Ingersoll visited New York State to see how the system worked. In the spring of 1864 Harvey Farrington, formerly from Herkimer County, N.Y. State, opened a cheese factory first in Canada, in Norwich Township. In the same year Jesse Ketchum, in talk from two neighbors, paying 7 cents for 10 pounds. The first year several factories went into operation. In this year Adam Brown of Hamilton, a pioneer in the cheese trade, became one of Canada's greatest export traders with a shipment of 40,000 boxes. Ketchum's factory cheese to Britain Mr. Brown lived to see it sold around the world in nearly a billion dollars worth of cheese produced.

With the abrogation of the Reciprocity Treaty with the U.S. in 1866 Canadian farmers were stimulated to find new markets in a hurry. As a result there was at once a very rapid development of the cheese industry, especially in Ontario. In the year 1867 it was estimated there were over 200 factories built or building. The next year saw the Montreal Cheese Board making and selling, was Bogert-son and the name was widely circulated throughout the U.S. and Britain by the famous "mammoth cheese", a 7,000-pounder made in the Gorgo Calloway, James Harris and Hiram Ramsay factories, and shipped with much ceremony and flourish first to the New York State Fair and then to Montreal, where it was exhibited at fairs and in parks before meeting the fate of all cheese. There are now cheese factories in every province, but about 97 per cent. of the cheese is still produced in Ontario and Quebec.

Canadian manufacturers confine their activities almost wholly to the Cheddar type, it is the cheese that is made in the factories. It is made in various sizes ranging from 20 pounds to 60 pounds up to or 85 pounds.

The largest cheese are often wrongly called "Stilton" or "Canadian Stilton". Stilton cheese is a rich, mellow and quite unlike Cheddar.

A few genuine Stilton cheese are made at the Dominion Experimental Farm at Agassiz, BC. The Tropical cheese is made in India.

The agricultural colleges and government dairymen encourage the comparatively small quantity of cream and other soft varieties. There are also small quantities of these types of cheese.

There is another class of cheese on the Canadian market, put up in tins, known as processed cheese. It is a fatty cheddar cheese ground up and to which extra fat and flavoring matter, such as condiments, is added.

Cottage cheese is prepared in non-heated curds from skimmed milk, without the addition of rennet. It is a delicious dish especially in summer as the main dish of a meal. Cooked with a light dressing it is not likely to cause any digestive disturbance.

The generous gift from one who is a stranger to the the Association, was gratefully appreciated. The ladies thanked Mr. Anderson for bringing the work, resulted in such a handsome contribution.

At eight o'clock one wintry morning the iron gates of Exeter Prison, in England opened, releasing John Lee, "The Man They Could Not Hang", dressed in his Sunday best, with a hood to death upon the gallows. Three times they had tried to hang him, three times they had failed. That he still lives today, his innocence proven and surrounded by his devoted wife and children, honoured by those who formerly reviled him is surely proof that miracles do happen even today. Emboldened with an inimitable Polly Moran provokes much laughter, it is called "Pretty Polly".

Thirty Two curious entitled "Buddy of the Legion" and an interesting series of movie stars at a studio party, called "Screen Snapshots".

Powell Plays Stock Broker Who Loses Fortune and Then Wins It and Ann Dvorak

"Personal Maid's Secret", the new Warner film starring Lyle Talbot and Ann Dvorak

"Personal Maid's Secret", the new Warner film starring Lyle Talbot and Ann Dvorak at the Belle tomorrow (Thursday). In the supporting cast are Mary Astor, Lucien Littlefield, Warren Hull, Anita Louise and Ruth Donnelly in the role of Bessie.

The picture is based on a story by Lillian Duncan Smith and appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. It is a fast and swift tale of a struggling New York family, assisted to get ahead, but lacking the proper control.

The head of the family, though a man of ability and responsibility, is so intent on watching the family budget that he fears to launch out into the bigger affairs of life.

His wife has a great desire and starts the ball rolling by engaging a maid.

The maid has worked for many wealthy families and makes it her business to establish her employers' come in contact with the proper persons and in the right fashion.

The way in which the family skyrockets from a small apartment to a fine home in a good residence district is one of the most humorous bits of entertainment.

Margaret Lindsay has the role of the ambitious wife and Warren Hull, famous on the musical comedy stage and radio, is the husband. Anita Louise and Ruth Donnelly have the parts of the ever efficient maid.

Mary Astor and Frank Albertson have the romantic roles, and Lucien Littlefield is a supercilious, but humorous butler.

Paul Muni's Best Role

"Dr. Socrates," the Warner Bros. production in which Paul Muni is starred, and the second outstanding feature attraction on the same program with "Bordertown," is the most powerful drama in which that star has appeared on the screen.

The picture is based on the popular novel by W. R. Burnett, author of "Little Caesar," and does not only the dramatic punch of the latter play but an engrossing romance in the form of a love triangle succumbs to the charms of a little blind flower girl.

Kitty Foyle, the girl who was taken to their pads—not to dress the part of the city girl, but was cast his nerves through the deadly chase, and is instrumental in sending to their capture by placing the government agents on their trail. Paul Muni plays the role of Dr. Arnold, and with whom Muni falls in love, Josephine Hutchinson has furnished head of the bandit gang.

"Kitty Foyle" Still a Magic

Now in its fourth and final day, and still the rage of the town "Kitty Foyle" starring Ginger Rogers and Jeffrey Lynn, America's favorite dancing pair in their greatest musical romance will be presented for the last times tonight, with the Belle Latest News Flashes, and a funny short three stooges comedy, unique in color "On Ice." By all means see this giant show tonight!

1,040 PER CENT IN LOAN RACKET

Physical Violence Used if Debtor Refuses to Build up Debt

New York, Oct. 30 (AP)—Special prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey ripped Manhattan's $1,000,000-a-week small loan racket wide open today and sent the "six for five boys" scattering.

Fifteen spends of Dewey's investigators, striking at dawn in approved "G-man" fashion, arrested 27 alleged usurers.

The "Shylock" racket has been shooting wage earners of as high as 1040 per cent interest.

The loan rackets poured profits of $200,000 a week into the money lenders' pockets on an estimated $1,000,000-a week business, the Roosevelt Hoge Prosecutor declared.

Most of those in custody, Dewey said, are "big" men. They "buy" the loan $6 today and demand $6 for principal and interest next week.

If the loan is not paid, the investigation discloses, "strong arm collectors" are sent after the borrower.

The victim is forced to agree to additional loans to pay off the original debt. He is threatened with—and often has served—lawsuits by jury if he refuses to build up the debt.

Romantic Story is Told Of Origin of First Cheese

If tradition may be credited, it was an Arab herdsman who first "made" and tasted cheese. According to history, several thousand years before Christ an Arab herdsman set out one day with a bag of dates and a skin bottle, made from the stomach of a calf, filled with milk, as his lunch. Pasture him at lunch time, surveying his flock to see that everything was in order, perhaps casting a predatory eye upon a plump kid or two, opened his and then sitting down beneath the shade of a tree to partake of his simple meal.

As he untied the mouth of the skin "bottle" containing the milk he ever began smelling a preliminary sigh of content, a satisfied expression flitted across his face as he peered into the "bottle" after his first draught revealed something wrong. He poured out a sample and finds that, instead of milk, the bottle contains a buttery liquid, he had never seen before.

However, he is hungry, and the liquid is not disagreeable in taste, so he drinks it. Curiosity impels him to cut open the leather and find out what is inside. At once he observes what has happened to the "white" part of the milk. It appears to have gathered into lumpy, cheerish-white masses of moist, but solid material. It tastes good, too—like thick curds.

That change in the milk, he thinks has developed potentialities. It's good food, and a little squeezing would make it quite solid, and more convenient to carry than milk. He tells his experience and proposes to try it again, and his tribe takes up the idea.

The "rennin" and "pepsin" of the calf's stomach coagulated the milk. And so, if this story is to be believed, the world learned how to make one of the most widely used and popular foodstuffs ever added to the diet of mankind.

Dear Clarence and Mrs. Jeffrey:

We, your friends and neighbors, have gathered in your home tonight to show our good wishes and to extend to you our very best wishes for a long, happy, useful and prosperous life. Clarence, it is said that when a man slips you came, a stranger to our midst, but in your friendly cheerful manner you soon established a prudent proverb, "He that would have friends must show himself friendly." You have been ever willing to give of your time and labor to the work of the community, and now that you have so helpful a partner we will expect even better work.

To you Mrs. Jeffrey, coming a bride to our community, we extend a hearty welcome, and trust the years ahead will bring you true friends worthy of the name. As a token of our love and best wishes we ask you to accept this gift and may its use recall this happy event, and as a poet has said:

When you're adding up the joys of life which can't be bought with gold,

When you feel the need of someone who will stand through thick and thin,

Why call count ourselves most happy if you'll only count us in."

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors: Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Calnan, Mr. and Mrs. J. Williamson, Lewis Morton, Harry Carleton.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating breakfast and a letter came for ma from Ant Fanny, pop saying, If she's writting to say that Albt is coming back here, I hope she's got a bone in it so I can choke on it.

Dont be silly, it's prolerty just a little note saying she's been visiting Albt and hoping it wasn't too much trouble for her to have opened it, saying, That's exactly what it is, I'll read it to you.

With she started to, saying, Dear Fawleen, Albt had such an enjoyable time with you, he is scarcely believe it's all over.

Believe it, pop said, and ma said, Dont interrupt. And she kept on reading, saying, He seemed allready thinner when he got back, although let—me hasten to add he didn't have the slightest complaint to make regarding either the quality or quantity of your meals. But of course that's just like Albt, he wouldn't complain even if he had just cause, with naturelly I dont mean, he never under any circumstances loses weight when he's home, although that may be only a coincidence, the world is full of them.

Frank heaven it's not full of Albts, pop said, and ma said, Dont interrupt, Fanny goes on to say, In writing to express our appreciation Albt asks me to mention that Albt has been having some twinges of lumbago, with something never feels unless he has been sleeping on a hungry bed, I dont mean to imply that you deliberity gave him an uncomfortable bed, only I mean I'm yet'll probably be grateful to learn that one of your mattresses needs attention. Albt feels that this little hint is the least return he can make for your kindness, and if you care to answer his good intentions in the absence of his letter I am to refer to him personly to assure him what a pleasure it was to have him even for a brief time.

I'd write to him only it's a crime and offense to use such language in the mails, pop said.

Meaning it wouldn't be compli-

UNEXPECTED GUESTS FOR DINNER? — SERVE CHEESE

Jiffy Toast

For an emergency meal, Jiffy Toast makes a substantial dish, and a savory one too. Cut bread into 1-inch thick toast on one side. Sprinkle other side with grated cheddar cheese and place a thin slice of bacon or tomato on top. Sprinkle with paprika. Then place under the broiler until the cheese melts and browns slightly.

Welsh Rarebit

1 tbsp. butter
1-3 cup. flour
1-2 cup milk
1-2 lb. cheese
1-4 tsp. salt
1-4 tsp. mustard
Few grains of cayenne
Toast or crackers.

Grate the cheese or chop finely. Melt the butter. Stir the flour and seasonings until smooth, then pour in the milk and cook, stirring constantly, until it thickens. Add the cheese and as soon as it is melted, pour over toast or crisp crackers on hot plates.

A rarebit should be smooth and creamy, soft, mild flavored cheese is best.

CENTENARY

One of the most successful anniversaries and chicken dinners that Centenary has had the pleasure of witnessing was held on Sunday and Tuesday respectively. For the Sunday service Rev. Mr. Foley of Springbrook, was the special minister and he preached both morning and evening to a full church. He is a former pastor of Bayside circuit, having been on this charge 26 years ago. His discourses were very helpful and uplifting during the day. Many were the reminiscences indulged in by both Mr. and Mrs. Foley and the congregation. The choir under the leadership of Mr. D. J. Thrasher rendered two anthems morning and evening and the two guest-soloists Professor Angin of Belleville and Miss Rosie Conley of Stirling delighted the congregation with their singing.

On Tuesday evening the ladies put on their annual chicken dinner and many were the comments of appreciation that were expressed. As to be expected chicken was the main item on the menu and the ladies from far and near who catered there are considerably fewer chickens in Centenary community than formerly. Approximately 400 attended and the proceeds were most gratifying.

The decorations of the dining room were in keeping with Hallowe'en, orange serviettes, candles, oranges and black streamers, witches and the waitresses' caps completed the scheme. The tables were beautiful with plants, flowers, leaves, and this was the work of the C.G.I.T.

Everyone enjoyed the programme put on by the Misses May, Grover, and Messrs. Sills, Grange and Greenfield. It consisted of readings by Miss Mane dents, flute solos, violin, saw and accordion selections. Rev. Mr. Foley acted as chairman and conducted the community singing. After a vote of thanks, the National Anthem brought a very successful evening to a close.

C. G. I. T. HEARS MISSION TALK BY MRS. BROWN

The Canadian Girls in Training of Holloway Street United Church met at the home of Mrs. R. E. Newman, 44 Hillside Street, Saturday evening, October 26th, for an informal meeting. The purpose of the meeting was to give the girls an opportunity of meeting Mrs. Homer Brown, returned missionary from China.

Mrs. Brown gave the girls a very interesting address on the "Revolution in China" which was very timely as the Chinese as a most progressive people. In a picturesque way she stressed the rapidity with which they were adopting western civilization.

A unique climax to a very interesting hour of the girls' time was the presenting of an Educational Scrapbook of Canadian Life and Handicraft Activities to Mrs. Brown, a gift from Holloway Street Canadian Girls in Training. Mrs. Brown to be the link connecting the two organizations. These two societies being the only two organizations where C.G.I.T. applies a standing for the Canadian Girls in Training.

In accepting the book Mrs. Brown congratulated the leaders and girls on their project, not only for the fine workmanship and the educational value, but also for its value in helping to promote a greater world fellowship.

Mrs. Brown expects to return to China within the next two months.

PRESENTATION

An interesting event took place at the House of Refuge yesterday when Mrs. Isabel Soule, a valued employee for several years, was honored by the superintendent and staff, previous to her departure from the institution. The presentation of a handsome travelling bag was made and the following address read:

Dear Mrs. Soule,—

We have learned with great regret of your intention to leave us at the close of the month and wish to express to some degree the esteem in which we regard you. Each one of us has had reason to remember your many acts of kindness, and for all this we now gratefully thank you. We ask you to accept this club bag as our parting gift, and may our good wishes go with you wherever you may go.

Signed on behalf of your friends,
Mr. and Mrs. R. Sandercock
and family
Laura Kingston
Isabel Kennedy
Evelyn Sandercock.
James McLeod.

Mrs. Soule responded, thanking Mr. and Mrs. Sandercock and the staff for their gift and kindly acts extended to her during nearly seven years of labor they had been drawn closely together. Mrs. Soule said that she would miss all very much, especially the children and the many friends she had met there.

The occasion was in the form of a dinner party, the table and room being artistically decorated in keeping with Hallowe'en season. The party ended with all singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow."

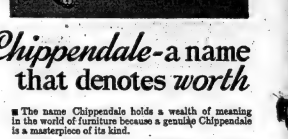
Chippendale-a name that denotes worth



■ The name Chippendale holds a wealth of meaning in the world of furniture because a genuine Chippendale is a masterpiece of its kind.

■ For over 50 years the name Sunlight has stood high among housewives, too, because it means a soap that is guaranteed pure. It is a masterpiece of soap! No other laundry soap bears the stamp "guaranteed pure".

■ Being all pure soap, Sunlight dissolves easily without hard rubbing, forming lots of rich, lasting suds that go to work quickly even in hard water and give you a snowy white, sweet smelling wash. The cleaning action of Sunlight is gentle and protects your garments from injury—keeping them out of the mending basket. Its purity saves your hands from the roughening effects of common laundry soaps, too.

■ Because Sunlight is all pure soap it is for that reason economical to use. Get a supply of Sunlight—you'll have an easier wash day and a whiter, cleaner wash.

CANADA AGREES TO APPLY SANCTIONS AGAINST ITALY

All Exports of Arms And War Materials Prohibited

TRADE NOT LARGE

Sanctions Made Effective By An Order-in-Council

Ottawa, Oct. 30 (CP)—Declaring its "continued and firm adherence to the fundamental aims and ideals of the League of Nations," the Dominion government has agreed to the League's four proposals of applying economic and financial sanctions against Italy as the aggressor nation in the Italo-Ethiopian war.

In a prepared statement made public last night Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced Canada would join with member nations in the prohibition of export of arms and war materials to Italy, issue in Canada of loans or credits to Italy, all imports from Italy to Canada, and export to Italy of certain "key products useful for military operations."

Decision as to what stand Canada would take as a member of the League in final body's proposed action against Italy in an effort to end the war in Ethiopia, has engaged the attention of the government from the moment it took office a week ago today.

While it would be impossible to estimate the potential value of Italian trade to Canada if this country went into the business of supplying war materials, the total trade with Italy as it exists at present is not comparatively large. During the fiscal year which ended March 31, 1935, the total trade was $6,248,608, with the exports from Canada slightly in excess of the imports.

Order-in-Council

Commodities which it is proposed to withhold from Italy, apart from munitions and war implements in which there has been no trade, include rubber, nickel, iron in its various raw forms, ferro-alloys and metal hardening elements such as manganese, chromium, vanadium and tungsten, and transport animals such as horses and mules.

Prohibitions with respect to export of arms, munitions and implements of war, and the issue of loans or credits to Italy, will be made effective at once by Order-in-Council. Prohibition or imports from Italy, and of export of the "key products" mentioned, will be made effective by November 15 or as soon as possible by Order-in-Council, and by Act of Parliament at the next session if necessary.

Wide Range of Imports

Imports from Italy which will be barred from entry to Canada cover a wide range of fancy foods, fruits, nuts, cotton and silk fabrics, gloves and wines.

Declaring the government regards the League as "an indispensable instrument for organizing and strengthening the forces of peace and goodwill in the world," Mr. King said it was the intention to make participation in the League the cornerstone of the government's policy in the general field. In addition to the economic and financial sanctions against Italy the government at the same time, Mr. King said, "desires to make it clear that it does not recognize any commitment binding Canada to adopt military sanctions, and that no such commitment could be made without prior approval of the Canadian parliament."

CABINET TALKS OF TRADE PACT

Premier King Holds First Press Conference Tuesday

Ottawa, Oct. 30 (CP)—Questions of resumed negotiations with the United States for a reciprocal trade pact and the Canada-Japan trade disagreement have been under discussion by cabinet council.

A statement on these trade deliberations by his government was made by Prime Minister Mackenzie King last night at a press conference at which he announced the Supreme Court of Canada would be asked to determine the constitutionality of social legislation passed by the former Bennett government last session.

Mr. King said on Thursday, the day after he took office, he had trade calls on Hon. Norman Armour, United States Minister to Canada, and Hon. Sotomatsi Kato, Japanese minister.

"Naturally," the Prime Minister stated, "we talked over the questions of trade outstanding between these countries and ours."

The subject of trade relations between the United Kingdom and Canada would have been the first trade matter taken up had it not been for the general election in Great Britain. But these discussions would be postponed only until Great Britain had decided on its government.

Every endeavor would be made to have the country ruling on the constitutional aspects of last season's social legislation before the Dominion-Provincial conference in the latter part of next month, Mr. King said. Any unforeseen delay, if such occurred, by obtaining a judgment from the Supreme Court would not interfere with the calling of the conference. Preparations for the parley were advancing, with all provincial premiers inviting their co-operation, and the only difficulty was to fix a date suitable to all.

Euler, Dunning And Gardiner to Have Jurisdiction

Ottawa, Oct. 30 (CP)—A committee of three cabinet ministers with trade minister Euler as chairman and finance minister Dunning and agriculture minister Gardiner as colleagues will have direct jurisdiction over future activities of the Canadian Wheat Board.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King made the announcement last night. Decision had been made, he explained, responsibility of the governor-in-council under the wheat board should be in the hands of the three ministers named whose work was closely linked up with the wheat business. Provisions of the statute could be scrutinized by the three-man committee. Decisions in this regard would be reached with the committee's advice by the governor-in-council.

Mr. King said he was not in a position to make a statement on whether or not there would be any change in the personnel of the wheat board established by the former Bennett administration with John I. McFarland as chairman.

With the objective of ensuring a fixed minimum price to producers, the board has been functioning for some months; and one of its first official acts was to fix the minimum price for No. 1 Northern at 87½ cents per bushel at Fort William.

Dionne Sisters' May Go on Screen

Boston, Oct. 30 (AP)—The Dionne sisters may go into the movies—that is, when they are old enough.

The fact negotiations are under way to put the famous quintuplets on the screen was disclosed today by one of their guardians, Hon. David Croll, Ontario Minister of Public Welfare.

"Yes, we are considering movie contracts," Mr. Croll said. "There are options on the quintuplets. They probably will appear in scenes of fiction when they are old enough. The government isn't exploiting them but is shielding their interests."

Although the quintuplets at the age of 17 months have piled up a fortune of some $200,000, they will not continue to enrich themselves indefinitely at this rate, Mr. Croll said.

"They are building up a fortune but there is no use in being money-mad," he said.

Mr. Croll was guest speaker at a dinner last night. During the day he visited Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston. Acting Governor Joseph L. Hurley of Massachusetts and other city and state officials.

Hollywood, Oct. 30 (AP)—Tuesday Johnson, executive of Twentieth-Century-Fox Film Studios, said today a scenario was being written about the career of Dr. A. R. Dafoe, medical attendant of the Dionne quintuplets.

He would not disclose whether plans were formulated to place the famous babies under contracts for use in the picture. Recently, overtures were made to have the "quints" in "The Milky Way," a forthcoming Harold Lloyd picture.

ALL APPLICATIONS FOR TRANSFERS TO U.S. ARE REFUSED

O. H. A. Held Important Meet at Peterborough Tuesday

NO EXCEPTIONS

All Amateurs Now in The States Must Return by Nov. 15th

Peterborough, Ont., Oct. 30 (CP)—The hockey season with rowing cyc and his passports fixed might just as well settle down in the old Kawartha land for the winter, if he lives in Ontario. That United States ruling is off.

The Ontario Hockey Association, meeting with slaps a promised mass departure of amateurs from Ontario to the United States, decided here last night all applications for transfers to the U.S. will be turned down. There are to be no exceptions.

In other years, the O.H.A. executive pointed out, the tendency had been to treat emigration lightly, because hockey interest across the border was greatly aroused by having Canadians in the lineups and Ontario was not adverse to doing U.S. hockey a good turn.

"The migration of hockey players to the United States this year has grown to such proportions, however, that this policy can no longer be followed," said a statement issued following last night's meeting.

21 In One U. S. Club

"When it is pointed out that one U.S. club has applied for no less than 21 players from all parts of Canada, it is at once apparent that if applications are to be granted in such wholesale fashion the history of our older body will be completely wrecked."

Ontario amateurs who are already across the border must return before November 15 or they will automatically forfeit the O.H.A. will make use of its affiliation with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada in forcing such action through the United States, as well as Canada was not announced.

A player suspended by the O.H.A. would, however, be automatically placed under suspension, whatever he happened to be living and playing.

O.S.D. LOSE TO ALBERT COLLEGE

Score is 11-3 With One Touch Scored in Peculiar Manner

Playing a scheduled game of the Bay of Quinte Senior O.S.S.S.A. loop Albert College climbed to within one game of the league-leading O.S.D. when they vanquished the O.S.D. entry 11-3. Fairly good weather conditions prevailed although rain in the early afternoon made the ground going.

No score was in evidence the first quarter, playing being very even and neither side getting within a scoring position. Early in the second Albert got away to a 40 yard run to bet the ball on the O.S.D. 25 yard line. Local boys held well, forcing Jones to kick to the dead line. A short and low punt by Jones took enough to recover his own kick and race over for a touch. It was a pretty play and caught the O.S.D. backs napping. There was no further scoring the half ended Albert College 6; O.S.D. 0.

Early in the third quarter Albert intercepted a pass and another five points when Glover, their rangy middle lineman, ran it back for a 70 yard run. It was not converted.

In the last quarter the O.S.D. team opened up. Alexander broke away from his own 40 and ran for a touchdown but it was only to be called back to the Albert 25-yard line because the ball fell forward dropped perfect placement kick between the posts for three points. Hood recovered a fumble deep in Albert territory. On successive plunges Lavalle and Rochfort advanced it to the Albert one-yard line but on the next play Albert took over and punted and Albert recovered. They immediately kicked over the goal line. O.S.D. were presenting as the final whistle blew.

For the visitors Burton, Fox and Glover were well, while for the O. S. D. Malcolm, Hawthorne and Dixon played good rugby.

4 DRAW DECISIONS

Doyle Wins Main Bout And Stone Defeats Fazz

Amateur wrestling was introduced to Belleville sportdom at the Arena last night when six rousing and interesting bouts made up a card, that was not so well attended, but provided most interesting to watch. Local fans were treated to a real exhibition of the finesse of their professional cousins of the mat game, the amateur bouts were in no sequence, however, with the result, that many a sore head and back is being nursed by them today. So delicious and fast were the bouts, that four of the six bouts presented ended in a draw fight, but each held the interest of about one hundred paid customers. Jim Storm and Jack Doyle being the only winners declared by Referee Wally Elliott. Both boys displayed unbelievable knowledge of the grunt and groan business when hammer-locks, flying mares, toe-holds, head-locks, body slams and even the pugnacious attacks, a la Walter Farrell and Howard Cantenwine, were sometimes cautiously applied.

No Stalling

No stalling or deliberate efforts to take a rest in the ring were in evidence during the entire programme, although some of the contestants got the ring all but committed oft. In the first bout Bill Storms of Toronto, defeated Ray Mayrella, 13, to a draw after 15 minutes of torrid grappling. Storms worked in a methodical manner to gain the win, but Mayrella was willing to mix matters but lack of experience cost both boys dearly. After the scores ten minutes of speedy wrestling Jim Storm pinned Gordon Stone, considered to be the mat in the second scrap. Stone suddenly gaining a full nelson and Storm was forced to submit. "Chuck" Thorne 137 and Jack Murphy 140, both of Toronto, were matched in what saw Murphy slightly greasy at the bell terminated the bout at a draw. Both boys proved real exponents of the art of modern wrestling and gave a fine account of themselves. They repeatedly used elbows, mixed holds and knees to gain the upper hand in the scrap. Thorne even so much as tried to take Murphy for a ride on his nape, a la Canzoneri, but without success, as the bell stopped the bout. Jack Doyle, 160, and Ed Gasley grappled 15 minutes to a draw fight, with the latter getting the best showman of the night. Gasley strutted around the ring with a professional style and repeatedly roughed matters with the established Hainault. Doyle finally booted Hainault clear of the ring and proved the aggressor in the even draw after 15 minutes of torrid grappling. Hainault was given the decision before the bell terminated the bout. Hainault worked in true orthodox style, however, and displayed many interesting holds in his semi-finish affair, that was over the 30-minute route with the fans being unanimous in win. Fred Churchill and Ken Fazz grappled to a draw each with the ring a fall. Fazz won the first fall with a body press after 21 minutes of hard battling, while Churchill came back to win the second fall with a cradle and scissors hold after 18 six minutes. Although both tried feverishly for the third and deciding fall they could not get the nod and the bout ended in a draw.

Semi-Final Main Bout

The main scrap of the evening saw Jack Doyle win a third fall over "Chuck" Stone in the time. Stone was doubtlessly the best of the card as plenty of action and clever ring knowledge was displayed. In true Jim London style Cook won the first fall with an arm lock, which was followed by a body slam. Doyle battled back to retain Cook with the Indian Death lock and gain the second fall with a crab hold, which forced Cook to concede the fall. So badly was Cook messed up that he proved an easy victim for Doyle, who won the third fall in short order with a torrid body slam that left Cook lying helplessly on the mat. In all, the bouts were exciting by interesting and deserved better patronage. During the Super Thursday night's professional bouts were announced during which the famous John Grippo will meet Al Dunlop in the main bout.

Mahoney Takes Printed Swipe At A. Brundage

New York, Oct. 30—(AP)—Jeremiah T. Mahoney, National President of the Amateur Athletic Union and a leader in the fight against United States participation in the Nazi Olympic games, has taken another printed swipe at Avery Brundage and Brig. General Charles H. Sherrill.

Writing in the current issue of "Liberty" Mahoney lampoons the motives of Brundage, President of the Olympic Committee, and General Sherrill, member of the Committee, as "Two Little Rich Boys," both of whom favor American participation.

"It is not an accident that Dr. Lewald (President of the German Olympic Committee) and Messrs. Sherrill and Avery Brundage are saying practically the same thing. They are of one mind. They have one aim and that is to get the United States with the Olympics in Berlin even though the rest of the United States stays out. They are very upon sport to hold the Olympics in a city like Berlin and on before the whole world as having ended fair play and sportsmanship and goodwill to men everywhere.

"As for General Sherrill's views that the Nazis were all right, he will be a great anti-semitic move in America. I think the American people can be trusted to take care of that. And if Mr. Avery Brundage is reasonable, fair-minded people, they will fling General Sherrill's brass back at Hitler and ask him what right he has, with his anti-Semitic policies, to impose viewpoint to speak in the name of the American people, which he grossly misrepresents."

SOME TEAMS TO FALL SATURDAY

18 Squads in The U. S. Are Still Unbeaten And Untied

New York, Oct. 30.—(AP)—The ranks of the mighty but untied United States College football elevens, 18 at last week's end, certain to lose at least two members this week-end and further reduction will be effected later on when more than half of them get together Saturday.

The list by sections, East—Temple, Fordham, Dartmouth, New York University Princeton and Syracuse; Catholic University, West Virginia, Pittsburgh, Duke, Notre Dame, Marquette and Iowa, South—North Carolina, Southern California, Vanderbilt, Baylor and Texas Christian; Far West—Washington and University of California at Los Angeles.

Saturday's pairings find Notre Dame matched against Ohio State in the standout game and California against Southern.

Among the survivors of the hurly-burly Saturday, Fordham appears to have the best chance of going through unscathed. The Rams tackle Manhattan, North Carolina State's Wolf pack Saturday in what seems to be the easiest assignment for their schedule.

Army's chances depend on the Cadets' ability to get by Pittsburgh and Notre Dame on successive Saturdays and then, of course, the navy. The soldiers travel to Pittsburgh Nov. 9 and meet the Panthers here Nov. 16. Temple meets Michigan State Saturday and two weeks hence the Owls take on Marquette.

250 Drowned Geese Given to Unemployed

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 30 —(CP)—About 250 plump wild geese, driven from their homes by severe gales, swept to their death over the falls of Niagara early today and contributed among unemployed here.

Many of the birds were trapped in the pool below the Falls by Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Game Warden Roy Mums of Chippewa and his aides.

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 30 (CP)—A device which emits a noise resembling the safety of a different vehicle has been attached to 32 fire horses in this city to forestall John Farrell, fire commissioner's fears in false alarms.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

"Larry" Gayer and Jimmie Ehler, two of Belleville's hockey players, have had their hockey equipment and headed southward to try out with Harry Holmes' Cleveland entry yesterday afternoon. On Saturday Gayer received a wire from Harry Holmes to the effect he would welcome both him and Ehler to his training camp. The two lads are working out daily at the Cleveland Kingorium, where Cleveland Barney Lee League games are played. With the recent addition of the Boston Bruins and the Pittsburg Shamrocks there is a large opening for new players and matched in the minor league ranks. Jimmie Ehler has had a varied hockey career in the amateur ranks having played with Belleville and the Stock Yards team of the Toronto Mercantile League. Jimmie learned his hockey in Belleville, having played juvenile, junior and intermediate with success. He is a defenceman and has the distinction of being able to mete out stiff body checks, which should stand him in his professional debut. He is around 24 years old, we believe. "Larry" Gayer has played professional hockey for some years past, first with Philadelphia, then Syracuse, then with the St. Louis Flyers, where he led the scorers in the American Association League four years ago. His last professional appearance was with the St. Paul Saints of the Central League. Gayer has been out of pro. hockey for the last two seasons, but still is a pastmaster at stickhandling. The boys left by train for Cleveland yesterday afternoon. Incidentally Albert "Toots" Holway, who has been playing hockey with the London Tecs, is still in town and has not decided whether he will retire from pro. hockey or not.

Local wrestling fans are beginning to sense the autumn season as surrounds Thursday night's main bout at the Belleville Arena when John Katan, the grandson of the mat game, takes on Al "Bunny" Dunlop, the latter of Sarnia, while Katan has had numerous shots at the "world's championship" and although never quite successful has always proved a capable opponent. Of course he has met his stiffest opposition when he has met Ed Don George, Jim Londos and Ed Strangler Lewis, to gain his end and victory. Katan is one of the few grapplers along the lines of Jim Browning, as he resorts wholey to scientific wrestling and is not apt to speak with viper and vitality if necessary. Dunlop is a fast and clever mat performer, but he has yet to prove he is his returning to his medical practice? Well, Katan takes the palmers' fancy the same as Dr. Wilson did. The promoters ran into a snag in the semi-final bout, however, when it was found that Tom Farrell did not relish the idea of dropping back into semi-final bouts. Tuesday night, Chief Lynx and should be permitted to appear as a headliner," stated Petrof yesterday, as the second Chief Lynx is the celebrated Joe Katelnach, instead of Mike Anderio, who agreed to meet the winner later. All bouts Thursday night will be of the best two out of three falls, another feature that should be interesting.

Here's one for your scrap book: tion: "Mother, what's the idea of making you sleep in here every night?"

Mother: "Hush, Junior dear, you only have to sleep on the mantelpiece two more months and then your father will be in a "Believe-It-Or-Not" cartoon.

For the purposes of wedging up a very successful season and also to present the year's prizes and trophies the Belleville Golf Club will hold open house in their club rooms this evening. The usual programme and buffet lunches will ensue after each presentation. Incidentally the Belleville Golf Club enjoyed one of its most successful reasons in its history, we have been authentically informed by the club's popular working and genial secretary, Joe Calnan.

With a second period splurge Queen's Rocky Beach's Alumni Gaels interscholastic football squad earned an 11-6 victory over Frank Richardson's O.S.D. boys yesterday. A 75-yard run by Jack Reid for a touchdown was one of the highlights. Incidentally the Alumni boys were registered by the Albert squad was of a rather fishy nature. Albert had blocked the O.S.D. five and four men of the O.S.D. defence, thinking the ball dead when in reality it was merely fumbled. Albert player to grab through, pick up the pigskin and carry over for a soft touch. Incidentally Frank Cunningham's G. S. U. record of 11 consecutive kicks at late and despite their inability to make use of their football people.

With all the precision of their professional brethren the local wrestling fans displayed little short at the arena last eve. Although they show was not patronized to any great extent, the Taylor-cocked camp gave a scattering of real exhibition and lacked a laugh. Naturally the amateurs did not put on the ferocious exhibitions of professional showmanship displayed by their pro. cousins, but one thing is sure, they gave all their all and, there was not a dull moment in the whole programme. In fact the amateurs' first appearance before an audience, but if they continue to progress as they have it is certain that they will outdraw the pros. before the end of a year. The two actual winners were declared Jimmy Storm and Jack Doyle, the over "Hank" Cook in the final scrap and Jim Stone, who won his bout over Cliff Fazz. The remainder four grappled to a draw. All in all the bouts were quite evenly matched and interesting to watch, inasmuch as the contestants gave all they had and tried to win from gong to gong. Their efforts deserved better patronage than was afforded.

RANGERS PLAY ALL-STAR TEAM

N. Y. Team Holds to Same Cautious Style as Last Year

Calgary, Oct. 30—(CP)—New York Rangers outscored an all star northwest hockey squad, 5-1, here last night in the first of a three-game exhibition hockey series. A crowd of 1,500 saw the cautious National Leaguers in their second workout today.

Murray "Drummie" Murdock and his two mates on the left-handed second stanza. Bepper Thompson and Lynn Patrick shot him a pass for his second more three minutes after the third period started. Thompson, a speedy centre who stood out for the minor leaguers, counted only way through the third.

JOHN KATAN TO TAKE ON DUNLOP

This Should be One of The Best Bouts of Local Season

John Katan who will oppose Al Dunlop in the main bout of Thursday night's wrestling show at the Belleville Arena is reputed to be Canada's foremost wrestler of the day, having met and defeated Earl McCready in Hamilton last season for the title. John Katan has been in the wrestling game for many years and has trained and toe, in a commend the best grapplers in the business, having wrestled for the world's championship on three occasions.

Katan is an orthodox wrestler and will prove a worthy opponent for the pugnacious Al Dunlop, who defeated Chief Lynx, the Sarnia Reserve Indian badman last week. While in the ring Katan is always a gentleman and never assumes the villain role. He is an exponent of straight wrestling holds and uses successfully such holds as the flying mare, hammer-lock and headlock in which to subdue his opponents, with his favorite hold is the body scissors, made famous by Joe Stecher, former world's heavyweight champion. Katan will prove a big favorite locally owing to his genlitmanlike appearance and likable wrestling holds while in the ring. He is doubtful if any more interesting celebrity will ever to appear locally.

Change in Semi-Final

Owing to unforseen circumstances there has been a slight change in the semi-final bout of the night when Howard Anderson, better known as Farmer Jim Hamm, Belleville Indian badman, will replace Dan Petroff against Joe Katelnach, the Winnipeg wrestler. The promoters feel however that the substitution is a very happy one, as the original bout as Chief Lynx will be out to revenge last week's defeat at the hands of Al Dunlop. Katelnach, on the other hand, has never tasted defeat in a local ring and will be out to retain his undefeated line of credits, as he is making his first and waiting for a shot at either

ROCHESTER TEAM IS REAL SMART

Play 1-1 Tie With The Amerks At Oshawa Arena

Oshawa, Ont., Oct. 30.—(CP)—Pre-season games sometimes cast much light on the chances of a hockey team in the regular league schedule. A new entry in the International League this season, Rochester Red Wings—held the strong New York American club of the National League to a 1-1 tie here last night.

All the scoring came in a lightning-fast second stanza and the International team was the first to score. Eddie Progan, member of Toronto Maple Leafs' Frank, blazed the puck past Tiny Roy Worters in the Amerks' net after taking a pass from Bert Whitley. Farrell, Marani was playing his first professional game. He signed with Americans and was obtained from Rochester. The New Yorkers tied up the game two minutes later when Tommy Anderson scored on Joe Jerwa's pass.

Moe Roberts in the Rochester nets played a smart game in limiting the Amerks to a single tally. Terrible Herbie "Shaker" Nelson, Nels Stewart and Harry Oliver worked as a smooth defence unit and gave Roberts plenty of trouble.

Nalma Smith, former Sudbury player who performed with Oshawa last year, also signed an American contract yesterday and played his first game as a pro with the Wings.

DON DEACON IS SURE TO STICK

Detroit, Mich. Oct. 30—(CP)—One of the most promising of the new players to report with the Detroit Olympics of the International League this year is Don Deacon, Regina boy.

Manager Jack Adams and Coach Hap Holmes predict Deacon will make the grade in pro ranks and in their estimation the International League outfit to a regular position with the major league Red Wings.

Acquisition of Deacon works in with a curiously-announced plan of Adams to use Olympics as training ground for young players. Deacon, along with Johnny Sherf, Walter Brook, Ronnie Hudson and Pete Lacombe will help fill the places left vacant by the graduation of eight of last year's championship team. The players who were sold or traded were all seasoned campaigners, who at one time or another had starred in the National League, but failed to stick.

Deer Regulations

FOR 1935

Permissible to Use One Dog For Four Hunters With Three as Maximum. Hunters Not Allowed to Shoot Deer While in Water.

As there still appears to be in the minds of some of those who contemplate taking advantage of the annual deer hunting season this year some confusion as to a proper interpretation of the regulations now in existence it might be well to make some explanation.

There is a partial book law in effect, which provides that the shooting of does or fawns is prohibited except that any party of four hunters is entitled to one doe or fawn,—but either three of the kill must be bucks, though unquestionably the entire kill of four deer which such party of four might take could be bucks. A party must consist of eight members before they are entitled to two does or fawns, and further two does or fawns is the limit for any party regardless of its numbers. Some would argue that it is difficult to detect difference between a buck and a doe under certain conditions when hunting. The Department is willing to concede the possibility of mistake with the result that provision is thus made to legalize the taking of one doe or fawn by a party of four hunters, and two does or fawns by a party of eight hunters or more, and thus make allowance for what might be honest mistakes by the hunter.

There are some who have the impression that there must be, in the case of a hunting party of any four, three bucks killed before they may legally kill a doe or fawn. This is not correct as it may so happen that a party of four, or any number less than eight might be so unfortunate as during their hunt as to kill one deer only, and then possibly a doe or fawn. Similarly, a party of eight or more hunters might take only two deer,—does or fawns. In such cases as these and others in which the parties do not complete, such hunting, the number of animals to which their licenses would entitle them, and the number of does or fawns involved not exceeding the number they are permitted to take, there could be no reasonable objection to them being in possession of the carcasses of such does or fawns and bringing them out of camp.

Members of hunting camps who have secured camp deer licenses could legally consume a doe or fawn in camp, or in the case of a party of eight members who had two camp deer licenses, they could legally consume two does or fawns, though they would then, of course, be obliged to bring out only buck deer according to the number of licensed hunters in the party.

In the case of the use of dogs Those in favour of dogs frequently argued when the question was up for discussion from time to time that the dog was very essential in locating wounded deer and also in assisting the hunter to secure buck deer, which is desirable at any time and which has now been made compulsory under the present Game and Fisheries Act. This being the last endeavour was made to frame a regulation to allow sufficient dogs for this purpose and yet not permit large packs of dogs to be taken into the woods by any sporals hunting party. As these provisions now stand there can be an organized party of four before the use of a dog is permitted,—and in such case one dog only. Under the privileges which applies to the taking of two does or fawns, the use of two dogs is permitted to any party of five, six, seven or eight hunters. There must be nine or more hunters in a party before the use of the maximum number of three dogs permitted under the Regulations would be allowed. The object of this is to prevent more than one or two dogs being allowed to run deer at one time by the party in whose possession they may be found. It is necessary that each dog so used for the hunting of deer be licensed at a fee of $2.00.

It has been provided that it shall be unlawful to molest or shoot deer while swimming in the water or any lake or river, though this does not prevents the shooting of deer about to enter the water or after having left the water.

It is hoped that the foregoing information will clear up the doubt which appears to exist regarding the proper interpretation of the present deer hunting regulations.

Valetta, Malta, Oct. 29 (AP) — The British transport Nevralia left today for England with 426 women and children, wives and families of British naval officers and British civilians.

Today's departing groups were granted free passage on the ship and trains and free return passage after three months if the international situation is cleared up.

WALKER TRIAL VENUE CHANGED

Justice Kingstone Orders Change to Middlesex County

St. Thomas, Ont., Oct. 28—(CP)—A change of venue in the first sitting of the criminal assize court in Middlesex County, likely next January, was ordered by Mr. Justice Kingstone today in the case of Henry M. Walker, facing seven charges of obtaining money by false pretences and connected with menace by threat.

Mr. Ball, for Walker, referred to the embarrassment the accused faces in Elgin owing to his association with the premier and pointed out no lawyer could be found in St. Thomas ready to swear the accused's affidavit and the services of J. G. Gilfander of London, in the court house at the time, were obtained.

Norman F. Newton of London, special crown prosecutor, believed Walker could get a fair trial in Elgin or any other county in Ontario.

Crown Fears

Justice Kingstone realizing the seriousness of the request, adjourned court to permit him to consider the application. Before court Landahly returned to the court Mr. Ball made the discovery that one of the crown witnesses, Eugene Sweet of Belmont and Glen Hamilton of Fingal, (Premier Hepburn's brother-in-law) appeared on the panel of petit jurors.

Mr. Ball used this as a further argument it might be difficult to empanel an unprejudiced jury. He did not suggest the inclusion of the two crown witnesses had been done designedly but he submitted under the circumstances it was unwise to proceed.

Mr. Newton declared the inclusion of the crown witnesses on the petit jury panel was purely an accident or coincidence.

Although he did not wish to accuse the two witnesses of dishonesty the case with the other petit jurors there was the suggestion and possibility of much influence in view of the fact human nature was human, he said and probable.

"I really don't think the accused could have had any anxiety about being tried in this court," Mr. Landahly stated. "But under all the circumstances I am inclined to think in the interests of justice the accused should be tried in another county." Mr. Ball pressed the submission that the case should be tried in Middlesex. "I am not going to say it would be impossible to get a fair trial in Elgin, but it would be very difficult," he said.

Sudden End of Action

His Lordship stressed his statement there should be no reflection cast on Premier Hepburn in the matter.

"I don't want the public to think Premier Hepburn was seeking to have the case heard here because it is in his own constituency," he said.

The change of venue brought the session court to a sudden and unexpected ending.

CONFESSES TO HORRIBLE CRIME

Choked Girl With Rope And Then Criminally Assaulted Her

Auburn, Me., Oct. 28 (AP)— Guy Verrier, 21, confessed to police he choked lucky Sheriff Ralph Riley said, before criminally assaulting 13-year-old Annie E. Knights at Fairfield, Oct. 17.

Riley said Verrier told him he choked her with a rope, tied her body to a sapling, and criminally assaulted her."

Verrier was arrested on a charge of criminally assaulting a 14-year-old Livermore schoolgirl.

A statewide search has been underway for the assailant of the Knights girl and Mrs. Leonard Brown, now Louis J. Brann and the executive council offered a reward of $1,000 for the capture of the slayer.

FORGED DIVORCE CAUSE OF SUIT

Woman Seeks Annulment of Contract Believed Valid

New York, Oct. 29.— (AP)— A forged divorce decree brought Gladys Waters Humphrey, artists' model, into court today seeking an annulment of a marriage which for 10 years both she and J. Humphrey Carnahan Great War flyer, believed to be valid.

She told Supreme Court Referee John Herring Humphrey had what was presumed to be an interlocutory decree of divorce from Irene Brock Humphrey to whom he was married in Toronto in 1918.

Only last December when her husband was on a trip to Toronto, the plaintiff said, he learned his first wife had never been served with papers in the action. A check up in New York disclosed no suit had been filed and the signature on the decree was forged.

Referee Therney said the lawyer who purported to have obtained the divorce "seems to have done this indiscriminately. He was no better than a gangster with a blackjack".

Decision was reserved after it was brought out that there was no possibility of a reconciliation between the couple.

LITTLE—In loving memory of our dear son Harry Little who passed away October 30, 1930.

Time rolls on, we are reminded,
Days, months and years crushed,
When God took you, oh so quickly,
And we all in sadness were hushed.

To the bloom of life death claimed you,
In the pride of early days;
But we hope to meet you some day,
And be with you always.

COMMANDER III IS EASY WINNER

Boothina, Finalist, Law Court and Man's Pal also finished.

The Blue Boy faded out later but Commander III's mates stayed the second won rather easily in 1 minute, 53 seconds. There was a great struggle for second and third and the race with Man's Pal and Finalist placed ahead of Wychwood Abbot, Law Court, Pegasus, Boothina and the rest of the field.

Canadian Stars

Canadian ticket holders plus the attendance of the race at Finalist cleared about $147,940, the 22, who drew also-runs receiving $1,860 apiece.

American purchasers of tickets in the sweeps drew $1,423,800 to their winnings when the result of today's race was learned. A total of $3,770,000 or about 42.5 per cent of the pot goes to the United States.

Sir Ambrose held tickets on Commander III. Each gets $147,200.

Ticket-holders on Commander III are: John Ohlson, 1414 South Dixie Highway, Hollywood, Calif.; "Golden Nugget," 704 12nd Street, College Point, N.Y.; "We Need It," Portchester, N.Y.; Mrs. Ogden Reid, 1751 Vanburen Street, The Bronx, N.Y.; Mrs. Payne Whitney, 972 Fifth Avenue, New York, and Louis Rabinowitz, 939 Beck Street, The Bronx, N.Y.

Six more Americans held tickets on Man's Pal, the horse which came in second. Each one of these tickets pays $72,650.

Two tickets were held in the United States on Finalist.

Betting Heavy

Betting on the race was the heaviest in Living Memory, while the field of 40 was the largest since 1876.

Commander III is a French-bred horse His owner G. R. C. Foster is Joint Master of the Cambridgeshire Harriers, and a comparative newcomer to the turf. The trainer Basil Briscoe, lives at Newmarket, Suffolk and Oxford.

Both the winner and the runner-up, Man's Pal, were ridden by teen-age apprentices. Harrott's victory is specially fine as all the more notable because Commander III was "off" a day after the Derby of the course.

Wychwood Abbot tried very hard to better his last year's performance, though most heavily handicapped at 10 pounds.

The winner, runner-up last year, with favourites in their respective fields found few backers, Bookmakers say, actually admit they have won large sums of money on the race—barely admission for them to make.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Irregular stock market churned at a furious rate today but, with the exception of the utilities and a few specialties, prices were unable to surmount the long offerings of profit takers and short sellers.

Selling spread into the Canadian Pacific yielding fractionally. On the Curb, however, Distillers Corp.-Seagrams and Hiram Walker proved resistant, while Lake Shore gained. Dominion Government Bonds ruled steady. Canadian Funds were 1-16th of a cent lower at 98 7-8 cents.

The utility shares yielded the brunt of the day's declines to later dealings but Consolidated Gas, United Corp., United Gas Improvement, Western Union, American Telephone and North American were about unchanged to slightly higher.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 30 (CP)—Bullish sentiment was less assertive in the stock afternoon following a strong display on the International section of Toronto Exchange during the morning. Weak spots in the New York list had a depressing effect here and gains were trimmed throughout the list.

Action bulked in the liquor and oil stocks as well as in Penny Ferrier and Ford A. Penny Ferrier scanned for a new high for the year at 11 1-2 on heavy trading to hold a gain of a point while Ford A. continued under selling pressure and the price weakened to 29 1-2 off 3-4 following stocks held gains 1-4 to 7-8, all three leaders, Walker, Seagram and Industrial Alcohol, turning over in good volume.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Oct. 30.—(CP)—The sell-off on the New York Board alone in action on the mining section of Toronto Exchange today except for a few spots where buyers were showing by early afternoon, mainly in the medium price-golds. San Antonio backed up 15 cents to 2.70 and Gold Lake was offered in volume at a loss of 4 cents.

Senior golds and most of the base metals maintained fractional bridge alone changed hands in volume. Small gains and advances other base metals holding steady. Volume was scarcely up to normal at 350,000 shares. Exploration was a little stronger and Eldorado weakened 2 to 2.27.

BEAR IS SHOT

North country bears have not gone into hibernation yet, is reported by Lockin's Meat Store window where a 75-pound cub black bear is now on exhibition. The animal was shot in the vicinity of Actinolite by Mr. Dave Cox, resident, of that district.

Board Room Gossip

As Supplied to Biggar and Crawford By Financial Service

Sudbury Basin

The Stock has been a strong spot of late on the theory that a basic change advancing to a new high price for the year. In some quarters it is believed that the company may decide on the payment of a small interim dividend at the end of the year. However, Financial Service learned a few months ago that the management did not intend to pay any dividends before next year.

As all the current price the stock is selling at 60 per cent of its asset value of slightly over $3 a share. The company's holdings of Falconbridge Nickel shares are equal to $2.40 per Sudbury share.

Chief assets of the company are 1,000,000 shares of Falconbridge Nickel, 332,467 shares of Canadian Nickel, 100,000 shares of Sheritt Gordon, 60,000 Seattle, 780,000 Hudson Bay Consolidated, 50,000 Hard Rock, 34,137 Sullivan, 80,-332 Beaufor, 36,850 Nipissing and other share holdings.

One group of Canadian stocks that offers interesting possibilities for income and speculation is the electric utility group. This industry has not only recovered from the depression but in September showed production of electricity in this country was at a new record. As the use of electricity enters into about every line of endeavour it is evident that conditions generally are rapidly getting back to normal levels.

Despite the improvement in the industry's position, public utility issues are still available at very handsome yields. Montreal Canada Power yields 6.7 per cent. British Columbia Power 6 5% per cent. Quebec Power 6.7 per cent. Canada Northern Power 5.8 per cent.

As pointed out yesterday, the Canadian markets have considerably behind New York, this despite the fact that Canada, whose ability in the business tops of six years ago closely paralled that of the United States, has come back to a little faster and further. On this reasoning, Canadian stocks should have recovered at least to the same extent. If not more, than American stocks. It is hoped that the lost ground will be made up.

The buying of Power Corporation the past week is also of interest, coupled with the issuance of the September figures showing the output of the companies controlled by Power Corporation. With the exception of Northern Ontario Power Company every one of the component units recorded a gain in kilo month the total output amounting to 167.3 million k.w.h. as against 143.6 million k.w.h. last year, an improvement of over 16 per cent.

In the opinion of the Trader in Securities Service the Toronto Market is not at a level suggesting the immediate use of margin but in the price structure unless a terrific business boom is in the offing. If the motivating cause of the rise in commodity prices in the past two weeks may be verified by Tuesday's figures certainty can hardly be overlooked.

A good deal of profit taking has taken its appearance in New York recently. It is probably a reflection of a growing tendency on the part of investors to have written investment counsel advisers to stress the importance of commitments which are based more on technical considerations than on the basic trend, although a majority concede to be upward.

According to private advices from London, Canada is expected to increase the common dividend to 25 cents a share quarterly.

The biggest money-saving event of the week at Hicken's—the Rexall Drug Store.

"Installment Marriage"

by

Janet Doran

"I can't pay Dr. X," Judy explained so coolly, Sally instantly knew that John Reid ill in the hospital with appendicitis. You'll have to take it back!"

The man stared at her angrily, his hard, bright little black eyes snapping with suspicion and rage. Judy grew with contempt and anger, but she stood, head erect.

"It was my birthday," she explained, "the gave it to me for my birthday."

CHAPTER 28.

Across the dull, gloomy fields of the coal lay on the corridor between them, and little about the stock dark little mat faded away, and Judy saw again that night of her birthday, that sorry countenance, the cosily quiet coziness of her bedroom, and the close, gleaming she is living, beautiful fan of rich, dark, glowing hair, the hilarious high-hearted nonsense.

Then the long vigil, waiting for Michael's return, with the coal a living reminder of his love, his devotion. And the blackened little birthday cake a mute memorial to his anger.

"Have you thought of a loan bank?" The ferret's chill tones cut into Judy's train of thought and yanked her rudely back to reality.

"They take care of such emergencies very satisfactorily, and the interest is negligible, really."

Judy stared at him intently, wondering that Michael could ever have done business with such a man. Michael, whose impulses were a little hoop-headed, crackled and sizzled and crackled and flared under the slightest hint of condescension or coercion.

"I have," she heard herself saying quietly, a little wearily, "my own resources, much as the law allows."

"Well, the little man bristled angrily, "then you must meet these payments with the letter of the law, or we shall have to take legal action." His glance was cold and hostile, and flexed his fingers together briskly, as if undoing the precious bundles of money.

"It will take it all, and more," Judy explained dully, "to pay the hospital and doctors. It was a very bad case. I'm sorry, Mr. Stockton."

"You have a good job, Mrs. Jerome," the banker began carefully, almost craftily, "you are still employed?"

"Yes." Judy's dull tone convinced him that she did not guess the purpose of his question. Then the shock back on them, and prove the trust of which told you. Just look at the Central Engineering Company. I assure you this is my last, and final time that can come to me than ..... food, almost. But I simply can't pay for it. And..... I don't keep things I can't pay for!"

She did not wait for his reply. She knew there was nothing more to say. She had brought back the card, and explained why she could not keep it, now, or at any later date.

The loan company's money would make sure that Michael had enough money to be cared at the hospital. Judy had that much to comfort her, as she hurried to work, through the chill, damp mist. Hospital bills had to be paid promptly. Tommy Jennefer had told her wisely. "It's the lady on the dollar that brings you the extra attention when you're down for the count, Judy."

The office contribution would go a little toward their overdue rent. Perhaps Bill Cummings would wait for the rest. Perhaps she could pay a little each week.

And deep down in her heart Judy's fears grew, like a giant mushroom. Perhaps she was a little crazy, a little foolish, to think there was any way out. She could not possibly pay all those debts out of her salary. There was no human way to stretch that small sum to include even a very little on each of them!

It was noon, when Ted Hoyt came out of his office and found her working feverishly, in the deserted main office. Her pale face was damp with worry and weariness, and her gray eyes were a little bloodshot from lack of sleep and anxiety.

"Judy!" he said gently, winding as he saw her hand tremble, as she reached out for a fresh card, and proceeding as she tried to concentrate blurred, tired vision on the cancelled figures of the legal form. "Judy, you haven't eaten yet! And as she glared up at him frankly, he added, "Has been a little unsteady as she ran a shaking hand across her face. "What do you expect you can take care of Michael, if you neglect your health this time?"

"..... I forgot about lunch," she confessed. "I was going to get a malted milk later on—a sandwich."

His blue eyes were dark with contempt, scolding as gently took the papers from her tense fingers, and dropped them into her desk drawer.

"You're lunching with me," he said firmly. "As your employer I insist you take care of your health. Besides, we have to call on a very nasty, very persistent Gasbarn Shylock. It's about a hot coal, Judy."

Judy's face went even whiter, as she pushed back her chair and stood up, holding to the desk as if for very support.

"About.... about the coal, Ted?"

She forgot that she hadn't called him by that name since her shipwreck. "I—I took it back this morning! I told them I couldn't possibly pay for it!"

"I know," Ted agreed soothingly; and he had a very funny notion about the love of this Michael Reid. "I know he can take his stupider lawyers and force a writ to pay one of her landlord's debts. He tried to attach your wages, Judy." As she saw her head shakily over and over again, Ted's chagrin turned on the chair until the chandelier were about to fall. "I remained calm, casual. "My only regret, Judy, is that he must consult lawyer, cheating me out of the satisfaction of throwing him right through with them. How much did you lose on the deal, Judy?"

"Ted!" Judy said faintly, in a thick little whisper. "Ted..... can he do that, Ted? Can he attach my wages? What shall I do? I can't eat ..... I can't even live, if..... if he does that!"

"He's going to change his mind," Ted assured her warmly, "after I've been called on our by Sanders and MacLean will give that crowd plenty to regret before they're through with them. How much did you lose on the deal, Judy?"

"Ted!" Judy blinked uncertainly. She had completely forgotten that Michael must had paid something down on the coat. Paid quite a good deal! "Why, I don't know. I don't remember. I.... forgot to.... to ask."

"Well find out!" Ted comforted her soberly, "and maybe make them give us most of it back. Just to teach them that they can't be gamed their pound of flesh!"

"You..... you're so good to me, Ted," she faltered.

"Not at all." Ted insisted cheerfully. "I'm protecting my property. We can't afford to lose our best help, Judy. Now powder your nose and come along with me. I'm going to watch you eat a chicken pie and a full the fixings!"

Judy was so amazed to discover that Michael had paid down fifty dollars on the coat, and that Stockton's bill, in case he failed to meet her into paying the rest, that she left the offices of Sanders and MacLean in a sort of daze, grateful that Ted was propelling her firmly toward a quiet little restaurant. Grateful that she didn't have to think. Had only to feel the firm pressure of his hand on her elbow, as crossings through the crowded streets, until he helped her out of her last year's tweed coat and smilingly handed her a menu.

"I'm order, please," he urged. "I'm a little tired."

His live lightened, then he smiled, and she did not catch the elegant, unspoken thought that flared in his eyes in that instant before he smiled. A thought that deepened to a heavy, sad burden, that had been slowly growing heavier, ever since the first time he saw Judy radiance dimming, her youth sobering under the weight of worries.

It was half an hour past time to be back at work before they finally left the little restaurant, and Judy felt strangely comforted, less confused, more herself, as she walked along beside him, back to work. She did not see the big sports roadster of Bill Pierce parked outside, as they emerged into the street. She had not seen Allison Mahar lunching with Bill in a secluded, distant corner of the little restaurant. Had not dreamed that Allison had watched them silently, intently, for long, narrow eyes bright with malicious scheming.

It seemed incredible that a week had passed. That it was payday again. It seemed centuries ago that she had taken her pay-check, and gone to the bank to deposit enough more to pay the installments that had been mounting her. Centuries during which she had grieved, and felt that the gay, happy irresponsibility of girlhood could never awaken again in her heart.

Judy opened her pay envelope, and hastily counted the money over again. Four dollars too much! The cashier must have made a mistake.

She turned back, and came face to face with Ted Hoyt.

"They made a mistake, Ted," she explained breathlessly. "They gave me four dollars too much!"

Ted's long, lean fingers tightened on her wrist gently, and his dark eyes were fathomless, blazing with a light that took Judy's breath away. She almost gave up a him fleshingly.

"No, Judy," he said gently, "don't you pursue your luck! You're company gave you a raise. You've earned it many times over. Run along and enjoy it." His voice was a little deep, suffering from wrinkles over that devilish budget you've been pressed why he had given it to her.

"Oh, Ted," her voice broke slightly, and she tried to laugh, a little weakly, "I'm going to cry, and you've been so wonderful to me! You're the best, the dearest friend a girl ever had!"

"Thanks, Judy." His voice was gruff. "I'm afraid you exaggerate." He put his hat back on, and, smiling, walked beside her out to the street, turning uptown, as she said good-night and hurried off toward the hospital.

"Flowers," Judy thought happily. "I can spend a little of it on some flowers for Michael. They'll make him so happy."

She thought as the florist boxed the simple little bouquet of sweet peas, that she could make some of it up by cutting her lunches to a sandwich and malted milk. Even in the glow of happiness of having additional dollars a month, she still could not escape the menacing shadow of that budget-book that could not be balanced.

The hospital bill was so much bigger than she had thought it could be that Judy had only a small good-night and hurried off toward the hospital.

Dr. Herrick's account.

"I'll have more next week," she promised him, a little panicky. "I thought the hospital expenses would'nt be so high."

"It will be all right, Mrs. Swayne," he assured her. "Take your time. These things happen to all of us!"

Judy picked up her little box of sweet peas, and walked soberly down the corridor to Michael's room. She wanted to surprise him with the flowers, and turned the door handle noiselessly, hoping he wouldn't be asleep. It had been ages, an son, since morning!

Judy's startled eyes saw the great mass of flaming, golden chrysanthemums almost hiding Michael's face, Here he could remain and watch or, if necessary, make a hasty retreat. He and Romeo and Col The growled her little bouquet of sweet peas to a wisp of weeds, as she stared fixedly at them, and then turned her eyes slowly to the rest of the scene.

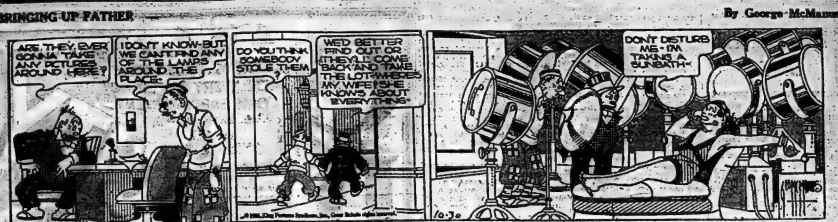
The room was heady, heavy with a strange, exotic, costly perfume, and it did not take vision to know that Michael was not alone. The pale, shimmering blur of blonde hair was a bright halo on the white counterpane, where Allison Mahar's head bowed over Michael's inert hand. Her lips, muffled against his fingers, murmured a low, broken torrent of words that shut out any possibility of interruption:

"Never mind the money, now, Michael. I was glad to lend it to you then. It's my happiness to lend you all you want. You can pay me back later, when you're well again. Don't fret, darling, hurry, hurry, and get back your strength. Your health! Get well Michael, or I won't be so lost, so horribly shut out of your life!"

Judy backed slowly, dazedly out.

CHAPTER 21.

UNWELCOME VISITOR



Miss Calkins, Michael's nurse, came down the corridor on swift, noiseless feet. She smiled warmly, with more than professional sympathy, and placed a firm, comforting hand on Judy's arm. Opening the door briskly, she led Judy in, smiling determinedly, albeit in a bright tight-lipped fashion, at her patient, and his calm, unruffled guest.

"Here you are, Mr. Swayne, your wife has come to see you!" She levied a slow, measuring glance at Allison Mahar, gracefully adjusting her furs, pulling on long expensive gloves, touching speculative hands in a tiny trimmed hat, hastily pulled on. "And such lovely sweet peas, Mrs. Swayne! I'm sure they're his favorite flower—aren't they, Mr. Swayne?"

Michael flushed slightly and flung

TARZAN THE INVINCIBLE (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Knowing that he could not stop the advance of Evert's forces single-handed, Tarzan had withdrawn quickly along the edge of the cliff to a spot where certain trees offered concealment, and where he knew that there existed a precipitous trail down the cliff.

From his point of vantage Tarzan watched the expedition surmount the crest of the cliff and start toward Opar. He believed that they could never find the treasure vaults; and now that La was dead in the city he was not concerned with the fate of its inhabitants.

He knew that the expedition could accomplish little that soon they must return to their base camp. In the meantime he would search for La, Tarzan of the Apes slipped over the barrier cliff and descended swiftly to the forest below.

A drowning-man's stand-by—and Judy glance at his wife. Miss Calkins placed the sweet-peas in his hands and, over their little brave bunch of flowers, Michael's amber eyes pleaded with Judy humbly.

Snowden Hits Gov't

Lord Snowden is hitting back at the Government.

"I was very merciful to Mr. Chamberlain in dealing with his unbalanced budgets," he retorts to the Chancellor of the Exchequer. "I made no mention of the fact that for years he has defaulted on the American debt payments."

Winston Churchill, who is a good deal of a Conservative, declared at South Chingford in Essex:

"When the office of this country collapsed four years ago Lord Snowden appealed to the Conservatives to come and help him, they carried his budget for him and enabled him to finish his political career—and it's finished now, I think—without having at the end of it a pitiful, benighted, melancholy, disgraceful financial exposure.

"The Conservative Party picked him up out of his mess," said Mr. Churchill, "and made him appear a solid, responsible and august statesman of the British Empire. Do you find that ungrateful of him so soon after he was rescued in this way by the Conservatives and about all the new colleagues he found in the National Government? Just a bitter-ness as he abused his old colleagues four years ago?"

Here is Alfred Duff Cooper, Financial Secretary to the Treasurer, speaking at Maidstone:

"Lord Snowden is a man of many gifts which, added to his great services to the nation, has other colleague gifts the late Labor Government has deliberately allowing the opportunity to be brought to the verge of bankruptcy. Then he was Chancellor of the Exchequer," Mr. Duff Cooper charged, "this country was in the greatest depths of financial degradation in its whole history."

More rowdy scenes are reported from the north. Former Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald had two stormy meetings in Seaham where he is waging a hard fight with the Labor nominee, Emanuel Shinwell.

While the British front was maintained in full strength in the Mediterranean it was reported Italian troops in Libya bordering Egypt had not been decreased but a secret force had been ordered to the front in readiness to depart.

Before the Council for Geneva Premier Laval said, "Peace will be made".

League Prepares To Set Date

Meantime Havas reported from Rome that League co-operation with Great Britain was regarded as a final abandonment by France of her friendship for Italy. The League prepared to set a date for the imposition of sanctions by 52 nations, probably November 15.

Sanctions were to be up operations in Ethiopia. In the South Italian Horns of Africa, Ethiopia, at the request of the Ogaden Desert Fort routed outpost defenders of Gorrahei.

Ultimatum to Duce Foreseen at Geneva

The possibility was acknowledged in informed quarters the Geneva talks may lead to a virtual ultimatum to Mussolini warning him there will be no peace in the Italo-Ethiopia when peace is finally entered.

It could not be learned whether Sir Samuel expects to confer with Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Italian League spokesman, whose announced return to Geneva came as a surprise.

Aloisi's determination to return to the League has also disappointed optimists his visit may be an indication Mussolini still is seeking a way out for the restoration of peace.

Italy Turns to Germany, Austria

(By George C. Jordan)
(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Rome, Oct. 31.—(AP)—Italian students shouting "Down with England" demonstrated outside the British Embassy today as Italian authorities looked toward Germany and Austria for working agreements as a result of the difficulties piled under League of Nations sanctions.

Meanwhile, scores of Italians carried banners denouncing Britain's action against Italy in relation to Mediterranean sanctions, marched Rome and were frequently cheered by the populace.

Police guards kept them under control at the Embassy but their cries were plainly audible inside.

'Sanctions First, Then Hope for Peace'

(By Stuart Meroney)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Oct. 31.—(AP)—Premier Laval conferred today with both Foreign Minister Italian Ambassador to France, and Sir George Russell Clerk, British Ambassador, just before his departure for Geneva to renew further direct talks with Italian delegates in connection with the Italo-Ethiopian crisis.

Offering profound ignorance of what was discussed. They said, however, the conference was to be for "sanctions first and hope for peace afterwards".

STOLEN CAR FOUND

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 31.—(CP)—Provincial Police today announced the car abandoned near Sunbury, about ten miles north of here, was apparently owned by J. Steinberg, Hamilton, whose car was stolen. Police believe the car was stolen by two men wanted for the $500 robbery of a safe at Hamilton.

Late last night another car was stolen at Chinguacousy and it is believed the same men are responsible.

Working Agreement Is Returned Unsigned

Buffalo, N.Y., Oct. 31.—The board of governors of the International Hockey League returned unsigned to the National League yesterday its proposed working agreement between the two circuits.

It was reported the board objected to the agreement, a renewal of that signed by the two leagues Sept. 24, 1930, because it made Frank Calder, president of the National circuit, sole judge in the event of a dispute over ownership of a player and allowed the International League club in a city the national desired to enter only $10,000 compensation. The board asked $70,000.

In addition, the International loop heads objected to Montreal Canadiens having the sole right to all players of French-Canadian origin born in Quebec.

Before attending the meeting asked that in player disputes, the league should have representation to the major league's board, of governors in the event Calder's decisions were not satisfactory.

Compensation Insufficient

"The compensation clause for the placing of players in the new International territory provided that the minor league club would be given the right to operate the league and collect the draft price for the franchise. It limited to the city limits the territory of each league and ignored the fact that the latter was asked to make it 40 miles from the centre of the city in any direction.

"We also recognized that the National League remove from its agreement the clause concerning the Canadiens' sole right to French-Canadian players born in Quebec.

A change was also in the length of the agreement, the International desiring to be run five years instead of one, as suggested by the National loop owners.

City and District News

One And One Half Hours To Wind City Clock

Possibility that the city clock may be brought further up to date by the installation of an electric winding motor was raised this week by Alderman Thos. Marshall, chairman of Market and City Property, who has been making an investigation of the time pieces with that view in mind.

During the past several days considerable work of cleaning and repairing the clock has been undertaken by custodian Jack Roblin, course of a century's grime and silt is being removed from the wheels and works deposited since the last overhaul about twenty-four years ago. Several trips to the top of the tower have been made by the attendant.

"Do you know how many turns it takes to wind the clock once a week?" questioned Alderman Marshall.

"Well, it just takes 385 turns on one side and 385 on the other. The wind is properly taken, about one and one half hours' steady work."

Many "No Shooting" Signs In P. E. County

Pheasant shooters from this city who intend invading Prince Edward County from 2nd to 6th November next week on the two days legal pheasant shooting will be confronted with many "no shooting" signs now being posted by farmers in the county. It was stated by a prominent resident, Farmers who have saved the pheasants during the past winters are emphatically against any open season on the birds and are protecting their property with the signs. As game is inland, particularly the signs are numerous.

Hunters are reminded that the day's bag limit is three birds. Only cock pheasants may be shot.

Lunch was served and all wended home wishing Mr. Charlton many more happy birthdays.

Leave "Stop Signs" Alone on Hallowe'en

A plea for Hallowe'en parties who may be abroad this evening to overlook the breaking off and swinging on the city's street stop signs as one means of destructive fun was made today by City Engineer Chas. A. Mott.

"If we can only make the children and youths realize that every stop sign broken is a direct expense to the city, then we may be able to stop one of our chief complaints every year," commented the city engineer.

"Every broken sign costs the city about $1 to repair. Although we have replaced some of them with stronger standards they are still not strong enough to withstand breaking off. Last year we had about thirty of them with cost about $60."

Mr. Mott further aid, special police who will be sworn in this evening, will watch for such cases of damage, it was stated.

John St. Church Opens A 'School for Leisure'

With an attendance of well over one hundred the School for Leisure began its second year at John Street Church Hall last evening. This project of the Young Women's Guild of the church met with marked success last year and the keen interest at the first class of the season promises another splendid term.

The largest registration last evening was in the sewing class under the direction of Miss R. Templeton. Knitting, crocheting and embroidering as well as plain sewing will be taught. Over fifty have enrolled for this class. After a six weeks' period cooking and home-nursing will be substituted and sewing continued later.

END OF SHIPPING SEASON DEC. 1ST

Fast Year Fairly Profitable But Shipping Could be Increased

Navigation in and out of the local port is reaching the tag end of the season at the harbor. Most of Belleville's part will not officially close until 1st de the last month of further activity, it was stated this week by Harbormaster Robt. Scott. Although insurance rates on all lake craft are increased annually on November 15, many boats operate well past this season until storms and ice danger make further navigation dangerous. The local port does not end its season until the last boat has registered in and is generally about December 1.

The year has been upon a fairly profitable one for the city's port, but, according to reports, shipping in and out of the city could be greatly enlarged if plenty of water were available for all types of lake craft. At the present time dangerous sunken rocky points in the channel at Telegraph Light left after the work of blowing the channel was completed some time ago, has resulted in the majority of the larger boats not being able to carry half loads, it was stated by skippers of the craft. Low soundings taken in the channel sometimes indicate plenty of water, the lead does not show the rocky points in shelf obstructions, which threaten the bottom of the boats. This has been responsible for some loss or traffic entering port according to miscellaneous cargoes, it was stated.

Grouping her way through the early morning fog, two more grand parts of the bay, the oil carrier Simcoe, with a cargo of gasoline for the Imperial Oil Company's local tank entered port yesterday morning and she was busy throughout the day discharging her cargo.

The large freighter Comeatcarrier of the Canada Steamship Company, after a very successful season in the cement trade on the Great Lakes entered port a week ago this week and is being berthed for the winter. Captain Knudsen of this city has been in command during the season.

Elves and Goblins Will be Abroad In City Tonight

Elves and goblins and witches, who ride broomsticks will be abroad this evening and Belleville's generally quiet and peaceful streets will be transformed into colorful avenues of grotesquerie and mystery who will take possession of the city as darkness falls.

Tonight is Hallowe'en, mystic evening of romance, superstition the eve of All Saints, when even the commonplace becomes symbolic of haunts and spooks, when even black cats will take on that peculiar significance of the night.

Peaceful homes will be invaded by the parsders with sturdy demands to "shell out" clackers and pre.sbookers will rattle against family windows, and woe be the ones, who had not the foresight to lay in a plentiful supply of peace offerings for the carnival-spirits abroad.

But, as long as it's good clean fun, children may have the evening to let that spirit of mischief manifest themselves. Official action will not hamper the activities of those abroad. Not unless danger or destruction threatens will the merriments of the night be dampened, police say.

FOG BANK BLANKETS THE ENTIRE CITY

While summer weather continues hours, and temperatures continue to hold a high level, robins, lulled into believing they have left for good again caroled from the tree tops afong the residential streets this morning. Two instances of singing robins were reported today by local citizens.

Late last evening fog blanketed the district slowing highway traffic to a crawl and cutting visibility down to a matter of mere feet on the roads. Even the city lights failed to penetrate the opaque shroud, which hung over the section for

Tweed and District

TWEED.—Tweed United Church Young People's Society was singularly fortunate on Monday evening, October 28th, in having as its guests Mr. Stephen Saywell of Oshawa, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference Young People's Union, and Mr. Gordon Maxwell of Toronto, student in his final year in Theology at Emmanuel College. These two young men are leaders in Young People's work in this section of the province and both delivered interesting and earnest addresses.

The Sunday School room was crowded with members of the local society and visitors from Sulphide and Actinolite. The meeting opened with a lively song service of favourite young people's songs, conducted by Mr. Saywell with Mr. Maxwell at the piano. This was followed by a devotional period with the former in charge. Miss Reta Palliser, B.A., of Campbellford, convener of Christian Fellowship in the Bay of Quinte Conference Young People's Union, read the Scripture lesson.

Mr. Maxwell, who is deeply interested in the work of the young people delivered an excellent address, selecting as the basis of his remarks, Rev. 21:5 "Behold I make all things new". He referred to the programme which had been planned at Kingston during the week and for the Christian Young People. He said that, while it might seem presumptuous on the part of youth to suggest that they can build a new world, he firmly believed they can do it. It is evident that we need a new world spiritually and economically as we live in a confused world. Many of the customs with which we have grown up are far from being Christian in fact they are actually pagan in their origin.

The greatest revelation of God contained the speaker, was drawn to us in the Cross of Christ which reveals God as a God of Love. It is the way to life. The remedy of God's power to make men and women live as He wants them to live. It is a revelation of salvation from sin.

This admirable address was followed by a solo "Just For Today" by Miss Dorothy Sager, A.T.C.M.

In his address, Mr. Saywell referred to the conference of the youth of North America held at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, in the summer of 1935, at which he was one of five delegates representing the Youth of the United Church of Canada. Here amid a beautiful setting one hundred and fifty young people drew up a five year programme, having as its aim the building of a new world, where man's great wealth and power will be turned into a Christian way of living. The present century was compared to the first century when Christ sent forth His twelve disciples to build a new world. So in this Twentieth Century the Christian youth of the world are being sent forth to build a new personality a new family, a new community, a new church, a new country, a new world. This great work can be accomplished if the Christian youth rally to the task.

Mr. Maxwell sang "Sweet Hour of Prayer" in a fine baritone voice. Miss Bessie Wallbridge, B.A., leader of the Y.P.S. of Tweed United Church was warmly applauded when it was announced that she had been chosen at Kingston as Cultural Convener of the Bay of Quinte Conference Young People's executive.

Miss Rita Palliser, B.A. brought greetings from the work's circle of Campbellford, of which she is the leader.

In the second part of the program which followed Miss Dorothy Sager sang "By the Waters of Minnetonka" which drew hearty applause from an appreciative audience.

Two numbers "Last Night" and "Honey Town" were contributed by a mixed quartette composed of Dr. and Mrs. M. G. Delong and Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Connor, Mr. Maxwell rendered two humorous numbers "Land of Hope and Glory" and "Rollin' Down to Rio".

In expressing the appreciation of the visitors for the invitation to attend the Y. P. Rally, Mr. Harold Varty of Sulphide, spoke of the hospitality with which Tweed United Church was noted and recalled an occasion in 1922 when the Sulphide Society was invited to a meeting with Tweed. At that meeting there were served young people who have since launched out upon successful professional careers—three are doctors, three are high school teachers, and three others are on the public school staff of Toronto Public Schools. In fact practically everyone who was a member of the Tweed Y.P.S. of that year has turned out to be a worthwhile citizen.

Rev. R. R. Nicholson and Rev. Theo. Smith of Actinolite spoke briefly. Several games under the direction of Grant Storey followed. An excellent lunch brought a pleasant and profitable evening to a close.

Mr. G. Roy Fenwick, Music Supervisor of the Province of Ontario, under the Department of Education paid a visit to Tweed Consolidated School on Tuesday afternoon. He conducted the children as they sang several of their songs and expressed himself as more than pleased and was a little surprised at the excellent quality of their singing. This is a tribute to Miss Lena Ritchie, who has charge of the music throughout the school.

Mr. Bd. Way went to Toronto on business on Wednesday.

Birth—To Mr. and Mrs. Bd. Rath (nee Rosamond Burgoyne), a son, born on Thursday, October 24th, at Belleville.

EATING MORE CHEESE

National Cheese Week is being observed in Canada, its object being to increase the consumption of cheese, a worthy enterprise for it will stimulate the agricultural industry. One year ago the per capita consumption of cheese was up half a pound and better results are expected this year.

Residing in the province where the finest cheese in the world is made, the people could eat a great deal more cheese and yet be behind other countries in consumption. We in Ontario eat less than four pounds per capita a year, as against the twenty pound average in some other lands. Britain is a huge buyer of our cheese and Canadians should try to emulate this with an adequate consumption.

It is one of the healthiest of foods, one is which nature has the greatest part in producing. Improvement of the industry would be momentous if Canadians could be encouraged to make the consumption of cheese nearly equal to that of other lands.

The National Dairy Council and the Provincial Department of Agriculture are working together to make National Cheese Week stand out this year.

GEESE AT NIAGARA FALLS

All but two hundred and fifty of the ten thousand of Canada geese which were endangered at Niagara Falls are safe on their way to the southland. The two hundred and fifty were drawn by the current to their death as they were swept over the falls.

A whole continent looked to Niagara, hoping that these fine birds would not lose their lives when caught in the alluring and treacherous waters of the mighty Niagara. The main flock saved itself and rose again as it swept near to the brink and succeeded in lifting themselves from the water and made their way back up river.

It was good reading to learn that through the efforts of men, at last the great fleet of birds swept away on their winter flight. Men in boats, men on shore discharging guns, men with planes were doing all they could to frighten the geese away. At last a blaze of guns did the trick. The spearhead of the geese air squadron turned and the rest of the feathered navy followed.

But it was also good reading to know that men acted so bravely and with expense of money and time to save the birds. Many of us are naturally looked upon as the foes of such birds, and many a man has a reputation for hogging in the hunting season and for shooting out of season, trapping animals in cruel traps, which ought to be prohibited, and in so many ways wantonly and cruelly destroying game, so that it is a satisfaction to know that there are men willing to help save wild life.

The incident shows that the wanton killer and destroyer of game life is really one of a very small fraction of the public, though he causes heavy loss, and that the great majority of the people believe in game hunting and in protection of game.

The saving of this flock of ten thousand geese is worthwhile to the continuance of the species. Every bird saved means proportionately more than a bird saved for perpetuity. Man has had his wish, he has helped to frighten the birds from the siren-like lure of Niagara's swift and booming dimpson of the mighty cataract.

POLICE RADIO IN SMALLER CITIES

Radio police patrol of the smaller cities is urged by Captain G. M. Harrison, director of public safety at Fredericksburg, Virginia, as essential in the days when thieves employ stolen cars in their operations.

Police patrol has charged. In the days gone by a policeman on the street or in the station was all that was necessary, but with the motorization of travel and transport, the police force has to be a mobile party. Rapidity of travel by the public makes it essential that police should be ready to go any point within their jurisdiction in a few moments. A police force without a car would be hopelessly incapacitated today. But it seems almost as inadvisable to have a force without a radio patrol. Today the police are often given tips on suspicious characters, the telephone is used, the police radio is employed and in a minute or two suspected parties are interviewed. The other day such a tip led to arrest of a gang and recovery of thousands of dollars of loot.

Radio boosts police efficiency one hundred per cent, it is estimated. Today in cities without radio cars if the police cars are out and a later bit of information is received, there may be loss of time in getting that information to the patrol, unless another car can be obtained. But with radio patrol the moving policemen keep in touch with the latest developments.

WOMEN BIG GAME HUNTERS

MOBBED BY WOMEN, HUNDREDS OF THEM!—sounds like a cave man epic, but such things do happen in this otherwise enlightened age—for women actually go nuts and mob some big he-man of the screen, begging for his autograph, the sunshine of his smile, the prizes, a word or two, and mayhap a clasp of the hero's hand.

Valentino was perhaps the first screen star to start riots among women and at his funeral the women mob almost tore his coffin apart to get souvenirs.

The latest mob scene of women over a screen idol occurred in London, England, with Ramon Novarro the beneficiary of the publicity involved.

Two thousand women mobbed Ramon as he drove up to the Leicester Square theatre. A cordon of police was hurdled and hats and dresses and the uniforms of the bobbies suffered.'

Strange how two thousand women in busy London knew that the screen star purposed visiting that particular theatre at that particular time. No doubt he made strenuous efforts to conceal his identity and his whereabouts and when he saw his army of women converging upon him he commanded his chauffeur to get right away from there at once. Yes, he did not.

Then in his naive, modest, shrinking fashion, when interviewed Mr. Navarro said "What they (meaning the public) see in me may be something which they imagine they perceive, something spiritual in my character. Valentino's fame was based on sex, mine—not at all. They like me because I have been good to my family, because scandal has never touched my name; they look to me in a way as symbol of a particular kind of goodness."

Methinks we hear a Belle Mayfair chortling something like this:

Oh, girls, pish, tush and prunes or what have you—do we know our onions? Symbol of goodness me eye! The good old sex symbol is good enough for us yet. D'ye think we'd be chasing Navarro if he was sexless?—nay Pauline and Polonius, nay verily—nix and nuts—try another monologue of the sweets of goodness on Nelson's monument and the hold lions of Trafalgar Square, but wink your other eye at us gurrls of Mayfair when you are doing it.

YESTERDAY WE TALKED CHEESE AD INFINITUM, whatever that means, and we can hear in fancy readers saying "Cheese it", in the vernacular of Tom Sawyer—"lay off the cheese and stir today." All right children, we put the Big Bad Wolf aside, split a few infinitives to start the supper fire with, and just remark in earnest cheese is to think you ought to know. It is this: In England the average consumption of cheese per capita, man, woman and child, is eight pounds per year; in Canada we only eat on an average of 3 1-2 pounds per year per person. Switzerland, the land where cheese-making first became an art the consumption of cheese per capita per year is sixteen pounds. So you see, we have a long way to go to catch up. We must eat a whole mountain of cheese in the next year to even up with Switzerland, and a correspondable amount, more than twice as much as usual, to draw even with England. Now is a good time to start eating more cheese—NATIONAL CHEESE WEEK.

MABEL STARK, ANIMAL TRAINER ONE OF THE GAMEST LITTLE WOMEN IN THE WORLD, has just been clawed again by one of her jungle pets. Mabel has travelled with the Ringling Circus, Hagenbeck-Wallace and Sells-Floto, and a few years ago was so badly injured by her ferocious pets that for weeks her life hung in the balance. Recovered she went on with her act. In Phoenix, Arizona, September 21 a 500-pound tiger jumped upon her. As a result over 500 stitches were taken in the frail form of this 116-pound animal trainer but she insists it was an accident, and were it not for the poison in her wounds she would be back working her act without losing more than a day or two for repairs. Just think of Mabel Stark when you are dissatisfied with your job and complain of the humdrum and the rut and the sameness and the other things which you think makes your job devoid of interest and excitement. She likes her work, knows her job, and despite danger of life and limb never misses a performance unless she has to take time off for a few more stitches.

ITALY TIGHTENS IN ITS FOOD BELT

Rationing of Food And Paper Expected to Arouse Courage

By GEORGE JORDAN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rome, Oct. 31—(AP)— Fascist Italy responded readily today to Premier Mussolini's call for self-discipline under a imminent economic blockade by the League of Nations.

Corporation heads, after a conference with Il Duce on food restrictions and other economies, consulted their subordinates on how to bring the masses to carry out the orders.

Restaurateurs smilingly told their customers to eat plenty while they could. The severe effective next Tuesday will limit meat sales and restrict public dining to one meal or fish dish a day.

Public officials who had foreseen edicts cutting expenditures, took steps to adjust themselves to the limitations. Government economies were ordered in regulation, also effective Tuesday, with documents to be held to a minimum. Furnishings to be limited and offices to be closed promptly to save electric light and heating bills.

Similar orders went forth to schools and a wide range of other public institutions.

Fascist functionaries said every sacrifice indicated by Il Duce would be carried out strictly in accordance with the regulations.

Members of City Council Guests of Municipal Band As New Band Room Opened

Reg. Hinchey, Former Bandmaster Presented With Clock

SUMPTUOUS BANQUET

Old Timers of Band Recall Many of Leading Incidents

The spirits of former bandsmen, who have long since passed on from the scene hovered over them last evening as members of the Belleville Municipal Band held the official opening night of their new and commodious quarters in No. 2 Drill Hall.

The evening which had as its object the opening of the new rooms, members of the city council and the fire department and others was devoted to reminiscences of earlier days in Belleville's musical fellowship. It was the most successful evening yet arranged by the band association.

Immediately following the toast to "The King" and the musical number prepared by the "pep committee," consisting of Everett Smith and Reg. Wardle, welcome to the city council members were tendered by Ald. Wm. Lockyer, president of the band association and chairman of the evening.

Council Thanked

"On this, the official opening of the new quarters, we can only congratulate the city council which owns the city council and others in making these new rooms possible," remarked the chairman.

Pointing to the individual efforts of members, who had worked hard to make the new quarters possible, total cost of the rooms, including lights, furnace and furnishings had been provided at a cost of only $85.00. Hope that continued assistance would be given them by the city council and others at large was expressed by the chairman.

"The Belleville Band, your band, is truly a municipal organization. At the present time we have a membership of thirty-four. From September 1st 1934 until Oct. 1st we have played a total number of twenty-eight engagements. Nine of these were paid for," continued the chairman.

At the present time the most pressing need was for new uniforms which are hoped to be provided soon.

In introducing acting-Mayor Harry Bill, Mr. Lockyer on behalf of the band expressed his regret at the absence of Mayor Tice, confined to his home through illness.

Alderman Bill in a brief address paid tribute to the untiring efforts of every member in creating such a remarkable change in the former dingy premises. "Now the band is into the present well lighted, well equipped rooms. Now the band is it looks almost impossible; we can only hope that the quarters will continue to suit."

Probably Greater Grant

"Belleville has the finest working band of any in Ontario. We can only consider the grants made in previous years and continue such grants in the future and next year it looks very small indeed," declared Alderman Bill. "On the death of Mayor Tice were conveyed by Mrs. Tice, paid first-class Mayor's sick bed.

Fire Chief Wm. Lynch could only offer the hope that every success would attend the future undertakings of the band.

Leon "Cap" Walmsley, leader of the band during the days when band circus recalled briefly six years of service. The most memorable engaged by the band, but declared last evening's to be the most successful of all. "The new quarters are the finest I've seen," declared.

Bandmaster Jobson expressed his deep appreciation for the gift tendered per cent co-operation, that has been given him since he accepted the baton of leadership.

Belleville, proud in ownership of one of the most efficient musical organizations should recognize the need for more solid support, impressed the speaker. He pointed to the grant of $1,500 given the Salvation Army band; $600 given Dundas band and $1,000 given Renfrew. These were contrasted with the meagre dollars provided by the Belleville council.

Recognize Need

"Municipalities through the country are at last awakening to the need of a good band. They realize the benefits derived in particular upon youth. Teach a boy to blow a horn and he'll never want to blow a safe. Less than five per cent of the total in penal institutions of this country are musically inclined," added the speaker.

Four concerts by the local band the coming summer was hinted each band member fifty cents, while if total time put in at rehearsals was taken into account they would have been paid at the rate of one and one-half cents per hour, declared Mr. Jobson, in asking council members to recognize the band in future support.

The speaker paid tribute to Mr. Ross Hunter for his work among the junior musicians and in a message to the band from Mayor Tice declared that the secret of the successful band was its loyalty, discipline, friendly rivalry, neatness.

Mr. Garn Dobbs, joint manager of the local unit, in a brief address heartened back thirty years ago to the time when Alderman "Bill" McCreary played the trap-drums and "Cap" Walmsley led. Mr. Dobbs paid tribute to Mr. Walmsley, Malcolm Weese, Mr. Hutchins, Chas. Hanna and numerous others were formerly among leading musicians. He referred to the old Cobourg Band and called upon the band to drink a silent toast and observe one minute's silence on their behalf, of those who had gone before. "He stressed the benefits of the present band and lauded the untiring efforts of former Bandmaster Reg. Hinchey, who helped it up to its present high standard.

Chime Clock Presented

In making the presentation of a beautiful chime clock to Mr. Hinchey on behalf of members, Mr. Dobbs remarked simply: "We have never enjoyed happier associations than we have under the leadership of Reg. Hinchey."

Members responded nobly with their pennies and a collection was made. A sheet of paper which was signed by all present was circulated. This will be attached to the back of the timepiece.

Touched by the tribute, Mr. Hinchey in the briefest of replies declared he had enjoyed himself more during the past summer than ever before.

"This presentation means more to me than a good many of you understand," he stated simply.

Alderman McCreary admitted that he had once acted in the capacity of bass drummer in the band, but that "in my younger days I had the choice of more than one instrument in my career. Being Scotch-Irish, I chose the business." He concluded by wishing the local organization every success.

Alderman Thos. Marshall recalled the efforts of city council to find appropriate rooms for the band and commended the band association with any musical organization was conducive to the best interests of the relatives had once belonged. He referred to the Belleville Band and the salvation of the local lodge of which he has been a member for forty-four years. He concluded with the promise of assisting in every possible manner.

Alderman Benjamin Safe wittily covered several phases of city council and the band. He had been to make appropriations for various service organizations owing to the state of civic finances. "We only hope they improve with time; may be able to give greater assistance," he declared.

Appreciation Expressed

Everett Smith, chairman of the "pep committee," dealt with his fellow member, Reg. Wardle, had arranged the duet, expressed appreciation to Bert Ayling, Garn Dobbs, Mr. Hart, the Walker Hardware, for the kind where he had contributed to the realization of the bandroom through assistance in any manner. Praising the thanks of the band to Mr. Hinchey declared the new band's appearance during the past year was moved by Garn Dobbs and seconded by Reg. Hinchey.

PEAT BOGS TO BE SURVEYED

May Provide New Industry For The Province

Toronto, Oct. 31—(CP)—The peat bogs of Western Ontario may provide a new industry for the province, it appeared today following the announcement the government is making a survey of the fuel resources with a view to assisting in their development.

Hon. Paul Leduc, Minister of Mines, and H. E. Croster of the Department of Mines would be in charge of the survey to be started at an early date.

Examination by the government of a 1,200-acre bog in Elliot township created the interest in peat, which led to the announcement. The bog mentioned is under processing by its owner, W. Lesas of Milverton, near Stratford.

This bog, on what is known as the Gads Hill Deposit, has been worked successfully by a new process. Mr. Lesas has an apparatus for properly pulping the peat and the shredded pulp was hung on racks and dried by wind and sun instead of by the older, slower means of leaving the cakes on the ground to dry in the sun.

Peat which is believed could be marketed at between $6 and $7 a ton.

'SALADA TEA
Barrie, Ont., Oct. 31 (CP)— Mr. Justice McKay heard the evidence of three prospective witnesses on the charge of defamatory libel laid against Rev. Ernest Elliot Johnston, former Collingwood high school teacher, and then took the case away from the jury.
Mr. Justice McKay ruled the prosecution had failed to show Johnston had any connection with the particular issue of the paper "The Collingwood Ratepayer" in which the alleged defamatory libel against George T. Foulis, Collingwood councillor, was published.
Seymour C. Dodge testified he was president of the Collingwood Ratepayers' Association but denied that body had any connection with the unincorporated "Collingwood Ratepayer." He admitted Johnston was secretary of the association but no knowledge of Johnston being editor of the paper.

Prize Hunting Story of Year
Port Erie, Ont., Oct. 30.—(CP)— B. W. Monte of Buffalo, just returned from a trip to the Orford Mountains in the province of Quebec and tells the prize hunting story of the year—he involves a wild cat, a woodsman leg and a rabbit.
Mr. Monte says the wild cat he had tamed caught its foot one night in a trap and chewed away one of its toes in an effort to escape. The hunter made a wooden leg for the crippled cat.
Hearing a noise outside his cabin one night later, Monte saw the cat had tackled a large Jack-rabbit which was proving too much for it. In desperation the cat reared on its hind legs and lanced the rabbit with the wooden leg. It was rabbit dinner for Monte.

Belleville Golf Club Terminates Successful Season

Terminating their most successful season, the officers and members of the Belleville Golf Club held their annual presentation of prizes and championship awards in their clubrooms last evening. Fighting Irish Of Notre Dame Hope for Win

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 31.—(AP) —The "fighting Irish" of Notre Dame will start one and possibly two Irishmen in their football game against Ohio State Saturday.

Jim Martin, right guard, is the one proud son of Erin virtually sure to be in the starting lineup. The second, a possibility because early season injuries may keep him out, is Mike Layden, right half-back and brother of the Notre Dame Coach, Elmer Layden.

The rest of the "fighting Irish" starting lineup reads like a League of Nations gift with a half dozen nationalities represented.

Layden, who learned his football under the late Knute Rockne and starred as a member of the Great Four Horsemen, plans to use straight football against the Buckeye Powerhouse. It is strange but true the Irish haven't been given more than a half dozen new plays all season.

"I haven't seen a team yet that couldn't be beaten with well polished fundamentals," he said.

Better Than Freshmen

Columbus, O., Oct. 31.—(AP)—Coach Francis A. Schmidt, watching the Ohio State Freshman squad in complete forward passes against the highly touted Ohio State Regulars, mended "you guys will have to do better than that, for them Notre Dames are better than our freshmen."

And when the secret practice was over, he moaned again: "We're having such a tough time trying to dope out a way to stop Notre Dame, that we can't find time to practice our own offense."

The Dopesters today were talking about Notre Dame scoring by a pair of touchdowns or more in this alleged football "battle of the century".

JOHN KATAN

Canada's foremost wrestler, who appears at the Belleville Arena on night versus Al Dumlop, Cleveland mat villain. Katan is the highest priced grappler ever to appear in a local ring. A smart supporting card precedes the Katan-Dunlop main bout.

ARMY TEAMS ARE READY FOR TESTS

Five Countries Will Be Represented at N.Y. Horse Show

New York, Oct. 31.—(AP)— The military invasion of the United States was completed today, when the army officers from France, Holland and the Irish Free State arrived to compete in the International Military jumping contests at the National Horse Show, starting in Madison Square Garden Monday.

The Chilean team has been in the country for several weeks and with the United States and Canada complete the group that will fight it out for the coveted prizes during the seven-day program. France won the team trophy last year while Capt. Dan Corry of the Irish Free State carried off the individual championship with Limerick Lace.

The Irish team is in charge of Commandant J. O. O'Dwyer while Capt. Pierre Clark heads the French forces and Capt. I. Sirtema Van Grovestins the Dutch team.

COVER WINNIPEG FIELD WITH STRAW

Playing Area to be Fast For Titular Match Tonight

Winnipeg, Oct. 31.—(CP)—Warned of the approach of a storm that brought snow to the Prairies, workmen today bedded down Osborne Stadium here for Saturday's Football Classic between Winnipegs and Regina Roughriders. Tons of straw spread to resemble a huge, over-sized mattress were laid over the surface of the field.

The "standing room only" sign was hung outside the box office as carpenters rushed to completion all extra seating accommodation possible. If they can get into the grounds, 7,000 people are expected to crowd the playing park to capacity. Normally it can seat 4,500.

Meanwhile the teams who emerged from regular schedules with provincial titles confirmed themselves in light workouts and chalk talks.

Joe Louis to Second Lewis In Title Go

St. Louis, Oct. 31.—(AP)— Each with his pre-fight oral victory tucked away, light heavyweight champion Bob Olin of New York and John Henry Lewis, Arizona Negro challenger, rested today for the actual business of battling for the world title tonight.

They will go into the ring in the St. Louis arena for 15 rounds or less. It will be St. Louis' first title match in 10 years.

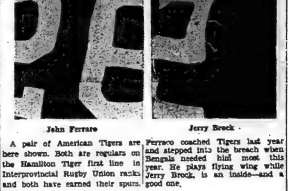
Olin, facing his first test since he took the light heavyweight crown from Maxie Rosenbloom almost a year ago, was confident of the outcome.

"I've boxed Lewis before and I know that I will still be light heavyweight champion after tonight," he said.

Meanwhile, Lewis, fortified by having the sensational Negro heavyweight, Joe Louis, as his second, declared he would win by a knockout early in the fight.

"There is no doubt in my mind", he started. "I've beat Olin before and I'm confident I will repeat."

HINES RELEASED



Oshawa, Oct. 31.— Normie Hines, veteran centre star of New York Americans, regarded as one of the best play-making and defensive centres in the National Hockey League a few years ago has been unconditionally released. Manager Red Dutton announced here last night.

AMERICANS MAKE GOOD WITH HAMILTON TIGERS

John Ferraro — Jerry Brock

A pair of American Tigers are here shown. Both are regulars on the Hamilton Tiger first line in Interprovincial Rugby Union ranks and both have earned their spurs. Ferraro coached Tigers last year and stepped into the breach when Bengals needed him most this year. He plays flying wing while Jerry Brock, is an inside—and a good one.

SPEED MERCHANT—In his first season as Northwestern coach, Lynn O. Waldorf counts on Bob Swiker, ABOVE, as a backfield star.

CATCHING A STREAK—Joe Dulik, Fordham back, opens up his mitts to catch a "strike" tossed in practice.

KAZUBA CITY RELEASED

Kazuba City, Oct. 31 (CP) — Betty Ann Painter, pretty "little theatre" actress, stopped by a motorcycle officer, protested. cajoled, flattered, smiled—all to no avail. She went to the station.

"She was doing 45 miles an hour and—" said the officer, remembering, "—resisted."

"Oh, no," she retorted. "You did all of the resisting."

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

All is in readiness for the big blow-off at the Belleville Arena tonight, the best wrestling talent available, the promoters, extra ringside seats erected and despite the fact, that tonight is Hallowe'en a capacity crowd is expected to take in the John Katan-Al Dunlop main bout. The promoters have gone to considerable expense for this outstanding show, Katan being one of the better known grapplers to appear on this continent. Dunlop has built a good ring reputation for himself, but faces his toughest ring proposition in Katan, the gentleman of the squared circle. The boys are two distinct and different types Dunlop being a rough, rugged grappler, who resorts to any measures that might ultimately bring him victory, while Katan uses only orthodox holds, he has plenty of strength and ability. The semi-final affair is usually as good a bout bringing together Joe Katolnecah and Chief Lynx. The bout is a main event affair in any ring, while Steve Taylor-Mike Andezie is a return grudge battle. This card should please.

With Belleville's O.R.F.U. team drawing a bye in the Lake Shore loop this week only intermediate football is on the rugby menu for the week. This afternoon the Trenton High School Juniors and the R.C.I. Cadets tangle at the Fair Grounds, the local Juniors having gained the decision already. Tomorrow (Sunday), will be the 34th of Interscholastic football of the current season, when Albert College and R.C.I. seniors clash. At their last meeting the Cadets won out by a close margin and many are favouring Albert a pull up even with the Sibbels-coached eaglets at the Fair Grounds tomorrow pm. Coach Pete Beach has lost the services of his ace booter, McCrie, who was retiring after a swath he cut Albert with his long distance and accurate punts. McCrie injured his shoulder in practice recently. Beach will kick 'em for Albert on Friday with Brad Johnston and Baker booting 'em for the tri-color. Some of the boys are saying their dough on R. C. I., but there are plenty at Albert in sight. Both squads are fighting teams and a merry battle is expected. At present the Collegiate team is in one game in front of Albert.

Still weeping over the defeat of the Lindsay O.R.F.U. squad here on the holiday, the Scugog River sport scribe says: "To go into Belleville from still further, it will remain a mystery just how the Belleville team beat Lindsay by such a wide margin. Coach Dan Kelly said that Lindsay was 25 points better than Belleville and he couldn't understand how Lindsay lost before them. There will likely be a different story on the ninth of November when Belleville comes to Lindsay for the return game. The Lindsay squad will turn on the heat in earnest on that occasion and the Belleville squad had better come prepared for a torrid battle. Some of the Lindsay players did not like the treatment they were given by the Belleville boys and there is no love lost between the two clubs."

Some person owes said—"everything comes to he who waits". Alright Jimmy Hardy, Belleville's gift to professional hockey for these many years, you've waited a long time and waiting in hopes of procuring his release from the London Tecs. Holway's business ran you down therefore he did not report for fall training. Yesterday the London club got Holway on the auction block and were bidding in the effort. We will then get his coveted release. Albert Holway has served the Tecs loyal and well and should be considered by them. It is understood he is desirous of getting his release so he may longer eye on a possible managerial berth in foreign fields. Naturally Holway is getting along in years and realizes his position. There apparently is no future for him with the London club, so why shouldn't he procure his release and sign on with some other club where he has opportunities of advancement.

Here's one for the book— "A young wife, visiting in person a friend in a distant city of the town-ship of her best friend sent a telegram to her own city in character. It consisted of a single word and two numerals as follows:

"Isaish 9:6."

The Scripture reads like this:

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given."

The friend, upon being very conversant with the Bible, said to her husband: "Margaret evidently has a boy who weighs 9 pounds and 6 ounces, but why on earth did they name him Isaiah?"

SLEET FREEZES WINGS OF DUCKS

Several Birds Fall in Winnipeg Streets Unable to Fly Any Longer

Winnipeg, Oct. 31.—(CP)—By the hundreds, nimrods have flocked to Manitoba lakes and marshes in hope of bagging a duck dinner this season, and many returned empty-handed.

Today, the ducks came to Winnipeg, in fact, for a few moments it seemed to be raining ducks in the downtown section.

Had Fred Watson wailed five minutes he would not have bothered buying his dinner. As he stepped from a corner store, a live mallard, its wings and body encrusted with ice, fell to the sidewalk before him, unable to fly any longer. Fred took the duck home "to warm it up".

Another bird fell in front of two workers in a wholesale plant. The bird, its wings partially frozen together by sleet, waddled down the street, the two men in pursuit. Another mallard, it weighed 4 1-2 pounds.

Storm conditions all through Western Canada today drove huge flocks of ducks flashore for shelter, and even the guns of hunters who took advantage of ideal shooting conditions.

SHARKEY TRIES COMEBACK

Boston, Oct. 31.—Jack Sharkey, former heavyweight champion yesterday announced a comeback campaign which he expects to lead to an elimination bout with Joe Louis and a title match with Champion Jimmy Braddock. Sharkey as owner of the Squire of Chestnut Hill disclosed that he has started active training for his first bout. It is reported Jack's comeback will start in Boston Garden about Nov. 22, with Unknown Winston, Hartford negro, as a likely opponent. King Levinsky, Patsy Perroni and Johnny Risko are also under consideration.

RUTH TURNS MISSIONARY

New York, Oct. 31.—Babe Ruth announced today that he was "seriously considering" an offer to devote his future to introducing baseball into Great Britain and other foreign countries.

"While baseball is really our pastime," he said, "see no reason why it can't be built up in other countries and that is the time of our children it would be an international as well as a national sport."

"NO DEFENCE HELP WANTED" IS SIGN HUNG OUT BY MAROONS

WENTWORTH — CONACHER, SHIELDS — EVANS

Around the Montreal Maroon training camp, there is a "no help wanted" sign hanging over the defence area, according to reports. Though several promising amateurs have shown up, the sturdy rearguard of "Cyclone" Wentworth, Lionel Conacher, Allan Shields and Stew Evans is confidered by Manager Tommy Gorman to be ample for defence of the Stanley Cup won last year. Big Train Conacher, who managed to turn in a good season of defence last year, despite the handicap of a pair of tricky knees, has had the legs doctored up, and expects to be better than ever this trip. When he is right there aren't any better defencemen in hockey. The remaining two are also rounding into shape in fine style. There is no room for sublicious defencemen around Maroons' camp this term.

TOLL OF VICTIMS MAY BE HIGHER

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Oct. 30—(AP)—The worst flood in the history of Honduras, official opinion held today, may take a toll in human life higher than the number of bodies within hand was discovered from torrents created by the tropical hurricane.

At Orocolio alone 70 bodies were found. It was feared the North Coast would be among those drowned as hundreds live in the crowded zone.

In imminent danger of death, Honduras perched high in trees to escape the ravages of overflowing rivers. Reports from the Ulua area said many laborers on banana plantations were drowned when the Chamelecon River let its banks. Damage to fruit company properties was revealed in the millions of dollars.

Miles and miles of bananas three marooned in trees and hills soon, it was feared, they will die. Presidents Tiburcio ordered the war ministry to speed assistance to flood victims in the vicinity of Progreso hundreds of laborers were missing. Survivors lacked food.

ONTARIO AGRICULTURE REPORT

Toronto, October 29—(CP)—L. S. Klinck, B.S.A., Director of Publicity in better condition than last year, it was revealed today in a report issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Reports from some quarters indicate trouble with young pigs while the poultry market shows improvement generally.

Larger shipments of hogs left Providence County in Eastern Ontario during the last week and prices were down. The demand was good for freshening cows. In general most classes of livestock are showing thrifty condition but not fat in Glengarry County.

Harvest is now complete in Cochrane district in Northern Ontario. The grain crop was fair while there were good crops of hay and potatoes. Several carloads of cattle have been shipped out of the Temiskaming district.

HEALTH and PSYCHOLOGY

To be sure all problem children can be treated, but certainly all cannot be cured. Corrections of physical and functional handicaps responsible for slow mental progress often the best chance of complete recovery.

Correction of eyestrain, adenoids, enlarged tonsils and a host of other physical defects produces wonderful results. It's like releasing the brake on a moving car. Stop the hinderance and the car jumps forward.

Many insanities and neurotic states are also curable. But especially in the insanities it is important that treatment be begun early and begun in all symptomless manifestations of abnormality and peculiarity. It has been tempting.

It is with the congenitally feebleminded, the "born fools," that we—that the mess, baffling problems of treatment present themselves. Although congenital mental defectives may often be improved, science has been unable to find a way to cure every case without question.

Whatever can be done in the way of treatment of atypical children lies within the province of surgery, general medicine and psychology and psychiatry. Of course healing art can often produce wonderful results with the organic and functional defects handicapped pupils with mental and physical development.

Almost every one of the neurotic states, the nervous breakdowns, are cases of the mentally ill. But what these therapeutic agencies can do in benefiting congenitally feebleminded is very, very doubtful.

The average person frequently believes that surgery can cure a feeble-minded state, from birth on, but one must not be too hopeful or jump to hasty conclusions.

Feeble-mindedness is a state of value. But here again, although certain drugs may be administered over a long period of months and years may improve certain defective states of mind, there is no assurance that any particular case will respond to whatever treatment cure.

However, all atypical children should be examined, diagnosed and supervised by competent physicians. Those who are different because of removable handicaps are quickly helped, while those who never get all the help that modern science has to offer.

No parent should delude himself, however, with the food hope that a child will outgrow an atypical mind. So often one hears of cases where somebody of real benefit might have been accomplished had the child been treated early enough. But somebody told the mother that the age of puberty would bring about a change, and when that after the pubertal years were passed with no improvement manifest even an expert medical help sought. Puberty never cured a defective mind.

Also, many an atypical child presents a problem different than any other normal child and each atypical child. A close study and supervision of each case is essential if the child is to benefit.

"TOOK ALL KINDS OF PILLS, THEN CEREAL BROUGHT RELIEF"

Constipation, Due to Insufficient "Bulk," Relieved by Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

A fine letter from Mrs. Snyder: "I have had trouble with my bowels for years, taking all kinds of pills and cathartics with no relief.

"One year ago, I saw Kellogg's ALL-BRAN and bought a package. It did good so I bought one every day. I am 73 years old. I am telling my friends what bran has done for me."—Mrs. Sallie Snyder. Address upon request.

"Constipation due to insufficient bulk" is needs.

Research shows that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN furnishes "bulk" to exercise the intestines. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B, as well as iron, an element of the blood.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient to correct common constipation. With each meal, in serious cases. Get it at your grocer's this way, see your doctor.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN relists digestion better than the "bulk" in leafy vegetables. Many users prefer to use this food in place of patent medicines.

At all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Cosmetics Aid Natural Beauty

By Helen Follett

Everybody agrees that natural beauty is perfectly elegant.

But there isn't much a female 104 of 111 How many women possess it? Fairy godmothers didn't file dingbes into every girl baby's cheeks nor did they wave their wands and bestow natural wavy hair on all the members of the sisterhood.

Girls are good looking these days because they have found out how to be that way. They never recognize some of them without their war paint on. It gives life to colorless cheeks, puts the ruby color on lips, adds the velvety touch to the skin.

Coiffures have been a help. A girl may look like a witch when her hair comes out of the shampoo bowl, but look like an angel after she puts the finger and mitt skill of a magicted-trimmings. To the clever hair-dressers of the world women owe a debt of gratitude.

There's material for loveliness in almost every woman. The smart one uses it to advantage, plays up good points, disguises poor ones and marches, right along in the pulchritude parade.

Often hair is snow white it is a beauty crime to dye it. Many a lovely snow white coiffure helps to handle the job, realizing that results may be a knock and a disappointment. Especially if wrinkles in the child been fixed early enough and haggard. The silver halo is a blessing in disguise when time has done a lot of cruel etching on the face.

Teach Child In Use of Eyes

Miss Grenelle Offers Hints For Improving Power of Observing

By LISA GRENELLE

At the bottom of so many accomplies nothing but that simple ability to notice.

Most people are so little of what goes on around them. Often it doesn't matter, but sometimes it's of vital importance. And the unobservant man misses a great deal of life. His is handicapped for life and it is harder for him to understand; he finds less to talk about; his opportunities are seriously curtailed, and he is more vulnerable to any unscrupulous element.

There's nothing mysterious, accidental or inherent about the power of observation. To be sure, it's an advantage to have great curiosity and a certain vitality and curiosity lead to a keener awareness. But it is, for the most part, a question of habit and training.

Result of Training

It's no accident that writers observe details of human action even though they're sick or tired or take no personal interest in much that they see. It's for a question of inspiration, or genius. It's just the result of training.

No such dreary fate as that of writer may await your child, and no matter what his life, or of what nature his future interests, he should be trained to use his eyes.

In some schools, children are asked to relate what they observed on their way to school. Detail, clarity and accuracy are encouraged.

An even better method, I think, is one used by a family that I once knew.

Each member of this family would write down his personal impressions of some family outing— what he saw, what interested him especially. A small prize was offered for the fullest, the most amusing or most interesting description.

Then Read Them

Each one read, or had read aloud, his effort. It was a most revealing as well as entertaining performance, because while each had enjoyed the same experience, each had reacted differently to it. Some had seen more, some less; some had been impressed by this, some by that. And each learned something from the other's effort as well as from the execution of his own.

Your child has eyes, but you must teach him to use them. First, maintain an exhibition of interest in his experiences, what he sees. The most colorful incident soon is forgotten if there is no interested person to relate it to. Let your children always find you an interested and inquiring audience, one that demands details. And second, from the beginning point out to little Willie, during each morning walk, whatever attracts your attention whatever might interest him.

Song Birds Leave Dionne Bird Houses

Callander, Ont., Oct. 31.—(CP)—Bird houses that provided shelter for songbirds which entertained the Dionne quintuplets during their outdoor airings, were taken down from the Dafoe hospital today. But the cozy nest was made for the snowbirds and sparrows that will remain around the lonely northern outpost this winter.

Harrison F. Lewis, chief protective officer for Ontario and Quebec under the Migratory Birds Protection Act, erected the hospital and took down the little house at the four corners of the building.

For the more hardy feathered friends of the famous babies, Mr. Lewis supervised the construction of winter feeding tables. The quintuplets watched the procedure from their cages.

by

Janet Doran

Judy remembered something Michael had said long ago, during their first quarrel—it would live forever in her mind, because each word was a living symbol of the things that had happened to make Michael less and less sure to her: "Can I help it if some rich, fat, flirtatious matrix woman writes me a mash note?"

She reasoned, now, that it was not Michael's fault. Allison Maher called on him. She probably placed him in such a position he could not evade her sentimental blackmail.

"Hullo, Judy..... yeah but it's good to see you." Michael's words startled Judy. It had seemed aged. Instead of seconds, that she thought her problem out, and finally rushed to Michael's defense. "All my friends have been coming to see me to keep me from being lonely," Michael went on, and Judy knew he was apologizing to her for Allison, begging her to understand.

Allison's slow, beautiful voice cut through like a dull, glittering sword: "I saw you lunching with Mr. Hoyt, Mrs. Swayne, but you were much too occupied to notice me."

Allison's long narrow eyes were narrowed even more, as she flung the soft little words into the empty silence, and her thin mouth were a pallid twist of sheer triumph as she watched. Michael's face hardened slowly, with jealous anger. Her laugh was soft, warm, as she let herself out of the room, and Miss Calkins followed her with the sweet pea, intent on getting a vase.

"Oat," she seethed to the night dietitian, "I could spy her for being so spiteful to that sweet 'child! Throwing around fifty dollars worth of flowers, and bringing him half a library, when his wife has to drudge in an office all day, and probably walk to work to save enough to buy him sweet peas!"

Judy bent to kiss Michael, but his lips were still, unresponsive under her caress, and he did not grasp her hand warmly as he had done when she came in. Always a self out of the room, and Miss Calkins followed her with the sweet peas

ITALY WILLING TO NEGOTIATE A PEACE PACT

Spokesman Makes Assertion as Italy Offered Final Interval

DEADLINE NOV. 15

Italy May Get Less Than Offered in First Proposal

Geneva, Oct. 31 (AP)—An Italian spokesman announced today the warring Fascist nation was willing to negotiate for peace, with limitations.

The spokesman made this assertion as the League of Nations offered Italy a final interval for consideration of settlement of the East African conflict before being subjected to an economic blockade.

"Italy is willing to negotiate," he asserted in reference to the visit to Geneva of Baron Aloisi, representative of Premier Mussolini, due tomorrow for the meeting of representatives of 52 nations, setting the date for actual enforcement of economic sanctions.

A British spokesman said Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare also would be pleased to sound out the situation before application of the boycott, probably 5 days hence.

Laval Quite Eager

Premier Laval of France was known to be quite eagerly eager to find a quick solution to the dispute to halt the Italo-Ethiopian war.

A compromise view, held widely by League lobbies as the representatives of 52 nations met to fix the date for actual enforcement of economic sanctions was that Nov. 15 probably would be designated.

Between the lines of "deadline" League sources said, Premier Mussolini would be encouraged to think seriously of the advantages of peace in Italy that would ensue, instead of war—and an ensuing world wide economic campaign.

The official report of this afternoon's meeting of the committee of 18 on League general staff for sanctions was to consider the views of member states to the proposals for four punitive measures against the warring Italians.

An assertion by Sir Samuel Hoare Foreign Secretary of Great Britain, that he was coming to Geneva for "prolonged conversations" indicated clearly peace possibilities were not ignored amid the sanctions preparations.

Unofficial reports of Italo-Ethiopian mobilization said war rumors were so numerous the general Geneva atmosphere promised a continuing aspect.

The correspondents view that the deadline for economic sanctions would be fixed for 15 days hence left an opening for negotiations.

Three Must Accept

Sir Samuel already had emphasized any settlement must be acceptable to all three most interested powers, Ethiopia, a war of conquest; Ethiopia, defending its independence and territorial integrity and the League, trying to halt all war.

A new peace plan, spokesmen for various delegations said, hardly has already spurred—the prospect advance graphs of League Committee of five for international development of Ethiopia.

Such plans seemed to be taking shape, indeed, to give Italy even half of her hereditary desires.

League economic experts said they would defend already the beginnings to a serious disorganization of Italian financial and economic activities citing two cases:

1. In view of the unsettled conditions, they said, one New York company had started to buy a terrific load of oil from Spain, instead of from Italy.

2. The Belgian textile industry had suddenly received from foreign countries orders for issues which normally would have been placed hitherto in Italy.

The general anticipated Spain, Southern France, Northern Africa, Greece, Yugoslavia and Palestine would benefit similarly by the boycott of Italy.

St. Paul, Oct. 31 (CP)—Carlos Phenicie volunteered to referee a wrestling match in a movie theatre. A little later he wished he had offered to wrestle.

The spectators apparently thought Phenicie favored one of the grapplers and many of them made a rush for the ring. Stagehands aided the referee but they didn't strike him from the ring at first. A flashlight, hurled by an angry fan, struck Phenicie in the face, knocked out two teeth.

OFFICERS, CREW LANDED SAFELY

Mulgrave, N.S., Oct. 31 (CP) Snatched from death on Deadman Island when the British freighter Berwindlea was battered to pieces on its ragged rocks, 33 officers and crew of the British freighter were safe ashore today. They were landed here last night by the salvage tug Foundation Franklin.

The rescue was accomplished on a stormswept sea Sunday when great breakers crashed over the illfated vessel and broke her in two.

Besides the Halifax tug, the Japanese freighter, England Maru, had answered the distress calls and Japanese seamen played a heroic part in the thrilling drama.

Six men of the Berwindlea's crew volunteered to row half the men to the tug and return for the remainder. With mountainous seas against them they were exhausted, when they reached the Franklin.

Death awaited any tired man who pulled off—as the like that and after a wireless' consultation the captain of the England Maru sent one of his own lifeboats to take off the remaining men.

The Japanese volunteers were little fellows but by rowing two to an oar they worked in toward the wreck with a minimum of delay, took off all aboard and transferred them to the Franklin.

Captain J. Williams of the Berwindlea had a special word of praise for the Japanese today, at the same time lauding his own men and the crew of the tug.

Looks to United States And Brazil For Necessaries During Blockade

(By George Jordan)
(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Rome, Oct. 31.—(AP)—Italian authorities, seeing their Great War friendships fading, looked today to Germany and Austria to furnish the coal, iron, steel and other products needed in event of a League of Nations boycott.

Authorities said they were watching closely also the attitude of New World countries, the resources of which might ease this nation through its contest with the League.

Fascist economists pointed out the United States and Brazil alone, as non-members of the League, could, if they wished, supply Italy with all the necessities for its civil population.

Authoritative sources said any reprisal campaign by Italy against countries imposing sanctions would not extend to the United States, the American neutrality policy not being interpreted as an effort to inflict unilateral hardships on Italy.

Besides his orders for economies to overcome the effects of League sanctions, Premier Mussolini called for a "census" of the Mercantile Marine to determine the strength of Italy's Naval auxiliary in event of war.

Arming Merchantmen

Italy earlier has attributed the title of war to its campaign in Ethiopia and informed sources believed the new decree meant it Does intended to prepare his mercantile sea power for possible war in Europe.

The decree, which said some of Italy's merchant ships would be armed if necessary, ordered all ship owners and captains to be ready to give exact information concerning their craft to a mixed committee, chosen from the navy, war and communications departments.

Those ships designated as naval auxiliaries will "carry defensive arms" in case of war, the decree stipulated.

The order divided command of the entire merchant marine between the ministries of war and communications, the navy to have absolute rule of armed auxiliaries and the Communications Department to command "traffic ships".

Italian Reply to Sanctions

Next Tuesday, set as the day for Italians to undergo food restrictions and other economies to combat a boycott and key products embargo by League states, already was taking its place as another Fascist anniversary.

Coming this November 5 the day of "reply to sanctions", officials observed ironically:

"This date also marks the first day of peace after Italy signed her armistice with Austria November 4, 1918, and thereby furnished the turning point in the Great War".

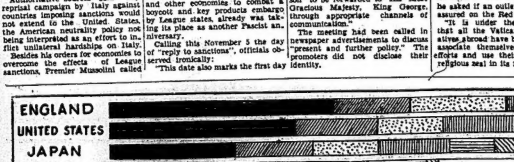
Now, the officials said, the date will mark "the first day of discipline of food supplies . . . with which Italy, the same Italy of 1918, of victory, showed its wishes to respond to attempts to impoverish her, imposed by her ally Great Britain and accepted by her ally France".

Pass Motion Against Commission Government

St. John's, Nfld., Oct. 31 (CP Cable)—First organised opposition to Newfoundland's Commission Government, sworn in February 16, 1934, is contained in a resolution calling for immediate restoration of responsible government with full legislative powers.

Passed by standing vote at a public meeting last night the resolution will be place in the hands of Governor Sir David Murray Anderson "to be forwarded to His Most Gracious Majesty, King George, through appropriate channels of communication."

The meeting had been called in newspaper advertisements to discuss "present and further policy." The promoters did not disclose their identity.



POPE WAS AUTHOR OF PEACE PLAN

Urged Sea Outlet For Ethiopia On Red Sea

Paris, Oct. 31 (AP)—Fernand de Brinon, writing in the journal "Information" said the "peace plan" for Italy and Ethiopia which the London Foreign Office announced had collapsed was suggested by Pope Pius following a conversation with Premier Mussolini 10 days ago.

Said De Brinon: "The Pope, after recognizing with sympathy Il Duce's desires, his ideas, and his willingness to end the war in honorable and reasonable conditions, let it be understood that any honest settlement would have to bring Ethiopia an outlet to the sea and be asked if an outlet could not be assured on the Red Sea.

"It is under these conditions that all the Vatican's representatives abroad have been invited to associate themselves with peace efforts and use their political and religious zeal in its favor."

HEALTH and PSYCHOLOGY

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.

Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Nowadays all sorts of cute ads are taken to learn, to achieve and to arrive. Individuals are bribed or driven to do that practically no preliminary training is required to become acquainted with them.

We have "Outlines in History," "Outlines in Literature," correspondence courses, all sorts of boiled-down knowledge.

Such methods of spreading information are excellent. Undoubtedly the benefits derived through modern ways of doing things are enormous. It's a fine thing, this idea of the greatest enlightenment to the greatest number. It fits well for a mixed population of many races such as is found in America.

Still short cuts have dangers. In order to cover a wide area of learning we are likely to spread the cost too thin. We must be careful of half-truths. We must be on our guard against bluff and pretense, or charlatanism as another term for it are not.

Above we must try to do above all else, is to be exact in some particular thing. The best maxim of all is to know something about everything and everything about some one thing.

Follow that recipe and you'll be cured of a great deal of your dissatisfaction. It will surely rid you of a conviction of inferiority — a feeling altogether too common. It will enhance your personality. It will give you power and strength. It will convince you that you have a chance with the best of them.

Study everything at least a little, at the same time concentrating on one subject or branch of work, and your character will unfold with remarkable swiftness and surenese.

It is in your life work—the work you have chosen as your very own —that you must strive to be superlatively thorough.

Put your whole heart and soul into that. Make yourself a specialist.

Haste leads to slipshod methods and to mediocrity, and that leads to lower wages and to the scrap heap.

Bear in mind that if it were easy to accomplish the unusual of the superlative, there would not be very much satisfaction in the end, in arriving.

A little knowledge may often be better than none; mediocrity better than total ignorance. Yet both a little effort can do—go beyond the mediocre way-station, at which almost everybody halts, and push forward to excellence.

If you try always to do some one thing better than any one has ever done it before, you will always be thorough.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

The fall of the year is primarily apple time. Apples contain vitamins A, B and C. They possess a cellulose makeup which helps to overcome constipation. By the time the apples are ripe their starch content has been turned into sugar and the acid content has been so reduced as to be negligible.

FRED FEERNOT AND THE HERMIT

Scene, halways up a mountain.

Fred Feernot. I can see the top from here, but that's a lot different from being there. O boy my legs. Maybe there's no hermit lives up there after all.

Act 2

Scene, on top of the same mountain.

Hermit. Did you enjoy your noise?

Fred Feernot. No thank you. I bet you and me are the first human beans that ever set foot up here.

Hermit. We can't both be the first, excuse me for sounding personal.

Fred Feernot. Are you a real hermit, I mean do you live on roots and nuts and drink running water?

Hermit. That's all, but dont mention it, you'll make me hungry and it's nowheres near supper time.

Fred Feernot. How did you come to be a hermit?

Hermit. I guess that I'll give you a hand carved wawking stick, as a prize for your smartness.

Fred Feernot. Was it because you wanted to be alone with your principals?

Hermit. Nothing like it. Have a slice of root.

Fred Feernot. Was it because you wanted to forget your troubles, or gets have more time to think about them?

Hermit. Nothing like it. Dont eat the root if you dont like it. It's a taste you have to get used to.

Fred Feernot. That's what I thawt. Well I give up, why was it?

Hermit. Because I'm crazy about roots and nuts. Why dont you carve yourself a wawking stick on your way down as a prize for your dumbness?

Fred Feernot. I bleeve I will.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Miss Pacific Fleet" and "Hollywood Cowboy"

Crowds see Annabella Screen Star's picture, the simplicity of which is its most appealing point, and which is the case, they tell a most wonderful story, is "Man They Could Not Hang", which opened a two-day run yesterday at the Capitol Theatre.

The story, founded on facts, and told in the simple language of John Lee himself carried all the greater appeal to the audience.

It is one of the strangest in criminal annals and one of the great present day mysteries that has never been solved. According to Scotland Yard, John Lee, the man whose life the state made three unsuccessful attempts to take, lives today in seclusion, but for obvious reasons does not want his whereabouts known.

Of course there is a love story. It centres around a woman's devotion for the man she believes innocent of the crime he is accused of, and her patient waiting until the grim pangs opened for him after 23 years.

Previous to the showing of the film the more intimate details of the famous case are recounted by Mr. W. Leonard Howe, who recently visited the locality and gained first hand knowledge of its remarkable details. Mr. Howe's graphic story is most interesting.

"The Story of John Lee" is certainly a picture worth seeing and few who do see it will fail to wipe a tear from their eyes as the wonderful and pathetic story is unfolded. It is being shown at popular prices.

Tremaine Travelogue

In addition there is an interesting travelogue that depicts the beauties of Tasmania. Screen Snapshots gives one a close up of the stars and stars' children during a youngster's birthday party. Their proud mothers and fathers are also seen off the set. A comedy dealing with the laugh-provoking Polly Moran as the complainant in a suit against an elderly gentleman firm furnishes the bulk of the fun.

Friday will open a two day engagement of Richard Barthelmess' latest starring success, "I Hours to Kill" in which the popular player is ably supported by Gertrude Michael, Lee Marvien and Roscoe Karns. On Saturday an added feature attraction will be Bob Steele in "Texas Buddies".

AT THE ELLIS

"Dr. Socrates"

"Harvard Babies" and Thrills Blend in Two-Feature Program

Paul Muni will be seen on the screen of the Ellis Theatre tonight and Friday, matinee and evening in the latest starring vehicle, "Dr. Socrates", a picture replete with thrills and excitement. There are also twilight trials for ruthless bank robbers and killers, their battles with the police and their ultimate capture by government agents after a fierce fight in the bandit strongbold.

But the picture is far more than melodrama. The exciting episodes form the background for a remarkable character study and a most unusual romance.

"Dr. Socrates" is the colorful story of a famous surgeon whose nerve has been broken through the loss of his fiancee who died from an operation he himself has performed. He shuts himself in a small town, a failure with all hope lost, not even caring to live.

His redemption comes through the love of an innocent young girl, whom he frames as the leader of a gang that has kidnapped her, forcing death blow in his self-stronghold after informing secret service men of their hide-out. Paul Muni in this picture is Dr. Socrates, disbegged as ironically by a sneering bandit, a picture worth seeing and few who do see it will fail to wipe a tear from their eyes as the wonderful and pathetic story is unfolded. It is being shown at popular prices.

Also showing on the same program is a two-reel comedy with Thelma Todd and Patsy Kelly as the principals, entitled "Harvard Babies". The exciting episode will be shown on the same program.

"RIDE 'EM COWBOY" IF YOU CAN STAY ON!

The canlandercous contortions of ing a hard fall to the ignomy of several horsehides full of four-footed dynamite gave the candid cameraman some thrilling moments at the World Series Rodeo in Madison Square Garden, New York. The event headed for a fall next week's champion broncho busters of both arms were bounced and tossed all over the arena, always preferring the men in holding her saddle.

TAP GAP

By THAYER WALDO

Bennie sat his lips in a VEY firm line and resolutely kept his eyes upon the ledger. Through the open window came the occasional tinkle of a piano and the rhythmic click of dancing feet ashore. Merely by raising his head Bennie could have looked across the narrow court directly into the room whence all those sounds. He could have seen Beth Hayward, with Mercer Neale's nimble fingers skipping over it, and herself dipping to and fro as Beth tapped upon the platform.

Now it must not be assumed that this self-denial was painful. Bennie's conscientious regard for duty with him. To be frank, Bennie rather heartily despised his job and on most occasions he endeavored to neglect it for diversion. Ordinarily, nothing could have been so pleasantly diverting to him as Beth dance, even from this distance and with the fore-shortened view. But today there existed most unusual, not to say unhappy, circumstances; Beth was dancing with the coin.

It had all happened out of a clear sky. For almost a year they had gone together with never a quarrel. And in the past few months plans for marriage had become a frequent topic between the pair. Indeed as Bennie completed his study of wireless he looked for a government position waiting. Perhaps he would be sent to some remotest spot and Beth would go with him as his wife. Lately they had even been figuring the time in months, and with Bennie's help Bennie was rapidly acquiring an expert knowledge of the subject. But now—well, that was just a shattered dream—their romance irreparably ruined.

Bennie found a sort of bitter satisfaction in the thought of its finality. They were, he told himself with as much conviction as he could at if they had never met. Both could go her own sweet way, and it had her right into the arms of that-that rat, Morrie Neal—why, all right. He, Bennie didn't care a snap. She had had her chance last night to choose and she had said—

"Bennie Jackson, you're the meanest, most unjealous fellow I ever knew. And of course I'm going to keep on taking the lessons Mr. Neal's giving me. What's wrong with that?"

So Bennie had picked up his cap and stalked out of her apartment very coldly. He wasn't the kind to let a girl see that she hurt him. Maybe Beth had forgotten about the treasurer's office, right next door to the dance director's, and that Bennie would be there several times each day to return accounts to the safe.

Well, that was what she wanted, she certainly could have it without any more interference from him. He was going to finish his wireless studies in a hurry, and see as far away as possible from Zenith studio and Hollywood and Beth Millard. He reached in the desk drawer for the little manual he always kept there, determined to spend a few minutes reviewing code.

As he took it out, his eye strayed at in one fleeting glance to the window opposite. Immediately they riveted there; he sat upright, tense and startled. The shade was being pulled down over the lower half of the window. He just had time for a glimpse of a man's hand on the cord; then it was completely drawn and Bennie was staring at a blank buff square.

The music and the clacking tap of feet had ceased. Invulnerable, Bennie's teeth came hard together and he felt a rush of hot blood mounting to his cheeks. He stood up and started to turn away.

At that moment the sound of the piano was resumed, Bennie halted in his tracks, amazed. Yes, there could be no doubt about it; now he even heard Beth's shoes again. He faced around, irresolute and wondering.

Suddenly he stiffened, listening with renewed intensity. The next instant he had leaped to the phone and was frantically pounding the switch.

"Give me the studio police — quick!"

Two minutes later four men with drawn revolvers preceded Bennie on the run into Morrie Neal's office. Neal sat at the piano, his face taut and strained; Beth was still tapping feverishly.

The door at the far side stood open. The studio policemen rushed across through it. There came a yell, a string of oaths, a sound of heavy scuffling—and the thing was all over. The four uniformed men emerged, securely grappling two others whose looks revealed their profession.

Beth ran into Bennie's arms and clung there, crying.

"Oh, darling, you're wonderful! I was so afraid!"

The treasurer of Zenith Studio came out of his office mopping his brow with a silk handkerchief and gripped Bennie's hand warmly.

"You're a real hero, my boy!" he exclaimed; "but I don't understand —I don't see how you knew! Why, these thugs made a fool of me! Millard here go on with their practicing and told the rest of us they'd shoot the first one who let out a peep!"

Bennie grinned down into Beth's upturned adoring face.

"Here's where the credit goes," he replied, "if she hadn't remembered how to tap out a message in Morse code I'd have been half a mile from here by now, thinking she didn't love me!"

OBSCURE MAN IS MOST INFLUENTIAL

Austrian-Born Felix Frankfurter Now Deal Creator

Washington, Oct. 31—(AP)—Upon a quiet little man, born in the Vienna of the Hapsburgs, the force of a new economic era swung the glare of an unwelcome spotlight.

Felix Frankfurter, unofficial adviser to President Roosevelt, in the words of General Hugh Johnson, is "the most influential single individual in the United States." Other new deal critics have echoed his statements.

Frankfurter, his friends say, chuckles at such assertions, considers them extravagances, declines to make public reply, and, clinging to his obscurity, goes quietly about his work of developing legal intellects at Harvard and helping Mr. Roosevelt solve new deal problems.

Scores of persons upon whom he has left the imprint of his personality and his liberal economic and political philosophies have emerged from the Frankfurter classrooms to take active service of the government. Several hold places of influence.

At least three major pieces of new deal legislation—the truth in securities Act of 1933, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and the Public Utilities Act—stemmed at least indirectly from him through his contributions to the new deal personnel.

His association with Mr. Roosevelt began when both were supporting the presidential candidacy of Alfred E. Smith and Roosevelt was the Democratic nominee for governor of New York. They recognized in each other men whose fundamental economic beliefs followed the same general channels. Once in the White House, Mr. Roosevelt turned to his new deal friend for them to place in numerous key victory and administrative posts.
